Mr. Sackville: There were two deaths in 1994—the latest year for which data are available—in which the cause of death was stated as an allergic reaction to nuts.

The Office of Population Censuses and Surveys has no record of any specific mention of peanuts appearing on any death certificate during this period.

Bed Closures

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what evidence his Department has of whether a halt to bed closures in London is necessary. [41260]

Mr. Malone: Developments in health care, such as day surgery, non-invasive treatment and improved drug therapies, mean that more patients are being treated with fewer beds. London health authorities are responsible for planning the level of provision to meet patients' needs.

Community Psychiatric Nurses

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many community psychiatric nurses there are (a) in total and (b) per head of population in each health authority area. [41410]

Mr. Bowis: I will write to the hon. Member.

Deregulation

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the rules and regulations he proposes to repeal or amend by means of a reference to the Deregulation Committee before the end of 1995; and if he will make a statement. [41533]

Mr. Sackville: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster gave him today.

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what regulations his Department proposes to repeal by the end of 1995; if he proposes to conduct a compliance cost assessment on each regulation repealed; and what is the estimated cost of undertaking a compliance cost assessment to assess the advantages or disadvantages of such a repeal. [41555]

Mr. Sackville: By the end of 1995, we expect to amend three regulations covering exemptions from clinical trials, hospices and registration of mother and baby homes. We are also consulting on a number of proposals for deregulation including those which will repeal unnecessary regulations on imported food.

The requirement to carry out a compliance cost assessment applies to regulations which impose additional burdens on business while the programme of repeals and amendments is concerned with reducing burdens.

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the estimated saving to the Exchequer of the repeal of each rule and regulation which has so far been the subject of a reference to the Deregulation Committee from his Department; and in how many cases a compliance cost assessment has been carried out. [41534]

Mr. Sackville: My Department has not yet laid any draft orders before the Committee.

NHS Trusts

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list all mergers that have taken place between trusts, indicating the reason given for each merger. [41428]

Mr. Malone: Mergers have taken place between the following national health service trusts:

Guy's Hospital (formerly part of Guy's and Lewisham NHS Trust) with St. Thomas's Hospital NHS trust;

Harrow Community Health Services NHS trust with Hillingdon Community Health NHS trust;

Homewood NHS trust with Weybourne Community NHS trust;

Royal Liverpool University Hospital NHS trust with Broadgreen Hospital NHS trust;

West Dorset Community Health NHS trust with West Dorset Mental Health NHS trust;

Wolverley NHS trust with North Warwickshire NHS trust.

The main reason for any trust merger is to improve patient care. Further information on the reasons for the above trust mergers may be obtained from the individual trusts.

GP Lists

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many patients were deregistered by general practitioners in each of the last 10 years in each family health services authority and in total, at the request of the general practitioner; and if he will list whether reasons were given and whether the general practitioner was a fundholder or not. [41492]

Mr. Malone: I refer the right hon. Member to the reply I gave my hon. Friend the Member for Castle Point (Dr. Spink) on 2 November, column 457. The fundholding status of the general practitioner is not separately identified.

Mrs Beckett: To ask the Secretary for Health what consideration has been given to making it a condition of the striking off of a patient by the general practitioner that an explanation is given. [41479]

Mr. Malone: I refer the right hon. Member to the reply I gave the hon. Member for Tooting (Mr. Cox) on 29 June, Official Report, column 789.

GP Fundholders

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the Secretary for Health what is his latest evidence on whether there are different levels of service to patients of fundholders and others. [41573]

Mr. Malone: Every independent study of the fundholding scheme, from the National Audit Office to the Office of Economic Co-operation and Development, has found that fundholding has brought real benefits to patients including reduced waiting times and improved access to services; this has had the effect of driving standards up for all patients.

Personal Social Services

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary for Health what has been the level of spending on personal social services in each year since 1992–93 in respect of (a) the elderly, (b) children, (c) learning disabilities, (d) young physically disabled, (e) mentally ill and (f) others. [41414]

Mr. Bowis: Local authority net expenditure on services for the personal social services client groups from 1990–91 to 1993–94, the latest year for which information is available, is given in table 7.6, page 116 of health and personal social services statistics for England 1995, copies of which are available in the Library.

Domiciliary Care

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary for Health what information his Department maintains about failure rates among private sector domiciliary nursing or residential care providers. [41412]

Mr. Bowis: Information about failure rates in any sector is not collected by the Department.

Market Testing

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what has been the expenditure on the introduction and implementation of market testing in each of the last five years. [41571]

Mr. Sackville: Detailed information on market-testing costs since the Government's competing for quality programme began in 1992 can be found in the "Market Testing Bulletin—Special Report" dated 9 January 1995. Copies of the bulletin are available in the Library.

Nursing Home Fees

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what would be the level of the present £8,000 capital disregard for nursing home fees if it had been uprated by the rate of inflation since its introduction. [41430]

Mr. Bowis: Since its introduction in April 1993, it would have increased to £8,478 in April 1995.

Population Statistics

Mr. Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 23 October, Official Report, column 422, when he expects to be in a position to release the mid-1994 population estimates together with the corresponding 1995 electorate figures. [41304]

Mr. Sackville: Shortly.

Financial Reserves

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if he will itemise the financial reserves of each (a) trust and (b) health authority in each of the last three years for which figures are available; [41427]

(2) what financial reserves have been held (a) by trusts and (b) by health authorities in each region in each of the last three years. [41419]

Mr. Sackville: Information from central returns will be placed in the Library.

Community Care

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what level of per capita spending on community care services is undertaken in each local area of England. [41411]

Mr. Bowis: I refer the hon. Member to key indicators of local authority social services 1995, a copy of which is available in the Library.

Hospital Readmissions

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what information his Department maintains on hospital readmission rates (a) by health authority and (b) by trust. [41429]

Mr. Sackville: None.

NHS Patients

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many patients have refused to be discharged from NHS care to a nursing or residential home (a) nationally, (b) regionally and (c) by health authority area since February 1995, indicating where patients have subsequently been placed. [41413]

Mr. Bowis: This information is not collected centrally.

Continuing Care

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many NHS continuing care beds have been available in each (a) region and (b) district in each of the last five years for which figures are available; [41423]

(2) how many (a) NHS and (b) private respite care beds were available (i) by region and (ii) by health authority in each of the last five years for which figures are available. [41405]

Mr. Bowis: Information collected from the national health service is published in "Bed Availability for England", copies of which are available in the Library. Information from the independent sector does not identify the purpose for which beds are provided.

Psychiatric Beds

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many acute psychiatric beds are available (a) in total and (b) per head of population in each health authority area. [41409]

Mr Bowis: The information available centrally is shown in the table and provides the average daily number of available beds for short stay mental illness in 1993–94 and beds per 100,000 population by former English regional health authority.

Average daily number of available beds—short stay mental illness—all ages—1993–94

	Beds[1]	Beds per 100,000
Northern	1,467	47.28
Yorkshire	1,743	47.00
Trent	1,900	41.75
East Anglian	850	40.57
North West Thames	1,607	45.64
North East Thames	1,701	44.61
South East Thames	1,243	33.43
South West Thames	1,296	43.21
Wessex	1,153	36.56
Oxford	930	35.86
South Western	1,421	42.65
West Midlands	2,110	39.88
Mersey	1,273	52.75
Northern Western	2,069	51.32
England	21,293	43.87

Note:

Trusts in the regions listed do not provide services exclusively for the populations of those regions. Overall figures for short stay psychiatric beds have remained stable since 1988.

South and West Regional Health Authority

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will place in the Library a copy of the South and West regional health authority's submission to the Ministry of Defence "Front Line First" review. [41478]

Mr. Sackville: This is a matter for the South and West regional health authority. The right hon. Member may wish to contact Ms Rennie Fritchie, chair of the authority, for details.

Winchester and Eastleigh Healthcare NHS Trust

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what evidence his Department has on whether Winchester and Eastleigh Healthcare national health service trust has an explicit policy of giving preference to patients from general practitioner fundholders. [41572]

Mr. Malone: None.

Locum Medical Staff

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what information his Department maintains on the number and costs of using locum medical staff. [41431]

Mr. Malone: The available information is shown in the table.

Hospital, Public Health Medicine and Community Health Service Medical Staff: England 30 September 1994—Whole-time equivalent.

	Number
All permanent paid and honorary staff	47,030
Locum staff	2,740
Locums as a percentage of all staff	5.8

Information on costs of using locum medical staff is not available centrally.

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list all private finance initiative proposals for the development of national health service hospitals; and if he will make a statement. [41622]

Mr. Sackville: I refer the hon. and learned Member to the reply that I gave the hon. Member for Sheffield, Attercliffe (Mr. Betts) on 28 June, Official Report, column 690.

Since that reply, three further schemes with a capital value over £1 million have been approved under the private finance initiative, as follows:

(1) NHS-wide clearing service; for exchange of activity data to support NHS contracts and to provide nationally required statistics. Capital value approximately £5.5 million.

(2) Royal Berkshire and Battle NHS trust; for the provision of car parks, office accommodation, private patient wing, sympathetic retail outlets and leisure centre at a capital value of approximately £15 million.

(3) Aintree Hospitals NHS trust; for the provision of a patient hotel conference and dining facility at a capital value of approximately £2.7 million.

Health Authority Cash Limits

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what provisions are made for local health commissioning (a) when health authorities face shortfalls in their budget and general practitioner fundholders have unspent allocations; and if he will make a statement. [41623]

Mr. Sackville: It is for regional health authorities to manage overall spending within the regional cash limit set by the national health service executive. Regional health authorities set cash limits for health authorities and agree budgets for general practice fundholders. They are therefore responsible for managing any over or underspends within the overall resources available to them.

Community Health Councils

Mr. Chris Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the minimum number of hours per week the office of a community health council must be open to the public in order to comply with the Community Health Councils (Access to Information) Act 1988. [41719]

Mr. Malone: The Community Health Council (Access to Information) Act 1988 does not place any duty on community health councils in respect of minimum opening hours.

Secure Unit Places

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what were the numbers of secure places (beds) available on 1 January and 1 July for each year from 1985 to 1995 (a) for children and young people and (b) for children and young people aged 15 and 16 years, in each case indicating the number available (i) for boys, (ii) for girls, (iii) for both and (iv) in total; [41334]

(2) what were the total numbers of local authority secure places (beds) available for holding children and young people on 1 January and 1 July in each year since 1985. [41335]

Mr. Bowis: The information available centrally is contained in "Children accommodated in secure units, year ending 31 March 19XX".

Employment of Children

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to bring the Employment of Children Act 1973 into effect; and if he will make a statement on the Government's policy towards implementation of that Act. [41686]

Mr. Bowis: A comprehensive framework for the protection of children at work already exists. I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave my hon. Friend the Member for Gillingham (Mr. Couchman) on 30 October, Official Report, columns 42–43, detailing my recently announced proposals for some minor improvements to that system.

Asylum Seekers

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what responsibility falls to local authorities for the care of asylum seekers' children who have no other means of support; and if he will make a statement. [41828]

Mr. Bowis: The responsibility that falls to local authorities for the care of asylum seekers' children is the same responsibility they have for any other children who may be "in need" as set out in section 17 of the Children Act 1989.

NHS Management Numbers and Costs

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list for each year sine 1989 the number and cost of general and senior managers in the NHS by region and total. [39385]

Mr. Malone [holding answer 26 October 1995]: I refer the right hon. Member to the reply my hon. Friend the Under-Secretary of State gave the hon. Member for Darlington (Mr. Milburn) on 21 July 1994—Official Report, columns 591–92, and to the replies I gave the hon. Member for Darlington (Mr. Milburn) on 24 October 1994, Official Report, column 451, on 31 October 1994, Official Report, columns 902–3, on 3 November 1994, Official Report, column 1267, and on 18 July, Official Report, columns 1152–53.

Information on the number of general and senior managers at 30 September 1994 is shown in the table. Information on costs for 1994–95 is not yet available.

NHS Priority Setting

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the participants, and the organisations that they represented, who attended the recent conference initiated by his Department, the Royal College of Physicians and the British Medical Association in respect of establishing a national framework for rationing national health service treatment; if he will send the hon. Member for Don Valley a copy of the letter since circulated to participants at the conference by Mr. Alasdair Liddel, giving his assessment of the conference; and if he will make a statement. [41007]

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what (a) meetings and (b) other consultations he has had with health authorities and health commissions with regard to the introduction of a national framework for health care rationing in the NHS; and if he will make a statement; [40923]

(2) what (a) meetings and (b) other consultations he has had with any organisations representing the medical profession with regard to the introduction of a national framework for health care rationing in the NHS; and if he will make a statement; [40924]

(3) what studies his Department has undertaken regarding the introduction of a national framework for health care rationing in the NHS; [40925]

(4) what plans he has to introduce a national framework of rationing in the NHS; [40926]

(5) what report he has received about the meeting in September initiated by the NHS executive about a national framework for the rationing of health care in the NHS; who proposed that the meeting should take place; if he will list those present; if he will make available the report of the meeting; and if he will make a statement; [40927]

(6) what plans he has to hold meetings to discuss national rationing of health care in the NHS; who will participate; and if he will publish the reports of those meetings. [40928]

Mr. Malone [holding answer 2 November 1995]: There are no plans to introduce a national framework for rationing services and no work has taken place to prepare such a framework. In their response earlier this year to the Health Select Committee on priority setting, Cm 2826, the Government set out their approach to priority setting at three levels, in the following terms:

> Ministers, advised by the Department of Health, set out the framework of national priorities and targets for improvement. This is done through annual priorities and planning guidance to the NHS and through important policies such as "The Health of the Nation" White Paper and the patient's charter;
> Health authorities and GP fundholders assess the needs of the people they serve and decide what treatments and services are required to meet those needs. This process should be informed by proper consultation with the public;
>
> Individual clinicians decide the most clinically appropriate treatment and clinical priority for each patient, based on their assessment of that patient's needs.

Earlier this year, officials in the NHS executive agreed with leaders of the medical profession and senior NHS managers that it would be helpful to meet together to discuss priority setting issues. This meeting took place on 28 September 1995 and involved a wide range of interests including patients' representatives. Views were exchanged on a personal and non-attributable basis. The note sent to participants summarising the discussion was not intended as a public document and to publish the letter would break the undertaking given to the participants.

There was general consensus at the meeting that:

> setting priorities was a necessary part of life in any health care system
>
> the role of Ministers and the NHS executive in setting a small number of national priorities was acceptable with no dissent about the current set of priorities.
>
> individual clinicians want to be free to take decisions about individual patients, but do not want to be left taking responsibility in isolation for difficult decisions
> there is scope for spreading good practice in approaches to priority-setting at local (health authority) level.

NHS Expenditure

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the spending per head of population on (a) primary care and (b) secondary care in (i) inner London, (ii) outer London, (iii) England and (iv) by each family health services authority in each of the last three years for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement on variations in amounts. [40793]

Mr. Sackville [holding answer 1 November 1995]: Primary care has been interpreted as family health services and per capita spend is for family health services authorities. Secondary care has been interpreted as hospital and community health services and per capita spend is for district health authorities.

For the per capita spend for DHAs and FHSAs for 1991–92, 1992–93 and 1993–94, I refer the right hon. Member to my reply to the hon. Member for Darlington (Mr. Milburn) on 12 December 1994, Official Report, column 465, and to the reply the then Minister for Health, my right hon. Friend the Member for Peterborough (Dr. Mawhinney) gave him on 26 May 1994, Official Report, column 305.

The total FHSA and DHA per capita spend for England for 1991–92, 1992–93 and 1993–94 is shown in the table.

	1991–92 £	1992–93 £	1993–94 £
England DHA per capita spend	355	376	370
England FHSA per capita spend	115	132	153
Total DHA and FHSA per capita spend	470	508	523

Note:

Comparisons of these figures should be treated with caution as not all expenditure covered arises from population activities and crude populations do not take into account difference in age structure or relative health needs across the country. In addition, FHSA per capita spend includes GP fundholder expenditure on both primary and secondary care services and this will vary with the distribution of GP fundholders.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Assisted Places Scheme

Mr. Hutton: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many pupils (a) in each local education authority band and (b) in each region received support under the assisted places scheme in each of the past five years. [40938]

Mrs. Gillan: Information on the place of residence of pupils in the assisted places scheme is not collected centrally. Many schools serve wide catchment areas and may offer places to pupils from outside the local authority area in which they are situated. I refer the hon. Member to the reply my hon. Friend the Member for Hornchurch (Mr. Squire) gave to the hon. Member for Gloucester (Mr. French) on 3 July, Official Report, columns 35–37, containing information on the numbers of assisted place holders at schools situated within each local authority area for the academic year 1994–95. Information for earlier years is not readily available.

The numbers of assisted place holders within each region for each of the last five years are given in the table:

Assisted places scheme

Region	Numbers of assisted pupils in academic year 1990–91	1991–92	1992–93	1993–94	1994–95

South East	4,193	4,403	4,762	4,891	5,008
Greater London	4,912	5,010	5,170	5,266	5,348

Figures relate to England only.

Cornish Language

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what is her Department's assessment of the current level of the teaching of the Cornish language; and what measures she proposes to promote the teaching of the Cornish language. [40552]

Mr. Robin Squire: My right hon. Friend does not collect information on the teaching of Cornish. She has no proposals to promote Cornish teaching: it is for schools and other education establishments to decide what subjects to teach once they have met the requirements of the national curriculum and other statutory requirements.

Primary Schools

Sir Geoffrey Johnson Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what action she is taking to raise standards in primary schools. [40553]

Mrs. Gillan: The national curriculum and its assessment, national tests, regular inspections, improvements to teacher training and our improving schools programme all act to raise standards in primary schools. The chief inspector of schools has confirmed that our reforms are improving the quality of education.

Social Affairs Council

Mr. Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment, pursuant to her answer to the hon. Member for Bury St. Edmunds (Mr. Spring) of 19 October, Official Report, column 379, what was the voting record of each member state on items agreed at the meeting of the European Community's Social Affairs Council held on 5 October; and if she will make it her practice to list all votes, including where there have been no votes, in the future. [41089]

Mr. Forth: There were no votes taken at the Council. The resolutions on the image of men and women in the media, the fight against racism and xenophobia, and co-operation with third countries in the field of youth were adopted unanimously, without discussion.

Grant-maintained Status

Mr. Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many "Going GM" conferences her Department has organised; at what cost; and how many more are planned. [41087]

Mr. Robin Squire: The Department has organised 54 "Going GM" conferences at a total cost of around £720,000. We have firm plans to hold another nine between now and February 1996. Conferences this term have been over-subscribed and we are reviewing how to meet the increased demand for places.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will list for each education authority the number of (a) voluntary-aided, (b) voluntary-controlled, (c) special agreement, (d) county and (e) grant-maintained schools; in each case what is the total number of pupils and the number in each category in (a) the primary sector and (b) the secondary sector; and what is the number of schools in England in each category. [41299]

Mr. Squire: I shall place the information in the Library.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will list the number of parental ballots on grant-maintained status in (a) voluntary-aided, (b) voluntary-controlled, (c) special agreement and (d) county schools (i) between 1 September 1993 and 31 August 1994 and (ii) between 1 September 1994 and 31 August 1995; and in each case, how many ballots have resulted in a majority of parent voting (1) in favour of and (2) against grant-maintained status. [41300]

Mr. Squire: The information requested is set out in the table:

Number of parental ballots of grant-maintained status

	Number of ballots	"Yes" ballots	"No" ballots
(i) 1 September 1993 to 31 August 1994
(a) Voluntary aided	59	31	28
(b) Voluntary controlled	25	16	9
(c) Special agreement	1	1	0
(d) County	184	109	75
(ii) 1 September 1994 to 31 August 1995
(a) Voluntary aided	15	6	9
(b) Voluntary controlled	13	10	3
(c) Special agreement	0	0	0

Note:

"Yes" ballots are those where a majority of parents voted in favour of seeking grant-maintained status, and "No" ballots are those where a majority voted against. Initial ballots have been disregarded where a second ballot was required because of low turnout or the Secretary of State having declared a ballot void.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what has been the total number of parents voting (i) in favour of and (ii) against grant-maintained status in ballots between (a) 1 September 1992 and 31 August 1993 (b) 1 September 1993 and 31 August 1994 and (c) 1 September 1994 and 31 August 1995. [41301]

Mr. Squire: The information requested is set out in the table:

Number of parents voting in grant-maintained ballots

	(a) 1 September 1992 to 31 August 1993	(b) 1 September 1993 to 31 August 1994	(c) 1 September 1994 to 31 August 1995
(i) Parents voting in favour of GM status	251,250	63,703	17,322
(ii) Parents voting against GM status (including spoilt papers)	142,593	57,078	18,087

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what estimate she has made of the full-year cost in (a) transitional grant and (b) formula allocation of capital grant in the event of all the present voluntary aided schools becoming grant-maintained during the same financial year. [41303]

Mrs. Gillan: It is for the Funding Agency for Schools to determine the balance between the level of formula allocation and other forms of capital grant. The cost in (a) transitional grant and (b) formula allocation becoming grant-maintained during the same financial year will depend on levels of grant prevailing at the time.

Voluntary-aided Schools

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what has been (a) the level of capital expenditure and (b) the governor's share of capital expenditure in voluntary-aided schools in each of the last three years for which figures are available. [41302]

Mrs. Gillan: The level of capital expenditure over the past three years has been as follows:

£ thousands

	1992–93	1993–94	1994–95
(a) Total Governors' expenditure eligible for grant on which grant was paid	95,681	94,104	89,139
(b) —of which Governors' Contribution	14,352	14,116	13,371

Notes:

1. Governors' contribution based on 15 per cent. of approved building work costs. Information on additional annual expenditure incurred by governors, not approved for grant assistance, on cash-limited and off-programme work, is not held centrally.
2. Governors' contribution includes expenditure supported by Central Government loans.
3. The figures do not include local authority capital expenditure at aided schools, information on which is not held centrally.
4. The figures do not include expenditure on repairs.

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what time scale has been allowed for responses to her Department's consultation paper on self-government for voluntary-aided schools; and what factors underlay her Department's rejection of the time scale periods recommended in (a) the Department of Environment publication "Action for Central Government" and (b) her Department's document on efficient scrutiny into the administrative burdens on schools. [41714]

Mr. Robin Squire: The consultation paper was published on 27 October with a request for responses by 24 November 1995. As the paper made clear, my right hon. Friend intends to consider the possibility of legislation in the coming parliamentary Session in the light of responses. This necessitates an unusually short consultation period, for which an apology was given in the letter to consultees accompanying the paper.

Mr. Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans she has to publish in full responses to her Department's consultation paper on self-government for voluntary-aided schools and if she will make a statement. [41716]

Mr. Squire: A summary of responses will be made available on request, and a copy will be placed in the Library. Wider access to the responses themselves will be subject to consultees' consent.

Mr. Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment on what dates copies of her Department's consultation paper on self-government for voluntary-aided schools were sent to (a) voluntary-aided schools, (b) grant-maintained former VA schools, (c) local authority associations and (d) local education authorities. [41717]

Mr. Squire: The consultation paper was published on 27 October 1995. Some 4,400 copies were dispatched on that day and on the following two working days.

Deregulation

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will list the rules and regulations she proposes to repeal or amend by means of a reference to the Deregulation Committee before the end of 1995; and if she will make a statement. [41529]

Mr. Forth: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply given earlier by my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster.

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what regulations her Department proposes to repeal by the end of 1995; if she proposes to conduct a cost compliance assessment on each regulation repealed; and what is the estimated cost of undertaking a cost compliance assessment to assess the advantages or disadvantages of such a repeal. [41553]

Mr. Forth: There are no plans to repeal any regulations by the end of 1995.

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what is the estimated saving to the Exchequer by the repeal of each rule and regulation which has so far been the subject of a reference to the Deregulation Committee from her Department; and in how many cases a cost compliance assessment has been carried out. [41530]

Mr. Forth: My right hon. Friend has laid one draft deregulation proposal to date. The draft order, which speeds up the process by which schools may change their session times, will not lead to any savings to the Exchequer.

Community Action Scheme

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many people are on the community action scheme. [41833]

Mr. Forth: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Employment Service agency under its chief executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from M. E. G. Fogden to Mr. Stephen Byers, dated 6 November 1995:

The Secretary of State has asked me to respond to your question about the number of people presently on the Community Action programme.

At the end of September 1995 there were 12,900 people on Community Action.

I hope this is helpful.

Accelerated Modern Apprenticeships

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many people are undertaking accelerated modern apprenticeships; and how many to date have completed such a course. [41832]

Mr. Paice: Reliable information on the number in training or completing accelerated modern apprenticeships is not available at present.

Youth Training

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what was the number of 16 and 17-year-olds on youth training in each region in August 1994 and August 1995. [41834]

Mr. Paice: The number on youth training in each region is given in the table. Information has been given for July 1995, the latest available month. It is not possible to provide figures for those aged 16 and 17 on youth training. Therefore, the table covers all those on youth training.

Youth training Great Britain and regions number in training

Training Programmes

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many people were on training for work programmes in each month of 1995. [41830]

Mr. Paice: Information on the number on training for work up to July 1995, the latest month for which figures are available, is given in the table.

Training for work—Great Britain 1995

Internet

Mr. French: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what representations she has received about the regulation of material available to schoolchildren on the Internet. [41820]

Mr. Robin Squire: The Department has received a number of comments on this issue in response to the Education Department's consultation paper "Superhighways for Education". A summary of the responses will be published later this month.

Mr. French: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans she has to improve the regulation of material available in schools on the Internet. [41814]

Mr. Squire: The National Council for Educational Technology earlier this year published advice for teachers and parents on access to computers and on-line communications. These issues were also covered in the Education Department's consultation paper "Superhighways for Education". The outcomes of this consultation will be announced shortly.

Mr. French: To ask the Secretary of State for Educational and Employment what guidelines currently exist to restrict the material made available to schoolchildren on the Internet. [41813]

Mr. Squire: The National Council for Educational Technology has published guidance for schools and colleges on the use of the Internet, including considerations relating to access to undesirable materials. The NCET has also published guidance for teachers and parents on these issues.

Pre-School Learning Alliance

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what annual grant has been made by her Department to the Pre-School Learning Alliance or to its predecessor the Pre-School Playgrounds Association in each year since 1990; for what purpose the grant is intended; and what plans she has for the continuance of such a grant for such purposes once plans for universal nursery vouchers are fully implemented. [41629]

Mr. Robin Squire: Grants paid by the Department since 1990–91 are as shown in the table. They support the training of playgroup staff, and are reviewed annually. No decisions have been taken about the level of grant from 1997–98, when the voucher scheme is to be implemented fully.

Financial year	£ thousands
1990–91	179
1991–92	327.5
1992–93	649.5
1993–94	887
1994–95	1,195
1995–96	1,195

Mr. Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans she has to implement the recommendations of the study commissioned by her Department and undertaken in 1994 into the use of the grant made by her Department to the Pre-School Learning Alliance. [41630]

Mr. Squire: The independent review into the use of the Pre-School Playgroups Association of its grant from the Department in support of staff training was undertaken in 1993. The review found that the PPA made effective use of its grant and obtained value for money. The review's findings were taken into account by the Department in determining its grant to the PPA in 1994–95, which increased by 35 per cent. over the preceding year.

Nursery Vouchers

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what estimates she has made of the impact of the proposed nursery voucher scheme on nursery provision for three-year-olds; and if she will make a statement. [41707]

Mr. Robin Squire: The voucher scheme should not affect existing places for three-year-olds. The proposed funding mechanism will allow local authorities and other providers to continue to spend on such places as they judge appropriate.

Modern Apprenticeship Scheme

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many people are on the modern apprenticeship scheme. [41831]

Mr. Paice: Modern apprenticeship prototypes started in September 1994. Modern apprenticeships became available in all TEC areas in September 1995. An early estimate of numbers of modern apprenticeships in September 1995 is 4,000.

WALES

Primary Care

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is the spending per head of population on primary care (a) in the health authority areas and (b) in total; if he will list the figures for secondary care; and if he will make a statement on variations in amounts. [40812]

Mr. Richards [holding answer 1 November 1995]: The information requested is set out as follows:

	Expenditure in 1994–95 £000s	Population	Spending by FHSAs per head of population £
Primary care—provision of health care by FHSAs
Clwyd	79,084	417,400	189
Dyfed	70,499	352,300	200
Gwent	80,416	452,300	178
Gwynedd	45,647	240,400	190
Mid Glamorgan	92,136	544,600	169
Powys	26,806	120,200	223
South Glamorgan	70,966	414,800	171
West Glamorgan	74,049	371,000	200
Wales	539,603	2,913,000	185
Secondary care—provision of health care by district health authorities
Clwyd	165,505	417,400	404
East Dyfed	101,291	238,700	424
Gwent	192,783	452,300	426

West Glamorgan	155,387	371,000	419
Wales	1,319,361	2,913,000	453

Notes:

1. Primary care is interpreted as expenditure on health care by FHSAs. It includes all GP fundholders' expenditure.
2. Secondary care is interpreted as expenditure on health care by district health authorities.
3. Expenditure are as reported by authorities in their annual accounts for 1994–95.
4. Population data are as reported in 1994 survey (as at 30 June) by the Office of Population Censuses and Surveys.

Class Sizes

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to his answer of 27 October, Official Report, columns 845–6, what plans he has to collate information about the number of children in classes in Wales. [41286]

Mr. Richards [holding answer 3 November 1995]: The annual schools census collects information from primary schools on the number of registered classes by size of class, but not on the precise number of pupils in those classes. Such information is sufficient to monitor trends in the number of larger classes in primary schools and I have no plans at present to collect further information. The census results are published in table 3.06 of "Statistics of Training and Education in Wales: Schools" No. 3 1995, a copy of which is in the Library of the House. From these results, broad estimates can be made of the number of pupils in each class size.

Grants

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales for what grant-giving funds his Department is responsible requiring a private sector contribution, where the use of national lottery funds is not allowed to count towards that private sector portion. [38594]

Mr. Richards: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to him on Tuesday 31 October by my hon. Friend the Minister of State, the Department of National Heritage, Official Report, column 186.

Measles Immunisation

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what plans he has to establish a structured interview programme for families in Wales allegedly suffering from deleterious effects from immunisation against measles. [40647]

Mr. Richards: None. There is already a well-established satisfactory system in place for monitoring adverse reactions to all medicines, including vaccines.

Assisted Places Scheme

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what proportion of pupils on the assisted places scheme received a free place in each year since its operation. [41158]

Mr. Richards: The information requested is as follows:

Assisted places scheme—Wales

Academic year	Total APS pupils	Number of pupils with full free remission	Percentage with full fee remission
1981–82	114	50	44
1982–83	220	96	44
1983–84	318	157	49
1984–85	403	178	44
1985–86	495	202	41
1986–87	580	248	43
1987–88	622	256	41
1988–89	633	240	38
1989–90	631	226	36
1990–91	634	222	35
1991–92	662	252	38
1992–93	700	294	42
1993–94	691	283	41
1994–95	720	318	44

Nursery Schools

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is the average unit cost of providing a nursery place in (a) nursery schools and (b) nursery classes in primary schools; and what are the figures for each local education authority. [41172]

Mr. Richards: Expenditures on nursery and primary schools are not separately identified on local government returns to the Welsh Office so separate unit costs cannot be calculated. Unit costs for nursery and primary schools combined are contained in an education finance bulletin produced by the Welsh Office's training and education intelligence unit. A copy of the bulletin is in the Library of the House.

Temporary and Part-time Staff

Mr. Ian McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many staff are currently employed in his Department and in related agencies on (a) temporary or casual employment contracts and (b) part-time employment contracts, given as an actual figure and as a proportion of the total work force; and what were the corresponding figures for five years ago. [41117]

Mr. Hague: Breakdowns by department and executive agency for 1 April 1995 of the number of permanent staff, the number of casual staff—that is, normally those engaged for a period of up to two years—and of the number of part-time staff are presented in the civil service staff in post summary table for 1 April 1995, a copy of which is in the Library of the House. Estimates on a comparable basis for 1 April 1990 have also been placed in the Library of the House.

Hospices

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is his policy concerning the funding of hospices; and if he will make a statement. [41265]

Mr. Richards: Since 1 April 1995, funds for hospices have been included in the health authority allocations. Authorities will be expected to assess local health needs and commission an appropriate level of palliative care, entering into three-year rolling contracts, where possible.

Creutzfeldt-Jakob Disease

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many cases of Creutzfeldt-Jakob disease have been reported in Wales and if he will make a statement. [41248]

Mr. Richards: Since May 1990, details of suspected cases of Creutzfeldt-Jakob disease in the United Kingdom have been reported to the national CJD surveillance unit in Edinburgh. Suspected cases are classified as definite, probable or possible. During the period May 1990 to October 1995, there were 15 definite, one probable and five possible cases of CJD from Wales.

GP Fundholders

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what percentage of general practitioners in Wales are currently fundholders; and if he will make a statement. [41264]

Mr. Richards: There are 649 general practitioners, some 38 per cent. of all GPs, working in 146 GP fundholding practices in Wales.

Carers

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many (a) male and (b) female carers there are in each county in Wales; and if he will make a statement. [41247]

Mr. Richards: This information was collected for the first time this year as part of the Welsh health survey. Comprehensive results from the survey will be published early in 1996.

Voluntary-aided Schools

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many voluntary-aided schools there are in each of the Welsh counties; and if he will make a statement. [41251]

Mr. Richards: The number of voluntary-aided primary and secondary schools in each local education authority as at January 1995 is shown in the table. Details of school denomination are collected only for primary and secondary schools.

Local Education Authority	Primary schools[1]	Secondary schools[1]
Clwyd	25	3
Dyfed	16	1
Gwent	19	2
Gwynedd	7	—
Mid Glamorgan	16	4
Powys	9	—
South Glamorgan	32	6
West Glamorgan	112	2
Wales	136	18

[1] Includes Voluntary Church in Wales aided and Voluntary Roman Catholic. Provisional data.

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what plans he has to publish a consultation paper on self-government for voluntary-aided schools; and what time period will be allowed for responses to be made. [41715]

Mr. Richards: A bilingual consultation paper was issued on 31 October. Responses are requested by 24 November.

Deregulation

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the rules and regulations he proposes to repeal or amend by means of a reference to the Deregulation Committee before the end of 1995; and if he will make a statement. [41541]

Mr. Hague: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to him today by my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster.

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is the estimated saving to the Exchequer by the repeal of each rule and regulation which has so far been the subject of a reference to the Deregulation Committee from his Department, and in how may cases a compliance cost assessment has been carried out. [41577]

Mr. Hague: My Department has not yet laid any draft orders before the Committee.

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what regulations his Department proposes to repeal by the end of 1995; if he proposes to conduct a compliance cost assessment on each regulation repealed; and what is the estimated cost of undertaking a compliance cost assessment to assess the advantages or disadvantages of such a repeal. [41559]

Mr. Hague: There are no plans to repeal any regulations by the end of 1995.

Continuing and Respite Care

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) how many NHS continuing care beds have been available in each (a) region and (b) district in each of the last five years for which figures are available; [41422]

(2) how many (a) NHS and (b) private respite care beds were available (i) by region and (ii) by health authority in each of the last five years for which figures are available. [41407]

Mr. Richards: Information concerning the number of beds in NHS hospitals is collected centrally on the basis of specialties recognised by the royal colleges. As neither continuing care nor respite care are recognised specialities the information requested is not available for NHS hospitals.

Private and voluntary residential care homes and private nursing homes make returns to the Welsh Office of the numbers of residents who were admitted as short-stay residents. These are defined as persons for whom the home is intended to provide a holiday or temporary care, for example while their relatives or usual carers are on holiday. The most recent figures are shown in the table.

[1] Excluding residents in residential care homes for people with substance misuse and in homes with fewer than four residents in total.

[2] Numbers of short stay residents were not collected for nursing homes before 1991.

NHS Financial Reserves

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) if he will itemise the financial reserves of each (a) trust and (b) health authority in each of the last three years for which figures are available; [41424]

(2) what financial reserves have been held (a) by trusts and (b) by health authorities in each region in each of the last three years. [41417]

Mr. Richards: As the information requested is detailed, I have placed a copy in the Library of the House.

Welsh Language

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how Welsh-speaking medical students are currently undertaking courses leading to a qualification as a general medical practitioner in the university of Wales; and what the figures were in 1990 and 1995. [41486]

Mr. Richards: This information is not held centrally.

Mr. Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what plans he has to increase the number of Welsh-speaking general medical practitioners in Wales. [41485]

Mr. Richards: My right hon. Friend has no jurisdiction in this matter. Recruitment policies are the responsibility of family health services authorities and, in the case of partnerships, the existing doctors in the practice. The distribution of doctors throughout England and Wales is the responsibility of the Medical Practices Committee.

Science Education

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the promotion of science education in Wales. [41624]

Mr. Hague: The basis for action on the promotion of science education in Wales is to be found in the two documents "Science in the National Curriculum" and "A Bright Future: Getting The Best for Every Pupil at School in Wales", copies of which are available in the Library of the House.

Regional Selective Assistance

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is his latest outturn forecast for regional selective assistance offers and expenditure in Wales in 1995–96 and its relationship to planned expenditure. [41783]

Mr. Hague: The latest estimate of the total value of regional selective assistance offers accepted by businesses in Wales during 1995–96 is £60 million. The original voted expenditure for the year was £42.429 million, but subject to parliamentary approval of a supplementary estimate, a further £11.009 million will be made available to meet anticipated additional demand in-year.

Grant is paid in instalments against progress on projects, typically over a period of three to five years, so much of the grant offered in 1995–96 will not fall to be paid until later years.

OSIRIS

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to his answer of 31 October, Official Report, column 231, what is the life of the OSIRIS contract. [41835]

Mr. Hague: The life of the OSIRIS contract is expected to be seven years.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to his answer of 31 October, Official Report, column 231, which firms have tendered for the OSIRIS project; and what is the approximate estimated annual rental payment for the capital, repair and running costs of the system and the duration of the approximate rental period. [41837]

Mr. Hague: The information requested cannot be given as it is commercially confidential.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to his answer of 31 October, Official Report, column 231, on the OSIRIS system, what evaluation he has made of the relative merits of having fewer staff with more personal computers as against the present level of staff with fewer computers; and if he will make a statement. [41836]

Mr. Hague: The requirement for the OSIRIS contract was evaluated on the basis of any given level of staff gaining efficiency by sharing better access to, and usage of, information.

Estatecare Division (Sale)

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales on what date he submitted his proposed advertisement for the sale of the Estatecare division of the Welsh Health Common Services Authority to the European Communities Official Journal. [41839]

Mr. Hague: There is no requirement to advertise the sale in the Official Journal.

NHS Trusts

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to his answer of 30 October, Official Report, columns 101–2, if he will list the procedures for merging trusts or amending their area of coverage; what consultations he has had with the chairmen of the trusts in Wales in relation to mergers and takeovers and if he will make a statement. [41843]

Mr. Hague: Applications from trusts significantly to alter their configuration are subject to public consultation in the normal way. If an application is approved, the existing trust(s) would be dissolved and immediately re-established in line with the approval. I have had no consultations with trust chairmen on this issue.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to his answer of 30 October, Official Report, columns 101–2, if he will list those mixed function trusts which are deemed to cover a different geographical area for different functions. [41841]

Mr. Hague: Trusts are not confined to particular geographical areas for the services they offer. Currently those mixed function trusts which are deemed to cover a different geographical area for different functions are:

Llandough Hospital and Community NHS trust
Rhondda Healthcare NHS trust
Bridgend and District NHS trust
Glan-y-Mor NHS trust
Cardiff Community Healthcare NHS trust
Gwent Community Health NHS trust.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to his answer of 30 October, Official Report, columns 101–2, if he will list for each trust the total money turnover figure estimated for the present financial year and, for those trusts with more than one category at health care provision, the financial turnover in each category. [41840]

Mr. Hague: The estimated operational income of each NHS trust in Wales in 1995–96 is shown in the following table:

£ thousands

NHS Trust	Operational Income
Mid Glamorgan Ambulance	8,330
North Wales Ambulance	12,830

[1] In shadow form. A breakdown of these figures into each category of health care provision is not held centrally.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to his answer of 30 October, Official Report, columns 101-2, what representations he has received in relation to trusts taking over directly managed units; and what consultations he has had with Welsh Association Health Authorities and Trusts in relation to collusion by trusts interested in taking over directly managed units. [41844]

Mr. Hague: Three months' public consultation on applications from Bridgend and District NHS trust and Glan Hafren NHS trust to merge with the Hensol health unit and the Rhymney Valley health unit respectively commenced on 25 September 1995. To date, nine representations have been received. WAHAT has been consulted but has not responded to date.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to his answer of 30 October, Official Report, columns 101-2, if he will list the principal differences between the trusts he has listed as providing community services, either on their own or in combination with acute, and those trusts he has listed as offering community services in combination with mental health services. [41842]

Mr. Hague: Apart from the range of services provided, there is no fundamental difference in the way which trusts are established or managed.

Derwen NHS Trust

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is the geographical area of coverage of the Derwen national health service trust. [41785]

Mr. Hague: Trusts are not confined to particular geographical areas for the services they offer. Currently, the Derwen national health service trust provides mental health/illness and learning disability services for the areas of the new unitary authorities of Cardiganshire and Carmarthenshire, and in-patient psychiatric services for Pembrokeshire.

A-level Students

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many students sat A-level examinations in the summer term 1995 in each secondary school and further education college in Wales. [41684]

Mr. Richards: I intend to publish the information requested in school and college performance booklets later this month. Copies of the booklets will be sent to the hon. Member and further copies will be placed in the Library of the House.

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many students were registered to begin A-level courses in September 1993 in each secondary school and further education college in Wales. [41685]

Mr. Richards: The information requested is not readily available. I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my reply in the Library of the House.

European Structural Funds

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to his answer of 31 October, Official Report, column 230, what consultations he has had with Welsh local authority associations regarding his proposals for (a) elected member and (b) local government officer representation on the monitoring committees of the structural funds. [41838]

Mr. Hague: I shall be meeting the local authority associations next month to discuss their proposals for an economic development strategy for Wales. I understand that the associations will wish to discuss at that meeting various matters concerning the management of the structural funds.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Mortgage Protection Insurance

14. Mr. Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what steps he has taken to monitor the effect on social security recipients of mortgage protection insurance policies. [39698]

Mr. Roger Evans: We continue to monitor the quality, availability and cost of mortgage protection insurance and welcome the developments so far. We are also monitoring the scheme to ensure that an appropriate balance is maintained between public and private provision.

Occupational Pensions

15. Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is his assessment of the current regulatory environment for occupational pensions. [39699]

Mr. Heald: The Pensions Act 1995, to which Royal Assent was given in July, introduces a number of measures which will give greater security and accountability to the occupational pensions sector, including the establishment of the Occupational Pensions Regulatory Authority.

20. Mr. Sumberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what measures he will take to combat fraud in occupational pensions. [39704]

Mr. Heald: The measures in the Pensions Act 1995, which received Royal Assent in July, reflect the Government's commitment to safeguarding the security of occupational pension scheme assets.

Benefits and Taxation

16. Mr. Hain: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans he has to reform the relationship between benefits and taxation. [39700]

Mr. Burt: In 1988 we reformed the relationship between income-related benefits and tax to reduce the incidence of high marginal tax rates. In line with the Government's long-standing policy that benefits which replace earnings should be taxable in the same way as earned income, incapacity benefit became taxable in April 1995. We have already announced that the back-to-work bonus and the child maintenance bonus will not be subject to taxation. Any further plans on taxation are a matter for my right hon. and Learned Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer.

Jobseeker's Allowance

17. Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will specify minimum wage rates for jobs offered to persons who will be in receipt of the jobseeker's allowance after its introduction in 1996 which would allow those persons to refuse a job on the grounds of unacceptably low wages. [39701]

Mr. Roger Evans: No. We shall be carrying forward established practice.

Social Security Reforms

18. Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what effect he estimates his social security reforms will have had on public spending by the year 2020 in 1994–95 prices. [39702]

Mr. Lilley: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Basildon (Mr. Amess).

Poverty and Homelessness (Young People)

21. Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what action he is taking to tackle poverty and homelessness among 16 to 24-year-olds. [39705]

Mr. Roger Evans: We are getting the unemployed back to work. In last year's Budget we announced a £700 million package of benefit and employment measures to do just that.

Social Security Fraud

22. Mr. Hawkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans he has for further action to control social security fraud. [39706]

Mr. Heald: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given today by my right hon. Friend to the Member for Ribble Valley (Mr. Evans).

Incapacity Benefit

23. Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people and what percentage have (a) passed and (b) failed the new incapacity benefit all-work test in (i) England and (ii) Wales. [39707]

Mr. Burt: Separate figures for England and Wales are not available. By the end of September, in Great Britain as a whole, 116,349 medical examinations had been performed but decisions had not been made on all cases: 18,895 people had been found capable of work. A figure for those found incapable of work following examination is not available.

These figures are provisional. It is too early to draw conclusions about the long-term effect of the new procedures.

25. Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what recent representations he has received from organisations representing people with disabilities about the exclusion of claimants from incapacity benefit. [39709]

Mr. Burt: None.

Pensioner Households (Consumer Goods)

24. Sir Michael Neubert: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many pensioner households had (a) a fridge, (b) a car, (c) a freezer, (d) a telephone and (e) a television in 1979; and how many do today. [39708]

Mr. Heald: In 1979, 57 per cent. of pensioners were in households with a telephone; by 1992–93 this figure had risen to 93 per cent. There were rises from 88 per cent. to 99 per cent. for ownership of fridges; 32 per cent. to 78 per cent. for freezers or fridge freezers; and 34 per cent. to 50 per cent. for cars or vans. The proportion with televisions rose from 96 per cent. in 1979 to virtually 100 per cent. in the 1990s.

Pensioner Incomes

26. Mr. Winnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what recent estimate he has made of the adequacy of the state retirement pension and income support to pensioners. [39710]

Mr. Heald: The value of the basic state retirement pension has been maintained in line with prices. Since 1988 pensioners receiving income-related benefits, including income support, have seen a real terms increase in benefit worth around £1.2 billion a year.

Post Office Payment of Pensions

27. Mr. Thomason: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if pensioners will continue to be able to choose to have their benefits paid through the Post Office. [39711]

Mr. Heald: Pensioners will continue to be able to choose to have their benefits paid directly into their bank or building society accounts by automated credit transfer or to collect them at the post office.

Plans to automate the system for paying benefit at post offices are well advanced. For customers, this will mean that order books and giros are replaced with a benefit payment card, which they will hand to the post office clerk to obtain details of the benefit due to them. Starting next year, this change is likely to be phased in over a period of two to three years. Pensioners and other benefit recipients will be informed about what is happening, and exactly what they will need to do, nearer the time when cards are to be issued to them. People who choose to be paid by ACT will not be affected by this change and will not need a benefit payment card.

Child Support Agency

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make a statement about the length of time it takes for assessments to be made by the Child Support Agency. [39694]

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: In straightforward cases, where both parents co-operate, the agency aims to complete the assessment in six to 12 weeks. In other cases, the process is inevitably more lengthy.

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) how many of the parents with care who withdrew income support claims within four weeks of being contracted by the Child Support Agency had been claiming income support for (a) less than one month, (b) between one month and three months, (c) between three and six months, (d) between six months and one year, (e) between one and two years and (f) over two years; [41039]

(2) pursuant to his answer of 25 October, Official Report, column 711, how many parents with care withdrew their claims to income support within eight weeks of an investigation under the requirement to co-operate; and if he will provide a month-by-month breakdown for 1994–95 and the current financial year. [41081]

Mr. Mitchell: The information is not required for the agency's business and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to his answer of 23 April, Official Report, column 484, on the benefit savings achieved by the liable relatives unit in 1991–92, in how many cases the unit took action to arrange, increase or enforce payments of maintenance; and in how many of those cases a claim for income support was withdrawn within four weeks. [41083]

Mr. Mitchell: The information requested is not available in the form requested. However, information on legal proceedings taken to obtain maintenance during the calendar year ending 1991 is in the table.

	Number
New orders applied for	1,321
Number granted	1,316
Enforcement/variation of existing order applied for	316
Number granted	292

We have no figures for claims withdrawn, but the number of claims involving liable relatives where income support ceased within four weeks, in the year 1991–92, was 80,261.

Benefits (Residence Qualification)

Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans he has to require all foreign visitors to the United Kingdom to establish residence before qualifying for benefit. [39703]

Mr. Roger Evans: Residence requirements have always played a significant part in social security benefits. We have also recently announced proposal to extend restrictions on persons from abroad claiming benefits.

State Pensions

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what would be the current value in real terms of the state retirement pension for (a) single pensioners and (b) married couples if it had been uprated in line with prices or incomes, whichever was the higher; what would be the value in current value in real terms of the Christmas bonus to (a) single pensioners and (b) married couples on the same basis for the same period; what would be the cost of restoring the link between pensions and incomes or prices, whichever was the higher, during the current financial year expressed as a weekly amount of national insurance contributions to an employee on average earnings and his or her employer; what is the amount of weekly average earnings on which this figure is based; what would be the cost of restoring the link based on the whole burden of retirement pensions being transferred to taxation expressed as a percentage increase in general taxation; and if he will make a statement. [39321]

Mr. Heald: It is estimated that the weekly rate of category A basic retirement pension would be £79.45 from April 1995 and the combined rate of category A and category B basic retirement pension payable to a couple would be £127.15 if the rates had been increased in line with the higher of earnings of prices since 1980.[1]

It is estimated that the Christmas bonus would be £28.80 if it had been increased in line with the higher of earnings or prices since 1980.[1]

Expenditure on retirement pension and linked benefits for those over state pension age would, as a result of restoring the link between pensions and the higher of incomes or prices, be increased by an estimated £9.8 billion in the 1995–96 financial year.[2]

The increase in national insurance contributions to support this would result in an extra weekly cost of £8.45 to an employee on male average earnings and an extra £7.92 for his employer.

Male average earnings of £377 at April 1995 have been used.

The whole burden of retirement pension is estimated as £41.2 billion; this is the current cost of retirement pensions and linked benefits paid to people over state pension age, £31.4 billion, plus the extra cost of restoring the link, £9.8 billion. To raise £41.2 billion would mean increasing the basic rate of income tax from 25 per cent. to 47 per cent. If income-related benefits are taken into account, £38.5 billion would be transferred to taxation and the basic rate of income tax would increase to 45 per cent.

Notes:

[1]Estimates provided by Department of Social Security, Analytical Services Division—in each step of the calculation the benefits have been rounded to the nearest 5 pence.

The Retail Prices Index (all items) as published by the Central Statistical Office has been used for prices uprating.

Earnings upratings have been calculated on the basis of the Department for Education and Employment's Average Earnings Index (Whole economy unadjusted) as amalgamated in the Abstract of Statistics published by the Department of Social Security, Analytical Services Division.

[2]Estimate provided by the Government Actuary's Department based on benefit rates calculated as per note 1. The estimate includes the extra costs of Retirement Pension and linked benefits paid to people over State pension age in particular Widow's Benefit and Incapacity Benefit.

Habitual Residence Test

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list by postcode for Doncaster and Mexborough the number of claimants who have been prevented from receiving benefits as a result of the habitual residence test for each month since its inception; of those refused, how many went to appeal; and how many won their appeals. [39559]

Mr. Roger Evans: Information is not available in the format requested. Statistics are not collected by reference to a claimant's postcode and appeal statistics are not collected against different types of decisions.

Information on the number of people who have failed the habitual residence test is recorded in the Official Report, 23 October 1995, columns 486–89.

Public Appointments, South Yorkshire

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) if he will list the public appointments for which his Department is responsible in the county of South Yorkshire, indicating in each case the duration of the appointment, the date when a new appointment is due, and the salary; [39457]

(2) if he will list all the non-departmental public bodies to which his Department makes appointments in the county of South Yorkshire, indicating the total annual budget and the number of appointments made or renewed for each body in each of the last four years. [39442]

Mr. Burt: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State is responsible for the appointments to the South Yorkshire and Humberside war pensions committee. The current committee of 30 members was convened on 1 January 1991 for five years. The committee has no annual budget and no salaries are payable.

The numbers of new appointments, to replace members who have resigned or died, are shown in the table.

Statutory Maternity and Sick Pay

Mr. Kevin Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) what plans he has to simplify the administration of statutory maternity pay; [40091]

(2) what plans he has to simplify the administration of statutory sick pay. [40092]

Mr. Heald: We intend to introduce a number of simplifications to the statutory sick pay and statutory maternity pay schemes from April 1996. These will include a considerable reduction for employers in the amount of mandatory SSP record-keeping; more flexible time limits for providing SSP information to employees; removing the exclusion from SSP and SMP of employees, including certain mariners, air personnel and continental shelf workers, who are outside the European Economic Area during a period of sickness or maternity; reducing to one month the period for notifying sick absence to an employer where there is good cause for delay, removing the need for employers to issue a form to every leaver who was recently sick and allowing this form, where issued, to be a computer print-out. We will be laying regulations to give effect to these changes in due course.

These proposals arise out of a consultation paper that was issued in March which sought views from all sides of industry on cutting red tape in the SSP-SMP schemes. The consultation formed part of the Government's on-going deregulation programme of lifting burdens on business. We are grateful to all those organisations and individuals who responded. Their contributions proved very valuable in helping us to decide the way forward. Copies of the responses will be placed in the Library.

The consultation paper also sought views on whether employers should be allowed to opt out of SSP if they pay at least the equivalent in occupational sick pay. Employers' organisations were generally in favour of opting out as a means of reducing administration costs, but there were concerns that small businesses could not opt out as they did not generally have occupational sick pay schemes. Employees' organisations were concerned that employees' statutory rights would be removed.

In the light of these concerns, we propose to retain the underlying liability to pay SSP but exempt any employer who pays contractual remuneration, including occupational sick pay, at or above the SSP rate for a day of incapacity for work, from the need to operate the detailed SSP rules. This revised scheme will ensure that employees' rights are fully protected, reduce administrative burdens and also be available to employers with or without an occupational sick pay scheme. We aim to introduce the new arrangements from April 1997 by means of an order under the Deregulation and Contracting Out Act 1994, following further consultation on the detailed proposals.

Other changes to the SSP scheme which received support but which require amendment of primary legislation will be considered as soon as a suitable opportunity arises. They include changing the rule on SSP entitlement during a trade dispute; removing the links between separate contracts of service with the same employer and removing the exclusion from SSP of women who have received maternity allowance within eight weeks of the start of a period of sickness.

These changes build on the simplification of the SSP and SMP schemes which we implemented last year. The lower rate of SSP was abolished so that all employees who qualify now receive the same rate of SSP. For SMP three service qualification tests of 26 weeks, two years and five years were replaced by one test of 26 weeks employment. In addition, all women qualifying for SMP now receive 90 per cent. of their earnings for the first six weeks of maternity leave and a flat rate for the next 12 weeks. Previously, the rate of SMP paid depended on the length of service a woman had with her employer.

Income Support

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what steps are being taken to identify those disabled people who were underpaid income support as a result of a failure by the Benefits Agency to include the severe disability premium in their assessments, and who are no longer in receipt of income support; and what steps are being taken to invite fresh claims from those disabled people who were wrongly refused income support in order that the arrears of benefits due to them will be paid. [40144]

Mr. Roger Evans: On 19 December 1994, the Secretary of State announced that the Benefits Agency was to examine all live claims for income support with potential entitlement to the severe disability premium, and to establish what action was required to those cases where income support was no longer in payment. The exercise to examine live claims is now nearing completion. An announcement will be made shortly about plans for further action.

Motability

Mr. William O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) what guidelines his Department issues to Motability about the refusal of insurance cover to disabled drivers; and if he will make a statement; [40643]

(2) how many disabled persons are currently without the use of a car because of the application of rules on insurance introduced by Motability; and if he will make a statement; [40645]

(3) in what circumstances Motability refuses insurance cover to disabled drivers; [40649]

(4) what penalties are imposed by Motability on drivers under its charge who have been penalised by the courts for driving with excess alcohol; and if he will make a statement; [40644]

(5) how many disabled drivers have been refused insurance cover by Motability; for what reasons; and if he will make a statement. [40677]

Mr. Burt: Motability is an independent organisation. The rules and administration of the scheme's insurance cover are decided by the governors and are not matters for the Secretary of State. Any questions on these issues should be referred to the director, Noel Muddiman.

Disability Benefits

Mr. Clelland: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when he expects to learn whether his request to the House of Lords for leave to appeal against the Halliday-Fairey decision of 14 October 1994 has been successful. [40895]

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: The petition for leave to appeal is under consideration by the House of Lords. The respondent has been invited to lodge objections to the petition by 7 November. A decision will be made thereafter.

Housing Benefit

Mr. Robert McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what amount of housing benefit was paid to or for private landlords in the last year for which figures are available. [40901]

Mr. Roger Evans: The information available is set out in the table and relates to Great Britain only. My right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland is reponsible for the payment of social security benefits in Northern Ireland.

Private Pension Provision

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Social security what is the total amount of funds in private pension provision in the United Kingdom; and what is the equivalent figure for the two next largest European Union countries. [39683]

Mr. Heald: In 1992, the total amount of funds in private pension provision in the United Kingdom was around £500 billion. This is more than three times the amount in either of the two European Union countries with the next largest level of pension funds—£160 billion for Germany and £140 billion for the Netherlands.

Disabled People

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what he estimates to be a practical timetable for implementing proposals to eliminate discrimination against disabled people; and if he will make a statement. [39684]

Mr. Burt: We will establish the National Disability Council early next year. After consultation and publication of draft regulations we plan to introduce the new rights in the employment field towards the end of 1996. The first of the many rights of access to goods and services—the right not to be refused service—will start at the same time, as will protection for disabled people seeking to rent or buy property. Following a similar process of consultation the remaining rights will be phased in subsequently.

War Widows

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans he has to end local variation in the treatment of war widows and war disabled pensioners. [39723]

Mr. Heald: We have no such plans.

Personal Pensions

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what proposals he has to improve the flexibility of personal pensions in retirement. [40036]

Mr. Heald: We have introduced two measures in the Pensions Act 1995 which will improve the flexibility of personal pensions in retirement. The first measure will bring the age-related rebates for personal pension holders who have contracted out of the state earnings-related pension scheme, which will make such pensions attractive across a broader age range. The second measure permits more flexible use of personal pensions savings, by allowing personal pension holders to draw an income from their fund each year and defer buying an annuity until a time of their choosing up to age 75.

Disability Living Allowance

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security of how many cases he is aware in which an attendance allowance was awarded to a person with limited leave to remain in the United Kingdom in each of the years 1993, 1994 and 1995. [41037]

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: The information requested is not available.

Deregulation

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what regulations his Department proposes to repeal by the end of 1995; if he proposes to conduct a cost compliance assessment on each regulation repealed; and what is the estimated cost of undertaking a cost compliance assessment to assess the advantages or disadvantages of such a repeal. [41549]

Mr. Heald: The following regulations are due to be repealed by the end of 1995:

Social Security (invalid Care Allowance) Regulations 1976—Regulation 8(2)(b);

Occupational Pension Schemes (Equal Access to Membership) Regulations 1976;

Occupational Pension Schemes/Equal Access to Membership/Amendment Regulations 1995.

The requirement to carry out a cost compliance assessment applies to regulations which impose additional burdens on business. As these regulations did not impose a burden on business cost compliance assessments were not required.

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list the rules and regulations he proposes to repeal or amend by means of a reference to the Deregulation Committee before the end of 1995; and if he will make a statement. [41523]

Mr. Heald: This Department will not be repealing or amending any rules or regulations by means of a reference to the Deregulation Committee before the end of 1995. However, we aim to introduce from April 1997 an easement to allow employers to substitute contractual remuneration for statutory sick pay for any day of sickness by means of an order under the Deregulation and Contracting Out Act 1994.

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the estimated saving to the Exchequer by the repeal of each rule and regulation which has so far been the subject of a reference to the Deregulation Committee from his Department; and in how many cases a cost compliance assessment has been carried out. [41524]

Mr. Heald: The Department has not yet repealed any rules or regulations by reference to the Deregulation Committee.

Nursing Homes

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Cardiff, West (Mr. Morgan) of 27 October, Official Report, column 853, if he will list the number of nursing home residents with preserved rights to higher levels of income support in (a) April 1993, (b) November 1993, (c) April 1994 and (d) the latest figure available (1) nationally, (2) regionally and (3) by area. [41435]

Mr. Roger Evans: Information is not available in the format requested. Information is available only for residents in nursing homes with preserved rights who are in receipt of income support and is set out in the table:

	May 1993	November 1993	May 1994	November 1994
England	104,060	90,620	79,140	70,240
Scotland	11,460	10,360	8,760	7,940
Wales	9,060	7,880	6,860	6,600
Great Britain	124,600	108,860	94,760	84,780

Asylum Seekers

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what estimates have been made by his Department on the effects on asylum seekers' children of the loss of social security benefits to their parents. [41827]

Mr. Roger Evans: We have made no such estimate. The Government believe that it cannot be right to pay benefits to asylum seekers who apply for asylum after being admitted to this country as visitors unless there has been an upheaval in their home country. Those people who apply for asylum on entry to the United Kingdom will still have access to benefits while their asylum application is considered.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what representations he has received concerning the effects of removing social security benefits to asylum seekers. [41826]

Mr. Evans: The Government referred proposals affecting the benefit entitlement of asylum seekers and other persons from abroad to the Social Security Advisory Committee on 11 October. The committee has invited representations. I expect to receive its report and recommendations during December. I have also received a number of items of correspondence.

Earnings Top-up

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when he will announce his further plans for earnings top-up, the proposed pilot benefit for working people without dependent children.

Mr. Lilley: I have today announced my decisions on the eight areas in which the earnings top-up pilot scheme will operate from October 1996. I have also placed in the Vote Office the draft rules of the scheme.

The rules set out the scheme list by postcode for the eight pilot areas in which earnings top-up will be paid—four at a higher rate, scheme B, and four at a lower rate, scheme A. The two benefit rates are intended to test the relative effectiveness of different levels of assistance in meeting the aim of the scheme: to help lower-paid people to move into work and be better off in it.

The areas have been selected from an original shortlist using wholly objective criteria related to unemployment rates, vacancy rates, population density and operational feasibility. They are areas from which we expect to be able to draw conclusions about the effectiveness of this approach if extended nationally.

The eight pilot areas are:

Scheme A (Lower Rate): These pilot areas will give an estimated average weekly boost to income of £16 for single people under 25, and £24 for couples:

Newcastle upon Tyne TTWA[1], including parts of Stanley, Consett, Newburn, Gateshead, Shields Road, Felling, West Moor, Blaydon on Tyne, Cramlington, Whitley Bay, Wallsend, North Shields, and Prudhoe.

Castleford and Pontefract TTWA, including parts of Knottingley, and Normanton;

Wakefield and Dewsbury TTWA, including parts of South Elmsall, Hemsworth, and Batley;

Barnsley TTWA, including part of Wombwell, and Hoyland.

Southend TTWA, including parts of Brentwood, Rayleigh, Burnham on Crouch, Basildon, Canvey Island, Stanford le Hope, Grays, and Tilbury.

Bangor and Caernarfon TTWA, including parts of Penygross and Beaumaris; Conway and Colwyn TTWA, including parts of Colwyn Bay, Llanwrst, and Lundudno;

Denbigh TTWA;

Dolgelllau and Barmouth TTWA;

Holyhead TTWA including parts of Llangefni and Amlwych;

Shotton; Flint and Rhyl TTWA, including parts of Mold and Holywell;

Wrexham TTWA, including parts of Cefnmawr and Llangollen.

Scheme B (Higher Rate): These pilot areas will give an estimated average weekly boost to income of £18 for single people under 25, and £25 for couples:

Sunderland TTWA, including parts of Birtley, Chester le Street, Houghton Le Spring, Peterlee, East Boldon, and Washington.

Doncaster TTWA, including parts of Thorne.

Bournemouth TTWA, including parts of Wimbourne, Christchurch, and Ringwood.

Perth and Crieff TTWA:

Dumbarton TTWA, including parts of Alexandria, and Helensburgh;

Stirling TTWA.

We expect that about 20,000 people will benefit from the earnings top-up pilot. The four areas which have been selected as controls for the evaluation of the pilot are:

Middlesbrough TTWA

Hartlepoole and Stockton on Tees TTWA

Rotherham and Mexborough TTWA

Worksop TTWA

Southampton and Isle of Wight TTWA

Blaenau Gwent and Abergavenny TTWA

Brecon TTWA

Llandeilo TTWA

Llanelli TTWA

Monmouth TTWA

Pontypool and Cwmbran TTWA

Notes:

[1] TTWA = Travel to Work Area. These are areas in which 75 per cent. of the population working in the area also live there, and vice versa.

The rules of the scheme will be published in final form once there has been an opportunity for Parliament to consider the proposals.

Benefit Fraud

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) how many cases of benefit fraud have come to light in each year since 1990 as a result of unsolicited information passed to the Benefits Agency by members of the public; [38753]

(2) if he will list those areas selected to pilot Operation Speakeasy; [38755]

(3) what is the cost of Operation Speakeasy; [38754]

Mr. Heald: The investigation of benefit fraud is a matter for Mr. Peter Mathison, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. Gordon Prentice, dated 3 November 1995:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Questions about the number of benefit fraud cases which have come to light in each year since 1990 as a result of unsolicited information passed to the Benefits Agency by members of the public, the areas selected to pilot the fraud referral hotline, previously known as Operation Speakeasy and the cost involved.

Information on the number of benefit fraud cases that have come to light as a result of unsolicited information from members of the public is only available from April 1995.

During the period 1 April 1995 to 30 August 1995 we have received 127,301 referrals from the public. These have resulted in 72,474 investigations and of the investigations completed so far, 30,687 of these have proved to be cases of benefit fraud.

The fraud referral hotline was launched in September this year. This is a freephone telephone line which allows members of the public to report allegations of benefit fraud to trained fraud staff. It is to be piloted in four areas Hull, Stockport, Blackburn/Burnley and Tunbridge Wells.

The pilot has incurred an initial outlay of around £30,000 but the final cost will not be known until the exercise is completed.

I hope you find this reply helpful.

Invalidity Benefit

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what guidance applies to the award of invalidity benefits to people who have undergone laryngectomies and tracheotomies. [39680]

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: The administration of Social Security benefit is a matter for Mr. Peter Mathison, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member with such information as is available.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. Jim Cunnigham, dated 3 November 1995:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about what guidance applies to the award of invalidity benefits to people who have undergone laryngectomies and tracheotomy.

Invalidity Benefit and Sickness Benefit were replaced by Incapacity Benefit with effect from 13 April 1995. The Adjudication Officers Guide is available to Adjudication Officers to assist them in reaching a decision on benefit entitlement. In addition, they have access to the Medical Advisors Guide and the Background Information to Incapacity for Work Guide which provide background information on certain medical conditions. No specific guidance is given to Adjudication Officers awarding benefits to people who have undergone laryngectomies and tracheotomy.

Factors such as breathlessness and fatigue are taken into account in deciding on the appropriate level of limitations for every activity if a person is assessed under the functional All Work Test.

I hope you find this reply helpful.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Nursery Facilities

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Chairman of the Administration Committee what plans his committee has for the construction of nursery facilities in the Palace of Westminster. [42012]

Mr. Michael J. Martin: The Committee has no power to authorise the construction of facilities of any kind. This is a matter for the House of Commons Commission.

New Parliamentary Building

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Chairman of the Finance and Services Committee what is the current estimated cost of the new phase 2 Parliamentary Building. [41175]

Mr. Channon: The approved estimate for the new Parliamentary Building is £154 million at 1992 prices, plus any increases in building prices which occur before the contracts are completed in 1999. There are no indices to cover this period so the final cost could be only speculative at this stage.

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Chairman of the Accommodation and Works Committee how many (a) hon. Members and (b) others he estimates will be accommodated in the new Parliamentary Building phase 2 indicating an upper and lower projection. [41174]

Mr. Ray Powell: The new Parliamentary Building will provide offices for at least 210 hon. Members. It will also accommodate an equivalent number of Members' support staff, but the building has been designed flexibly so that Members can, subject to the rules then current, accommodate more staff in either their own or their support offices if they wish.

Public Access

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Chairman of the Accommodation and Works Committee what plans his Committee has to alter the entrance for the public to the Palace of Westminster to enable Westminster Hall to be the entrance route via New Palace Yard. [42019]

Mr. Ray Powell: None.

Catering Facilities (Refurbishment Cost)

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Chairman of the Accommodation and Works Committee what was the total cost of the recent refurbishment of catering facilities in the Palace of Westminster. [42011]

Mr. Ray Powell: The contract value for the work undertaken this year to modernise the Members' and Strangers' cafeterias and kitchen and the Speaker's state kitchen is £1,600,000.

Norman Shaw North and South

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Chairman of the Accommodation and Works Committee what consideration was given to the recycling of materials discarded from Norman Shaw North during refurbishment work; and if he will make a statement. [42015]

Mr. Ray Powell: The recycling of materials discarded during the refurbishment of Norman Shaw North is a matter for the main contractors.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Chairman of the Accommodation and Works Committee what future plans there are for refurbishment of Norman Shaw North and South; and if he will make a statement. [42013]

Mr. Powell: It is planned to install the Parliamentary Data Video Network on the first and second floors of Norman Shaw North next year and the remaining floors in 1997. The opportunity will be taken to carry out a limited refurbishment on a similar basis to the work successfully undertaken on the ground floor this year.

Only limited work was carried out in Norman Shaw South when it was acquired from the Metropolitan police and it will shortly require complete refurbishment. The long-term programme envisages that this work should be started once the new Parliamentary Building is completed at the end of the decade.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Chairman of the Accommodation and Works Committee what is the total cost of the refurbishment of the ground floor of Norman Shaw North during the recent recess. [42016]

Mr. Powell: The project was undertaken to fulfil the decision of the House to make the PDVN available to hon. Members and their staff. This year's phase of the work involved the provision of the network on the ground floor, together with refurbishment work which it was sensible to carry out at the same time, and the installation of monitors to allow Members on the upper floors and in Norman Shaw South to receive the "clean feed" of the proceedings in the Chamber. The estimated cost of the phase is £0.7 million.

DEFENCE

Radar Interference

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what steps he is taking to neutralise the recently installed radar equipment at HMS Cambridge at Wembury, south Devon so as to prevent interference with hearing aids of residents in nearby villages and to prevent security lights from being tripped; and if he will make a statement. [41491]

Mr. Soames: The new Watchman radar which is sited at HMS Cambridge provides air traffic control cover above the Plymouth sea exercise areas for flag officer sea training, whose activity has recently moved from Portland to Plymouth.

These radars first entered service about five years ago and there are now more than 50 in use in the UK. We are not aware that similar problems are being encountered elsewhere and therefore had no expectation of any in south Devon. However, we have arranged for a team of technical experts to visit the area to examine the impact of the radar and to investigate the problems that local residents are reporting. This is planned to commence on 9 November. The team proposes to conduct a "surgery" in the area, followed by technical investigations. Should it be established that the radar is indeed causing these problems, we shall of course do all that we can to resolve them.

French Nuclear Tests

Mr. Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) if he will make it his policy that the United Kingdom Government will decline to receive, consider or make use of any information or data resulting from the current French nuclear testing programme; [41494]

(2) if the United Kingdom Government have, at any time, made it their policy to decline to receive, consider or make use of any information or data resulting from French nuclear tests other than the present series. [41495]

Mr. Arbuthnot: We have neither asked for, nor been offered, information or data resulting from the current French test programme. The UK is not involved in any way in these tests. Data from French tests would not be directly relevant to our nuclear weapons. The Government believe that it would be irresponsible to rule out for the future any form of co-operation with any of our allies, consistent with our international non-proliferation obligations, which might help us fulfil our responsibility to ensure the safety and reliability of our nuclear deterrent.

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence on how many occasions and on what dates, aircraft carrying (a) supplies and (b) nuclear materials to the French nuclear test site at Muroroa Atoll in the South Pacific have been authorised to use United Kingdom airspace since June of this current year. [42064]

Mr. Soames: I know of no such flights in United Kingdom airspace.

Forces Manpower

Mr. Mans: To ask the Secretary of State for defence if he will list the front-line level of uniformed manpower in the British Army, the Royal Navy and the Royal Air Force in April 1985, April 1990, April 1995 and the projected level in April 1996 and April 1997. [41379]

Mr. Soames: The approximate strength of uniformed manpower for each of the three services in April of the years requested is as follows:

	1985	1990	1995	1996	1997
Royal Navy	70,000	63,000	51,000	48,000	46,000
British Army	170,000	160,000	116,000	113,00	112,000
Royal Air Force	93,000	90,000	71,000	65,000	57,000

These figures are inclusive of trainees and, in the case of the Army, Gurkhas—but not the Royal Irish Regiment, Home Service Force. Estimates of strength for 1996 and 1997 are sensitive to assumptions about recruitment and retention rates.

Aircraft Loaders

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence for what military purpose two self-propelled aircraft loaders are required, as set out in future purchase No. SMC31ARAF076; what consideration was given to leasing or contract hire of such vehicles; and if he will make a statement. [41320]

Mr. Arbuthnot: The two self-propelled aircraft loaders are required to support C130 and VC10 aircraft. Their military purpose is to transport air cargo loads between the aircraft and storage areas, and to transfer those loads both into and out of the aircraft. The leasing of equipment is routinely considered as part of the replacement decision. In general, however, there is no commercial equipment available which meets the specific military requirements and the leasing or contract hire of purpose-built self-propelled aircraft loaders has been shown to be uneconomic. As the specialist nature of these vehicles rules out the leasing of commercially available types, and as the high cost of refurbishment of existing vehicles, which are over 20 years old, precludes that option, purchase was assessed to be the most economic means of meeting its operational requirement.

Materials Handling Equipment

Mr. Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the operation of the fleet of materials handling equipment. [41586]

Mr. Soames: I will write to the hon. Member.

Defensive Monitoring Units

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence which unit of (a) the Army and (b) the Royal Navy is responsible for defensive monitoring of Army and Royal Navy frequencies; and if he will make a statement. [41588]

Mr. Soames: It is not our policy to comment on operational matters of this kind.

Nuclear Materials (Transport)

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has to change the escort status of nuclear material conveyed by road through South Yorkshire. [41619]

Mr. Soames: No changes are currently planned to the escort arrangements for nuclear material convoys operated by the Ministry of Defence. It is not our practice to comment on the routes used by such convoys.

Accident, Padarn Lake

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 24 October, Official Report, column 587, if he will place in the Library a report of the RAF board of inquiry into the accident at Padarn lake on 12 August 1993. [41576]

Mr. Soames: Copies of the summary of the board of inquiry are being placed in the Library today.

Tornado Aircraft

Mr. Hutton: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many Tornado aircraft are stationed at RAF Bruggen; and how many currently have two serviceable engines. [41346]

Mr. Soames: There are currently 54 Tornado GR1 aircraft stationed at RAF Bruggen. However, 14 of these aircraft are currently deployed elsewhere on operations and training or undergoing major maintenance. Of the remaining 40 aircraft, 28 currently have two serviceable engines.

Mr. Hutton: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many RAF service men were engaged on servicing Tornado aircraft in 1992; and how many (a) service men and (b) civilians are doing so now. [41349]

Mr. Soames: The following figures relate to Tornado maintenance carried out by the RAF Maintenance Group Defence Agency at RAF St Athan and RAF Sealand:

	1992	1 November 1995
Service Personnel	641	1,031
MOD Civilians	421	470
Total	1,062	1,501

Servicing of Tornado aircraft at front-line operating bases is also carried out by service personnel; however, the number of personnel involved is not readily available.

European Court Decisions

Sir Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to the answer from the Attorney-General on 30 October 1995, Official Report, columns 12–14, relating to decisions of the European Court of Justice and the European Court of Human Rights, if he will list those European Court decisions relating to responsibilities of his Department over the past two years; and what was the estimated annual cost to public funds of each decision. [41216]

Mr. Soames [holding answer 2 November 1995]: I refer to the answer given today by my hon. Friend the Minister of State, Foreign and Commonwealth Office.

Asbestos Injuries

Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what steps he has taken to review the recent court case on asbestos injury; and what assessment he has made of the effect the court case will have on the claims from ex-service personnel who had contact with asbestos during their military service. [41850]

Mr. Soames: Any former service personnel suffering an illness as a result of exposure to asbestos dust during their time in the armed forces is eligible for a war pension. However, where the exposure to asbestos dust occurred in service prior to May 1987, section 10 of the Crown Proceedings Act 1947 precludes payment of common law compensation for resultant illness. Following repeal of section 10 of this Act, compensation may be paid if exposure occurred after May 1987. The recent court case referred to has not altered this position.

Defence Contracts

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the percentage and cash values of contracts given to British companies by his Department for defence products; and how many jobs were retained and created as a result of such contracts for each of the last five years. [33096]

Mr. Arbuthnot: I will write to the hon. Member.

Maintenance Trolleys

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence for what military purpose 16 aircraft hydraulic system maintenance trolleys are required, as set out in future purchase No. SMC31BRAF574; what consideration was given to leasing or contract hire of such vehicles; and if he will make a statement. [41321]

Mr. Arbuthnot: The 16 hydraulic system maintenance trolleys are required to support the VC-10 and Tristar fleets. Their military purpose is to test the hydraulic systems of these aircraft as an aid to fault diagnosis and to prove system performance following maintenance or rectification whether carried out at RAF stations in the UK or when deployed abroad. The tender documents for this contract will include a clause encouraging innovative proposals and any lease or hire options which are put forward by industry will be considered on their merits.

Armoured Vehicles

Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what response has been received to his recent invitation to companies to supply modern wheeled armoured vehicles for a demonstration of such vehicles for senior officers; how much notice was given of this proposed demonstration to potential exhibitors; for what reason the demonstration is to include driving experience for selected officers; on the basis of what previous experience of driving armoured vehicles these officers will be selected; and if he will make a statement. [41239]

Mr. Arbuthnot: Companies have been invited to provide, at their own cost, examples of wheeled armoured vehicles, to give a general demonstration of the capabilities of such vehicles in the context of the Army's potential future equipment requirements. The demonstration will not in any sense be a formal assessment of the vehicles. As part of the demonstration, senior officers with responsibilities relating to the use of armoured vehicles will be given an opportunity to receive first-hand experience of driving the vehicles, in order to gain a better understanding of modern wheeled vehicle technology. Five companies have responded. They were originally given one month's notice, but the demonstration has now been postponed until spring 1996.

Fuel Tankers

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if the tankers in service with the Royal Air Force are capable of the mid-air refuelling of F–16 aircraft. [41489]

Mr. Arbuthnot: No.

Rolls-Royce Engines (Tornadoes)

Mr. Hutton: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the cause of the delay at Rolls-Royce in reconditioning RB199 engines for RAF Tornadoes; how many are currently with Rolls-Royce or waiting to be sent to it; how many would be unserviceable at any one time under usual conditions; and what steps the Government are taking to ensure that Rolls-Royce resolves the problems it currently faces and meets the terms of its contract for servicing RB199 engines for the RAF. [41347]

Mr. Arbuthnot: Complete RB199 engines are not currently, nor have been held at, Rolls-Royce for reconditioning. Modules for incorporation into the RAF Tornado RB199 engine are reconditioned by Rolls-Royce. Production delays have been experienced because of industrial action at Rolls-Royce plants earlier this year. RAF logistics command has maintained continuous pressure on Rolls-Royce to meet the RAF's requirements and a programme of measures has been initiated to achieve required production levels. CinC Logistics Command met Rolls-Royce senior executives last week and used the occasion to impress on them the need for their personal and continued commitment in meeting new production targets.

Spare Parts (Tornadoes)

Mr. Hutton: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much has been spent on spare parts for RAF Tornado aircraft each year for the past five years; and how much is in the estimates for this purpose in the current year. [41350]

Mr. Arbuthnot: The value of spares expenditure incurred for Tornado airframe and engine spares, avionics, special to type ground equipment and test sets for each of the past five years was as follows:

1990–91: £176 million
1991–92: £214 million
1992–93: £200 million
1993–94: £184 million
1994–95: £161 million

The provision for the current year is £149 million.

These figures do not include details of expenditure in respect of local purchases, spares orders placed by commodity range managers and spares purchased from other nations under mutual supply support arrangements, which are not available centrally.

Ammunition

Mr. McWilliam: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made as to the necessity of the retention of a comprehensive domestic capability to manufacture ammunition required by British armed forces; and if he will make a statement. [41635]

Mr. Arbuthnot: We keep under review the availability and dependability of our sources of supply for ammunition. This does not necessarily require the maintenance of a comprehensive domestic capability to manufacture every type of ammunition in service.

Defence Joint Ventures

Mr. McWilliam: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what contact there has been between Ministers or civil servants and Royal Ordnance or BAE regarding the setting up of a joint company or other arrangement involving GIAT of France; and if he will make a statement. [41637]

Mr. Arbuthnot: My Department has been kept informed about a possible joint venture between Royal Ordnance and GIAT, and the progress of discussions. Such exchanges are in confidence. Any firm proposals which arose would be subject to the approval of the regulatory authorities in the usual way.

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list by type of project (a) how many schemes have been approved to date under the public finance initiative, (b) what is the value of those schemes and (c) what public sector contribution will be required both initially and as revenue support during the lifetime of the schemes. [41732]

Mr. Arbuthnot: To date my Department has approved one project under the private finance initiative; the value of this scheme is commercially confidential.

Artillery Shells

Mr. Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many 155 mm artillery shells were sold off by his Department in each year between 1980 and 1990; and if he will list each country purchasing the shells and the average price obtained. [42060]

Mr. Arbuthnot: The records of sales conducted by the Ministry of Defence, prior to the privatisation of Royal Ordnance in 1985, or of surplus shells between 1985 and 1990, are not available. Questions related to sales conducted by Royal Ordnance plc since that date are a matter for the company.

Mr. Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what were the number and value of 155 mm shells and cartridges produced for export by the United Kingdom in each of the years 1980 to 1990; and to which countries these items were exported. [42062]

Mr. Arbuthnot: It remains Government policy not to reveal details of exports of defence equipment. Such information is confidential between the customer and the supplier.

Mr. Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many 155 mm shells were purchased by his Department for the Falklands war; and what was the country of origin of those shells and shell components and the average price paid. [42061]

Mr. Arbuthnot: No 155 mm guns were used in the Falklands war and therefore no 155 millimetre shells were purchased.

Mr. Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, how many 155 mm shells and parts of 155 mm shells were purchased by his Department each year between 1980 and 1990; and what was the average price paid for these shells. [42057]

Mr. Arbuthnot: The information required could be produced only at disproportionate cost.

Scott Inquiry

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many persons in his Department are on the public payroll or employed as consultants or advisers and work on a part-time or full-time basis in relation to the Scott inquiry; if he will list their names; and how much each is paid. [42507]

Mr. Arbuthnot: The number of staff in my Department wholly employed on matters relating to the Scott inquiry is two and their direct annual salary costs is £60,632. It is not possible to identify the number of people involved on a part-time or occasional basis within the Department or as external consultants or advisers, but the amount so far spent by my Department on external advice is £48,601.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many persons have been authorised to have access to documents held by his Department relating to the Scott inquiry; and if he will list such persons. [42058]

Mr. Arbuthnot: Ministers, former Ministers, officials and other advisers have access to material relating to the inquiry as necessary.

Ministerial Meetings

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many times in each month of the current year he has met personally the heads of the agencies which report to him to discuss the work of those agencies. [39854]

Mr. Arbuthnot [holding answer 1 November 1995]: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State's ownership responsibilities for the 23 defence agencies are usually discharged in the first instance by a designated officer or official in the Department or one of the service commands. Meetings between Ministers and defence agency chief executives occur infrequently, when the nature of the business requires it.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Betts: To ask the Attorney-General if he will list by type of project (a) how many schemes have been approved to date under the private finance initiative, (b) what is the value of those schemes and (c) what public sector contribution will be required both initially and as revenue support during the lifetime of the schemes. [41734]

The Solicitor-General: To date, the Law Officers' Departments have not used the private finance initiative for the funding of any schemes. However, use of the PFI is being considered for future projects where appropriate.

Scott Inquiry

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Attorney-General how many persons in his Department are on the public payroll or employed as consultants or advisers and work on a part-time or a full-time basis in relation to the Scott inquiry; if he will list their names; and how much each is paid. [42076]

The Attorney-General: Leaving aside members of Sir Richard Scott's inquiry team, a number of staff in my Departments work on matters related to the Scott inquiry from time to time as part of their duties and it is not possible to estimate the overall cost. The amount so far spent by my Departments on external advice is £9,940. It is not the practice to name staff or external advisers in these circumstances. The costs of staff in the Treasury Solicitor's Department providing legal services to client departments in connection with the inquiry are included in charges invoiced to Departments.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Attorney-General how many persons have been authorised to have access to documents held by his Department relating to the Scott inquiry; and if he will list such persons. [42077]

The Attorney-General: Ministers, officials and other advisers have access to material relating to the inquiry as necessary in order to carry out their responsibilities.

Marchioness Inquest

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Attorney-General when the Director of the Crown Prosecution Service expects to receive the transcripts of evidence to the inquest into the deaths which followed the sinking of the Marchioness; and when the Crown Prosecution Service will take a decision on whether to initiate a prosecution. [41951]

The Attorney-General: The Crown Prosecution Service expects to receive transcripts of the evidence given at the inquest within the next four weeks. Once they have been considered, and any further inquiries which may prove necessary have been completed, a decision on whether criminal proceedings should be instituted can be made. It is not yet possible to say when that stage will be reached.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Betts: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will list by type of project (a) how many schemes have been approved to date under the private finance initiative, (b) what is the value of those schemes and (c) what public sector contribution will be required both initially and as revenue support during the lifetime of the schemes. [41733]

Mr. John M. Taylor: For the Lord Chancellor's Department, including the Court Service and the Public Trust Office, no such schemes have yet been approved.

Law Commission

Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will make a statement setting out the criteria by which suitability for appointment to the Law Commission is assessed; and if he will bring forward to the House proposals to ensure that future appointments are first subjected to detailed parliamentary scrutiny. [42109]

Mr. John M. Taylor: Appointments to the Law Commission are statutory and are made by the Lord Chancellor under section 1 of the Law Commissions Act 1965. The 1965 Act, as amended by the Courts and Legal Services Act 1990, requires that appointees must be legally qualified or have experience in a judicial office or as a teacher of law in a university. Appointees must also satisfy the Lord Chancellor of their good health.

The chairman of the Law Commission is appointed by the Lord Chancellor, usually from the ranks of experienced High Court judges. Before reaching his decision, the Lord Chancellor customarily consults senior members of the judiciary. In considering the suitability of candidates for membership of the Law Commission, the Lord Chancellor appoints, in accordance with the principles of fair and open competition, those candidates who appear from the information available to have the best qualifications and experience for appointment. Successful candidates will be lawyers of recognised standing, experience and ability who can make significant contributions to the reform and development of the law.

There are no proposals to make future appointments to the Law Commission subject to detailed parliamentary scrutiny.

Mrs. Winterton: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will list the current members of the Law Commission, indicating in each case the date upon which they were appointed, the date upon which their term of appointment ceases and the specific qualities and experience which were the basis of their appointment. [42108]

Mr. Taylor: The dates of the terms of appointment of the current members of the Law Commission are set out in the table. The criteria on which appointments are based are set out in my earlier answer to my hon. Friend.

Name	Date of appointment	Date of expiry of appointment
The right hon. Mr. Justice Brooke	1 January 1993	31 December 1995
Charles Harpum	1 January 1994	31 December 1998
Diana Faber	31 January 1994	30 January 1999
Stephen Silber QC	11 April 1994	10 April 1999
Andrew Burrows	1 October 1994	30 September 1999

Mrs. Winterton: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will make it his policy to appoint to the Law Commission in future only those individuals who have demonstrated by their own lifestyles a commitment to the institution of marriage and respect for human life. [42112]

Mr. Taylor: No. The Lord Chancellor wishes to maintain his present policy with regard to appointments to the Law Commission, which are made in accordance with the procedures set out in my earlier answer to my hon. Friend.

Mrs. Winterton: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what has been the total cost of the Law Commission, including accommodation costs at estimated market rates, in each of the year since it was established; if he will give a breakdown of those costs indicating the amounts spend on (a) staff costs, (b) allowances and fees, (c) publication costs, (e) the estimated cost of accommodation at market rates and (f) all other identifiable costs. [42110]

Mr. Taylor: The available information about the cost of the Law Commission is given in the table.

The other information requested is not available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

The cost of the Commission 1982–1994[1]

Sub head	1982–83	1983–84	1984–85	1985–86	1986–87	1987–88	1988

[1] These figures have been published in the annual reports of the Commission. Until 1988, the figures were related to a "parliamentary year". As from 1988, the figures have related to the calendar year. In no case has the financial year been used as the base.

[2] Component relating to ground rent, rates and major works supplied by the Lord Chancellor's Department, for the years 1988 to date.

[3] This figure reflects the costs of a five yearly rent review, which produced a 130 per cent. increase, and necessary new works to the building (e.g. a new security system).

[4] Portion of the total cost of the Lord Chancellor's Department headquarters attributed to the Commission. The portion attributed to individual parts of the Department is proportional to the number of staff paid as established staff, including research assistants. The 1993 figure excluded any sum for the information technology services provided by the Lord Chancellor's Department, as they were used very little. In 1994, they were used very much more, and a notional figure has therefore been attributed for them in 1994.

[5] Included in the 1991 and 1992 figures for office equipment are sums of £90,000 and £60,000 respectively, which represent the cost of converting the computer system.

[7] Figures from 1993 onwards show the actual expenditure on salaries. In previous years, salaries were shown as a multiple of the December monthly salary figures, which gave an exaggerated result.

[8] As of April 1993 superannuation is included in the Lord Chancellor's Department's salary budget and is not shown separately.

[9] This includes some £9,000 spent on converting to a system of direct dialling in.

[10] As from 1994 Entertainment is included in Miscellaneous.

Mrs. Winterton: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will list the package of remuneration and expenses which may be claimed by members of the Law Commission. [42111]

Mr. Taylor: The current chairman of the Law Commission is a High Court judge and, as such, receives a salary of £98,957 per annum. He does not receive any additional remuneration for his work as chairman of the Law Commission. The salary of other members of the Law Commission is currently £69,500 per annum. The office of commissioner is pensionable, but superannuation arrangements depend on individual circumstances. As elsewhere in the Crown's service, travel and subsistence expenses may be payable, on the same basis as senior civil servants, if and when a commissioner is required to travel or stay away overnight in the course of his or her duties.

Mrs. Winterton: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will list the square footage and address of all accommodation currently occupied by the Law Commission; and if he will estimate the current market rent which could be realised through the letting of that accommodation. [42113]

Mr. Taylor: A total of 1,651.1 sq. m. at Conquest house, 37–38 John street, London WC1N 2BQ. The market rent, as valued at June 1995, is £122,000 per annum.

Mrs. Winterton: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will make it his policy to abolish the Law Commission [42107]

Mr. Taylor: No, that is not the Lord Chancellor's intention.

Mrs. Winterton: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will make it his policy to make a statement to the House on each and every occasion that the Law Commission (a) commences and (b) concludes a consideration of a particular area of law. [42105]

Mr. M. Taylor: The Lord Chancellor is required by the Law Commissions Act 1965 to lay before Parliament any programmes prepared by the commission, and approved by him, for the examination of different branches of the law. The sixth programme was laid before Parliament in June. He is similarly required by the Act to lay before Parliament any proposals for reform formulated pursuant to such programmes.

Right of Audience

Mr. Batiste: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department when a decision will be made by the Crown Prosecution Office as to extended right of audience. [42097]

Mr. John M. Taylor: The Law Society's application to be authorised to award qualifications for rights of audience in the higher courts to employed solicitors is under consideration in accordance with the procedure set out in the Courts and Legal Services Act 1990. There is a related application by the Director of Public Prosecutions and the Treasury Solicitor to have rule 402(1)(c) of the Bar's code of conduct deemed not to have been approved under the provisions of s31(1)(b) of the Courts and Legal Services Act 1990. This is the rule which restricts employed barristers rights of audience.

The Lord Chancellor and the designated judges announced that they would adjourn their consideration of this related application until they had considered the advice from the Lord Chancellor's advisory committee on legal education and conduct on the Law Society's application. The Lord Chancellor has recently received ACLEC's advice and this is being considered together with other representations. The Lord Chancellor and the designated judges will make an announcement in due course.

Advisory Committee Membership

Mr. Batiste: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will list the members and qualifications of the Lord Chancellor's advisory committee. [42096]

Mr. John M. Taylor: I understand the question to refer to the Lord Chancellor's advisory committee on legal education and conduct. Details of the members appear in the latest annual report of the committee, published on 27 October 1995, copies of which have been placed in the libraries of both Houses. The members and their qualifications are as follows:

Members	Qualifications

David Wilkins	Educational Consultant; former Chief Inspector of Schools, Nottinghamshire

Land Ownership

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will make it his policy to require all land to be registered. [41271]

Mr. John M. Taylor: Because of the security and simplicity of titles afforded to land owners under the land registration system, it has been the policy of successive Governments to promote the progressive registration of unregistered titles. Compulsory registration of titles on sale and on the grant of long leases was first introduced in 1899 in central London. Since then, compulsory registration has been extended progressively to other parts of England and Wales—a process which was completed in December 1990. There are currently over 15.5 million registered titles and it is estimated that there remain between 4 and 5 million titles which are as yet unregistered.

While the existing statutory provision of compulsory registration on sale will continue to reduce the number of unregistered titles, there are a significant number of unregistered titles which are likely to remain unsold, and therefore unregistered indefinitely. Accordingly, the Law Commission, together with the Lord Chancellor's Department and the Land Registry, have been considering in the context of reviewing the commission's third and fourth reports on land registration what additional mechanisms might usefully be put into place to accelerate the process of registering the remaining land in England and Wales. As a result, there was published in September this year a joint report by the Law Commission and the Land Registry, Law Com. No. 235, Cm 2950, which proposes extending compulsory registration to the following additional dispositions of unregistered land: assents, vesting deeds, conveyances by way of gift, conveyances pursuant to a court order and first legal mortgages.

The appendix to the report contains a draft Bill which, if enacted, would give effect to these proposals, together with certain other recommended reforms, and a suitable opportunity is being sought to bring forward such a Bill for consideration by Parliament.

Mr. Prentice: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what estimates he has made of the acreage of rural land in England which is in foreign ownership. [41355]

Mr. John M. Taylor: The question concerns a specific matter on which the chief executive of Her Majesty's Land Registry Executive Agency is best placed to provide the answer. I have accordingly asked the chief executive to reply direct.

Letter from John Manthorpe to Mr. Gordon Prentice, dated 7 November 1995:

I have been asked by the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department, to reply to your recent question on the acreage of rural land in England which is in foreign ownership.

I regret that statistics relating to land acreage or the nationality of registered proprietors are not maintained by the Registry and I am therefore unable to supply the information requested.

Scott Inquiry

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many persons have been authorised to have access to documents held by his Department relating to the Scott inquiry; and if he will list such persons. [42075]

Mr. John M. Taylor: Ministers, former Ministers, officials and other advisers have access to material relating to the inquiry as necessary in order to carry out their responsibilities.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many persons in his Department are on the public payroll or employed as consultants or advisers and work on a part-time or a full-time basis in relation to the Scott inquiry; if he will list those their names; and how much each is paid. [42074]

Mr. Taylor: There are no members of staff in my Department employed on matters relating to the Scott inquiry, on either a full-time or a part-time basis. My Department does not employ an external consultants or advisers in relation to the inquiry.

HEALTH

Psychiatric Hospitals

Mr. Kevin Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many beds there were in each of the psychiatric hospitals that have closed (a) in 1995 and (b) in each year since 1979. [41101]

Mr. Bowis: The information available centrally is published in "Bed availability for England", copies of which are available in the Library.

Mental Health Services

Mr. Kevin Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what reports have been commissioned by his Department to review mental health services in the last five years; and what action has been taken as a result of the findings of such reports. [41102]

Mr. Bowis: The reports commissioned by my Department are set out in the following list. They have provided useful in helping to develop of a comprehensive range of mental health services to support Government policy. Copies of the published reports will be placed in the Library.

The Clinical Standards Advisory Group report on Schizophrenia;

The report of the Mental Health Nursing Review Team;

Services for the Mental Health of Children and Young People in England: A National Review;

GP Fundholding

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many general practitioners in (a) the Ealing, North constituency and (b) the remainder of the London borough of Ealing are fundholders; how much cash is involved in each case; and if he will make a statement. [41770]

Mr. Malone: The information available centrally for Ealing, Hammersmith and Hounslow family health services authority indicates that 67 general practitioners are fundholders. For further information, I refer my hon. Friend to Sir William Staveley, the chairman of North Thames regional health authority.

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his oral answer of 31 October, Official Report, column 90, if he will list the repeated independent assessments of the substantial savings and improved patient care achieved by general practitioner fundholders to which he referred. [41927]

Mr. Malone: Considerable independent research into the general practitioner fundholding scheme has been carried out by a number of people and organisations—for example, Professor Howard Glennerster, Professor Julian Le Grand, Professor John Howie, the King's Fund, the National Audit Office and the Office of Economic Co-operation and Development.

Mental Health Services (Coventry)

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many patients with mental illness were treated at Walsgrave hospital in each year since 1990; [41603]

(2) how many rehabilitative beds for mental health patients have been lost during the past year in Walsgrave hospital, Coventry. [41600]

Mr. Bowis: Walsgrave hospital did not have a mental illness specialty for the years in question.

Mr. Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many staff with responsibility for mental health in Walsgrave hospital, Coventry, have left their post in the last year; [41599]

(2) if he will make a statement on projected mental health provision at Walsgrave Hospital. [41601]

Mr. Bowis: These are matters for the Walsgrave Hospitals national health service trust. The hon. Member may wish to contact the chairman of the trust for this information.

Mr. Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people in Coventry require hospital treatment for mental illness. [41602]

Mr. Bowis: Coventry health authority is responsible for purchasing mental health services for the people of Coventry. The hon. Member may wish to contact the chairman of the authority for this information.

Mr. Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many representations from mental health organisations he has received expressing concern about the level of mental health provision in (a) Coventry and (b) England and Wales in the last year. [41604]

Mr. Bowis: We receive many representations on a wide variety of mental health subjects.

Community Care

Mrs. Lait: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people have been refused community care in East Sussex without a reassessment of their needs since the introduction of the current scheme. [41235]

Mr. Bowis: This information is not available centrally. My hon. Friend may wish to contact the chairman of social services for that county.

Child Care

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the average cost of keeping a child in local authority care for one year. [41501]

Mr. Bowis: The latest estimates available centrally are for 1992–93 and relate to the average annual gross expenditure by local authorities on children looked after in foster placements and in residential accommodation. These were £7,100 and £45,200 respectively.

Injection Pens

Mr. Heppell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to make (a) injector pens and (b) needles for injector pens available on the NHS for people with diabetes. [41993]

Mr. Malone: Disposable injection pens are available on general practitioner prescription and manufacturers supply reusable ones to people with diabetes through hospital diabetic clinics. There are no plans to make reusable pens and needles prescribable by GPs.

NHS Treatments

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list all the treatments that are available on the NHS; and if he will specify for each health authority area what treatments are available on the NHS and what treatments are available only privately. [41990]

Mr. Sackville: This information is not available centrally.

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to establish a national database which lists, by health authority area, which treatments are available on the NHS and which treatments are available only privately. [41989]

Mr. Sackville: None.

NHS Pension

Mrs. Anne Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to extend the NHS pension provision to practice nurses and other practice staff who are contracted to a practitioner rather than to the NHS direct. [41885]

Mr. Malone: This matter is currently under consideration.

Property Dealings

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list which health authorities and trusts have lost money as a result of property dealings as described in a memorandum from Mr. Brian Marsden, deputy director of the NHS executive's finance and performance directorate to all trust and health authority chief executives on 30 September; if he will list which private organisations were involved in each case and the amount of money lost in each case; and if he will make a statement. [41984]

Mr. Sackville: It would not be appropriate to comment on leaked confidential documents.

Hospices

Mr. Rathbone: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what guidelines are issued by his Department for the allocation of capitation weighted funding to hospices outside a health authority's geographic area; [41978]

2) if he will make a statement on the relationship between capitation weighted funding for hospices by health authorities and the cost of core services provided by these hospices. [41979]

Mr. Sackville: The Department issues guidance to health authorities and total purchasing pilot general practice fundholders on the purchase of hospice and palliative care services. The Department does not issue specific guidance on the use of general allocations for this purpose as this is a matter for local determination.

The weighted capitation formula is used to inform allocations to health authorities for hospital and community health services. The national formula uses forecast resident population adjusted for age, relative health need and the geographical variation in the cost of providing services.

It is then for health authorities to purchase health care for their resident population taking account of local circumstances and characteristics, and within the framework of national policies and priorities.

Purchasing Plans

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will place in the Library copies of all the health care purchasing plans agreed by every health commission and health authority in England in the last two years. [41991]

Mr. Malone: Copies of health authorities' purchasing plans are not available centrally. The plans are available on request from individual health authorities.

Expenditure

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list, for each year since 1992, the average cost to the NHS and community centre services of someone aged (a) under five, b) five to 15, (c) 16 to 24, (d) 25 to 44, (e) 45 to 64, (f) 65 to 84), (g) 85 or over and (h) 16 to 64 overall; and if he will provide estimates for the number of people in those age groups of each sex and in total and the respective average cost to the NHS and community care services for each group in 2000, 2010 and 2020. [41983]

Mr. Sackville: The information available on the average estimated cost per head to the national health service by age is shown in the table. Information on personal social services expenditure by age group is not available centrally.

Notes:

1. Figures are expressed in real terms at 1993–94 prices.
2. The figures are per head of population and cover expenditure on hospital and community health services and family health services only.
3. A more detailed breakdown is not available for total NHS expenditure.

Population projections for the years 2000, 2010 and 2020 are shown in the table. No estimates have been made of expenditure by age for these years.

Oral Contraceptives

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the dates and those attending the meetings he or his officials have held with those companies involved in the marketing of third generation oral contraceptives containing gestodene and desogestrel since the statement made by the Committee for Proprietary Medicinal Products on 27 October. [41488]

Mr. Sackville: No meetings have taken place between the Medicines Control Agency and pharmaceutical companies regarding oral contraceptives containing desogestrel or gestodene since October 27.

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for health further to his oral contraceptive statement of 23 October, Official Report, column 701–2, if he will review the advice given to general practitioners and family planning professionals in the light of the statement made by the CPMP on 27 October, concerning those oral contraceptives which contain gestodene and desogestrel. [41487]

Mr. Sackville: The Committee for Proprietary Medicinal Products assessment makes it clear that, on the basis of three studies, oral contraceptives containing desogestrel or gestodene are associated with an increased risk of venous thromboembolism. Its position statement also envisages that it may be appropriate to inform doctors and women about the risks of oral contraceptives but it does not specify what information should be provided about the increased risk of venous thromboembolism. This and the fact that the CPMP's statement is not a binding opinion indicates that it is a mater for individual member states to deal with based on their particular prevailing circumstances.

The advice recently given by the Committee on Safety of Medicines on oral contraceptives containing desogestrel or gestodene has been reviewed in the light of the CPMP's statements. The action we have taken in the United Kingdom is consistent with the CPMP's statements and therefore no additional action is necessary at present. The matter will be kept under close review in the light of any new scientific evidence which may emerge.

NHS Expenditure

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if expenditure on the national health service in 1995–96, in cash terms, will exceed the planned amount, as set out in the "Financial Statement and Budget Report, 1995–96"; and if he will make a statement. [41802]

Mr. Sackville: Government spending on the national health service in 1995–96 is currently expected to be in line with the plan set out in the "Financial Statement and Budget Report".

Sir John Stanley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what was the expenditure on the national health service in 1979; and what is at present on a cash basis; [41872]

(2) what has been the percentage change in real terms in expenditure on the national health service between 1979 and the current year. [41877]

Mr. Sackville: Total national health service expenditure has risen from £6,273 million in 1978–79 to an estimated £31,974 million in 1995–96, an increase of 69.7 per cent. in real terms.

Advertising

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if he will make a statement on the future of the referral system following changes to rules governing advertising by doctors; [41632]

(2) what is his policy regarding the control of advertising of medical services; and if he will make a statement. [41633]

Mr. Malone: I will write to the hon. and learned Member.

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list by type of project (a) how many schemes have been approved to date under the public finance initiative, (b) what is the value of those schemes and (c) what public sector contribution will be required both initially and as revenue support during the lifetime of the schemes. [41741]

Mr. Sackville: For information on the number and type of schemes approved under the private finance initiative, and the value of those schemes, I refer the hon. Member to the reply which I gave the hon. and learned Member for Montgomery (Mr. Carlile) on 6 November.

Public sector contributions will depend upon the performance of the private sector in each individual contract awarded.

Microbiological Food Safety

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much Government funding is being put into research into E. coli 0157 in the current financial year; and what plans he has to increase the amount of Government-funded research into this bacteria. [41639]

Mr. Sackville: The Government are spending just over £0.5 million on research into E. coli 0157 in the current financial year and an overall total of nearly £1.5 million up to March 1998. Further substantial funding is planned over the next two to three years.

Psychiatric Beds

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many psychiatric beds have been lost in each region in each of the last five years; and what are the planned numbers for further closure. [41942]

Mr. Bowis: The information available is published in "Bed Availability for England", copies of which are available in the Library.

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement in respect of the number of children occupying adult psychiatric beds (a) nationally, (b) regionally and (c) at health authority level in each of the last five years. [41946]

Mr. Bowis: This information is not available centrally.

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many children's psychiatric beds have been available in each of the last three years (a) nationally, (b) regionally and (c) by health authority. [41940]

Mr. Bowis: I refer the hon. Member to "Bed Availability for England", a copy of which is available in the Library.

Residential Care

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 31 October, Official Report, column 208, what is the estimated cost in a full year of raising the threshold for contribution to the cost of residential care for the elderly from £8,000 to (a) £10,000, (b) £12,000, (c) £14,000 and (d) £16,000, assuming that the total capital disregard figure (i) remains at £3,000 and (ii) is increased to £6,000. [41928]

Mr. Bowis: The table shows the estimated increased cost in a full year to local authorities personal social services expenditure of placing elderly people into residential care homes[1].

Estimates have been made on the basis of generalised data from the elderly population as a whole and are a guide only. The figures quoted do not take account of any possible effects of such changes on Department of Social Security expenditure, or of demographic changes. Such estimates would also depend on the rate of tariff income between the upper and lower thresholds.

Illustrative figures for raising thresholds to:

(£ million England)

Upper threshold £	Lower threshold– £3,000	Lower threshold– £6,000
10,000	3	20
12,000	4	22
14,000	5	23
16,000	7	25

[1] Figures do not include residents in nursing homes.

Personal Social Services

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what has been the level of spending on personal social services, discounting the effects of the special transitional grant and other specific grants, for (a) the elderly, (b) children, (c) those with learning disabilities, (d) young physically disabled persons, (e) mentally ill persons and (f) others. [41982]

Mr. Bowis: The information requested is not available centrally.

Care Homes (Abuse)

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many investigations have been undertaken in each of the last five years into abuse of residents in (a) children's, (b) residential and (c) nursing homes; and what have been the outcomes. [41944]

Mr. Bowis: This information is not available centrally.

Spending Statistics

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 30 October, Official Report, column 47, on spending statistics, when figures for (a) 1994–95 and (b) 1995–96 will be available. [41953]

Mr. Malone: Figures for 1994–95 will be published shortly. No decisions have yet been made on the timing of publication of figures for 1995–96.

Capital Expenditure

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 30 October, Official Report, column 34–35. on capital expenditure, when 1994–95 figures will be available. [41952]

Mr. Sackville: Provisional figures are expected to be available by the end of November 1995.

Mental Hospitals

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many mental hospitals have closed in each region during each of the last five years; and what further closures are planned. [41941]

Mr. Bowis: Information is available on the closure of large mental illness hospitals in the report "Survey of English Mental Hospitals March 1994—Monitoring the Closure of the Water Towers, copies of which are available in the Library.

Community Psychiatric Nurses

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is his Department's recommended level of community psychiatric nurses per head of population. [41945]

Mr. Bowis: Decisions on appropriate staffing levels are for local managers. They are in the best position to determine the number of staff needed in the light of local circumstances.

Dental Services

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the average annual payment, for each of the last three years for which figures are available, for patients who paid for NHS dental treatment, per family health service authority. [39799]

Mr. Malone [holding answer 30 October 1995]: I will write to the hon. and learned Member.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT ADMINISTRATION

China

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps he takes to ensure that no United Kingdom aid to China disbursed via the World bank or EC involves the use of forced labour camps in Chinese prison camps. [41278]

Mr. Hanley: We have no evidence to suggest that either World bank or EC funding for projects in China has involved the use of forced labour. The World bank, however, is taking very seriously recent allegations about links between a World bank-funded project in Xinjiang province and labour camps and has launched an investigation of the claims, while confirming that it would not condone lending for projects involving the use of forced labour.

OECD Countries (Aid Expenditure)

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what has been the per capita spending on overseas aid in the last year for which figures are available for each member country of the OECD. [41263]

Mr. Hanley: The table gives a breakdown of OECD member countries' per capita spending on overseas aid for 1994.

OECD members' per capita spending on overseas aid

	1994 Net oda US$ millions	1993 Population (millions)	US$ Per capita expenditure

Brazil

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what monitoring is being carried out by the British Government on the spending of G7 money on the G7 financed pilot plan for the Amazon, and if he will make a statement on the steps being taken to protect the Makuxi Indian people in Brazil. [41823]

Mr. Hanley [holding answer 6 November 1995]: Britain contributes to the pilot plan trust fund, which is managed by the World bank and monitored by an independent international advisory group. We attend regular meetings of participants and in-country co-ordination. One component of the pilot plan is a project to protect indigenous peoples and their lands.

Cash Limits

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what proposals he has to change the Overseas Development Administration cash limits for 1995–96. [41142]

Mr. Hanley [pursuant to his reply, 31 October 1995, c. 140]: The answer should have read: "Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary supplementary estimate, the cash limit on the external assistance vote (class II, vote 5) will be increased by £4,919,000 from £1,759,358,000 to £1,764,277,000. The increase is in respect of rollover of underspending against the 1994–95 external assistance vote. The increase will be offset by a claim on the reserve and will not, therefore, add to the planned total of public expenditure. The cash limit includes the cost of services provided in connection with the privatisation of the Crown Agents. This expenditure is not included in the control total".

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Grants

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food for what grant-giving funds his Department is responsible requiring a private sector contribution where the use of national lottery funds is not allowed to count towards that private sector portion. [3595]

Mr. Boswell: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to him by my hon. Friend the Member for Harwich (Mr. Sproat) on 31 October 1995, Official Report, columns 186–87.

Racing Pigeons

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement regarding the use of drugs in pigeon racing, and what discussions he has had with the Belgian Minister of Agriculture regarding the situation in Belgium. [40681]

Mrs. Browning: Veterinary medicines for racing pigeons are subject to the normal controls on the manufacture, sale and supply of veterinary medicines. No product may be marketed in the United Kingdom other than in accordance with a marketing authorisation, issued following an assessment by the independent Veterinary Products Committee against the statutory scientific criteria of safety, quality and efficacy.

The Veterinary Medicines Directorate has pursued reports of illegal sales in the UK to pigeon fanciers of veterinary medicines imported from the Community and will continue to follow up and further reports that may be received.

I understand that the Belgian authorities are concerned about the misuse of veterinary medicines to enhance the performance of racing pigeons and are putting in place legislation to test birds for drug misuse. The Ministry has no evidence of pigeon fanciers in the UK misusing drugs on their birds in order to enhance their performance.

If the hon. Member has a specific concern, I will be happy to look into it if he could write to me with the details.

Departmental Buildings, Clwyd

Mr. Hanson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment he has undertaken of the safety of the site, grounds and infrastructure of his Department's former buildings at Rhydymwyn, Clwyd. [41243]

Mr. Boswell: Dames and Moore, environmental consultants commissioned by Drivers Jonas, acting on behalf of my Department, produced an environmental assessment of the Valley factory site at Rhydymwyn in May 1994. This is under consideration. There is no danger to local residents so long as they do not trespass on the site.

Mr. Hanson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he intends to publish proposals for the use of his Department's former buildings at Rhydymwyn, Clwyd. [41240]

Mr. Boswell: A report jointly commissioned by my Department, the Welsh Development Agency and Delyn borough council on the remediation of the site is expected by the summer of 1996. Proposals will be published as soon as agreement with those with a direct interest in the site has been reached.

Mr. Hanson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what discussions his Department has had with the National Rivers Authority regarding toxic waste entering the watercourse at Rhydymwyn, Clwyd, from his Department's former buildings on site. [41241]

Mr. Boswell: Representatives from the National Rivers Authority were present at a meeting between Ministry officials and Delyn borough council in March 1995 to discuss the site. The NRA has been given the results of the environmental consultants' investigations. I understand that the NRA has a monitoring point on the site which has been in place for some years. However, the NRA has not indicated to the Ministry that it is concerned about water quality within the watercourse.

Mr. Hanson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what discussions his Department has had with the Welsh Development Agency regarding the future use of his Department's factory at Rhydymwyn, Clwyd. [41242]

Mr. Boswell: Officials from my Department have met the Welsh Development Agency on two occasions. My Department continues to work closely with both WDA and Delyn borough council with a view to reaching agreement on the future of the site.

Cheese

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will publish for England and for the United Kingdom the total volume of cheese production in tonnes and in pounds sterling at constant 1995 prices for each of the last three years. [41464]

Mrs. Browning: The total volume of cheese production in the United Kingdom for the years in question was as follows.

Year	Production 000 tonnes
1992	327
1993	333
1994	331

Production statistics for England alone are not available. We do not routinely monitor the monetary value of UK cheese production.

Training Courses, North-west

Mr. Pickthall: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the institutions in the north-west offering (a) agricultural and (b) horticultural training; and if he will make a statement on the nature of the courses; and if he will list the number of places offered and the number of vacancies. [41493]

Mr. Boswell: In the north-west of England, Myerscough college, Preston, and Newton Rigg college, Penrith, offer a variety of agricultural and horticultural courses leading to the attainment of degrees, diplomas, certificates and national vocational qualifications. A full list and details of the courses, including places offered and vacancies, can be obtained from the colleges themselves. Alternatively, the "Directory of Courses in Land-Based Industries", published by the farming press, contains comprehensive information on all full-time and sandwich courses currently available in the land-based industries.

Details of training courses and providers can be obtained from the Industry Training Organisation for Agriculture and Commercial Horticulture, ATB-Landbase Limited, based at the National Agricultural Centre, Stoneleigh, Kenilworth, Warwickshire, CV8 2LG, telephone 01203 696996.

Microbiological Food Safety

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what research his Department has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated into E. coli 0157 bacteria in the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement. [41638]

Mrs. Browning: The Department is supporting, and will continue to support, research on this important food poisoning organism, including the detection of the organism and conditions leading to its growth, survival and death in foods. In addition, research is also directed at gaining a greater understanding of the incidence of the organism in cattle and its carriage into the food chain.

In formulating future research priorities in this area, the Department will take account of the recommendations for research on this organism identified by the independent advisory committee on the microbiological safety of food in its report published in June of this year. In producing the report, the advisory committee evaluated all the scientific information on this organism which was currently available. Officials will continue to assess new developments in this area in conjunction with colleagues in the Department of Health.

Coastal Protection

Mrs. Helen Jackson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the projects, their location and cost funded last year and the year before from his budget on coastal protection. [41691]

Mr. Boswell: The Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food is responsible for flood and coastal defence policy in England. The Ministry administers the Coast Protection Act 1949 and provides financial assistance for approved capital works, and studies, undertaken by coast protection authorities to protect land from erosion and encroachment by the sea. A list of the schemes approved for grant aid and supplementary credit approval to enable authorities to borrow to cover the residual costs in the 1993–94 and 1994–95 financial years is as follows:

Rules and Regulations

Mr. Steen: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the rules and regulations he proposes to repeal or amend by means of a reference to the Deregulation Committee before the end of 1995; and if he will make a statement. [41537]

Mr. Boswell [holding answer 6 November 1995]: I refer my hon. Friend to the oral answer given by my right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade on 6 November 1995, Official Report, column 490.

Mr. Steen: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what regulations his Department proposes to repeal by the end of 1995; if he proposes to conduct a compliance cost assessment on each regulation repealed; and what is the estimated cost of undertaking a compliance cost assessment to assess the advantages or disadvantages of such a repeal. [41557]

Mr. Boswell [holding answer 6 November 1995]: Examples of regulations which are expected to be brought forward for repeal this year include a series of national measures relating to food composition and food additives and contaminants.

The requirement to carry out a cost compliance assessment applies to regulations which impose additional burdens on business while the programme of repeals and amendments is concerned with reducing the burden.

Mr. Steen: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the estimated saving to the Exchequer by the repeal of each rule and regulation which has so far been the subject of a reference to the Deregulation Committee from his Department; and in how many cases a compliance cost assessment has been carried out. [41538]

Mr. Boswell [holding answer 6 November 1995]: My Department has laid two draft deregulation proposals to date, removing certain burdens under the Corn Returns Act 1882 and in relation to slaughterhouses. No estimate has been made of the likely savings to the Exchequer as a result of these proposed orders, but they are likely to be small.

The explanatory document which is presented to the committee alongside each draft order is required to contain an assessment of the cost of savings to business and any other persons whom the draft order is intended to benefit.

Cash Limits

Mrs. Currie: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what changes are proposed in his Department's cash limits for 1995–96. [40630]

Mr. Douglas Hogg [pursuant to his reply, 27 October 1995, c. 828–29]: I should like to add that the running costs limit for the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food will increase by £5,278,000, from £329,416,000 to £334,694,000.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Nuclear Weapons

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what communications his Department has had from the World court project since June on the action started on 30 October at the International Court of Justice in The Hague on the legality of nuclear weapons. [41471]

Mr. David Davis: The World court project United Kingdom wrote to us on 26 September 1995. A reply was sent.

Argentina

Mr. Allason: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans there are to return the British Council library to Buenos Aires. [41644]

Sir Nicholas Bonsor: The British Council has never had its own library in Argentina. The library in Buenos Aires belonged to the Buenos Aires Cultura—Anglo-Argentine cultural association. That still exists but is no longer co-located with the Council. The British Council continues to work closely with the Culturas throughout Argentina to meet the needs for books in English.

Northern Cyprus

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs with whom he has discussed the education facilities for young people over the age of 16 years who live in the Karpas area of occupied northern Cyprus; and if he will make a statement on what facilities and regulations apply to such youngsters who are seeking further and high education. [41854]

Mr. David Davis: The high commission and British Council office in Nicosia maintain regular contact with the Cypriot education authorities. In the Karpas area, there is a middle school in the town of Galacia, and high schools in the towns of Trikomo and Yialousa. There is also a vocational high school covering the Karpas area. There are four universities in northern Cyprus, with a total enrolment of around 13,000.

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the number of children under the age of 18 years who are now living in the Karpas area of occupied northern Cyprus. [41855]

Mr. Davis: We have no information on this subject. There has been no census in northern Cyprus since 1992, and detailed census figures are not made publicly available.

Nigeria

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list, with dates of implementation, all European and international action and agreements to which the United Kingdom Government are party, that have been taken against the Nigerian military regime. [41338]

Mr. Hanley: In response to the annulment of the presidential elections in 1993, and the subsequent return to power of the military government, we and our European partners introduced a series of measures against the Nigerian military. The details of those measures were set out in an answer to the hon. Member for Clydebank and Milngavie (Mr. Worthington) on 2 December 1993, Official Report, column 680.

Mr. Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the dates and content of meetings that Her Majesty's Government have had with representatives of the Nigerian military regime since 17 November 1993. [41351]

Mr. Hanley: There have been no meetings between British Ministers and members of the Nigerian military regime in either Britain or Nigeria since the European Union adopted its measures in December 1993. There has been occasional contact in the margins of international meetings in third countries. Contact has been maintained at official level in furtherance of British policy towards Nigeria.

Mr. Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on Her Majesty's Government's policy towards Nigeria's military regime including details of the policy towards arms sales to the regime and its relation to European Union agreements. [41352]

Mr. Hanley: We continue to press for an early return to democratic civilian rule and a restoration of full human rights in Nigeria. In line with EU measures agreed with our partners against the Nigerian military in December 1993, all applications for new licences for the export of defence equipment to Nigeria have been reviewed case by case, with the presumption of denial. We are keeping these measures under review in the light of progress towards civilian democratic rule.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to the Government of Nigeria concerning the death penalty ordered against Ken Saro-Wiwa and others; and if he will make a statement. [42002]

Mr. Fraser: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if his Department will make representations to the Government of Nigeria about the death sentence imposed on Ken Saro-Wiwa. [41465]

Mr. Hanley: I refer the hon. Members to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Stretford (Mr. Lloyd) on 1 November, Official Report, column 266.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what contact he has had with the United Kingdom embassy in Lagos concerning the safety of Abdul Onibiyo following his recent deportation from the United Kingdom. [42004]

Mr. Hanley: Her Majesty's high commission in Lagos has had no contact with Mr. Onibiyo since his removal from the United Kingdom.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what meetings have been held by Her Majesty's ambassador in Lagos to discuss human rights; and if he will make a statement. [42001]

Mr. Hanley: Her Majesty's high commissioner in Lagos has regular meetings with representatives of non-governmental human rights organisations. Human rights issues are also raised regularly with the Nigerian authorities and discussed at meetings of European Union heads of mission in Lagos.

Burundi

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what information he has received about a massacre of Hutus near Ngozi in Burundi; and what representations his Government have made to the Government of Burundi. [41998]

Mr. Hanley: The UN secretariat has reported to the Security Council that a number of people have been killed in recent operations involving guerilla forces and the Burundi army, including 50 deaths at Ngozi. Together with our partners in the EU, we continue to give our strong backing to the efforts of the UN and OAU to assist the moderate and broad-based government, and bring an end to the inter-ethnic violence in Burundi.

Sudan

Mr. Pickthall: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps he is taking to influence the Government of the Sudan to prevent the persecution of Christians and Animists in southern Sudan. [41634]

Mr. Hanley: We continue to express our concerns about the human rights situation in Sudan to the Sudanese Government, bilaterally, with EU partners, and through the United Nations. My right hon. and learned Friend the Foreign Secretary raised the subject with the Sudanese ambassador on 13 September, as I did on 2 August.

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list by type of project (a) how many schemes have been approved to date under the private finance initiative, (b) what is the value of those schemes and (c) what public sector contribution will be required both initially and as revenue support during the lifetime of the schemes. [41740]

Mr. Hanley: The Foreign and Commonwealth Office, including the Overseas Development Administration, has not yet approved any schemes under the private finance initiative. All new capital spend is considered under the PFI, including spending on home and overseas estate, information technology and other technical equipment.

Scott Inquiry

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many persons in the Secret Intelligence Service and at GCHQ are on the public payroll or employed as consultants or advisers and work on a part-time or a full-time basis in relation to the Scott inquiry, and how much each is paid. [42051]

Mr. Hanley: There are no staff in the Secret Intelligence Service or at GCHQ wholly employed on matters relating to the Scott inquiry. It is not possible to identify the number of people involved on a part-time or occasional basis within the Department or as external consultants or advisers, nor is it our practice to comment on financial matters relating to the security and intelligence agencies or to name their staff or external advisers.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many persons in his Department are on the public payroll or employed as consultants or advisers and work on a part-time or full-time basis in relation to the Scott inquiry; if he will list them; and how much each is paid. [42049]

Mr. Hanley: The number of Foreign and Commonwealth Office staff wholly employed on matters relating to the Scott inquiry is three and their annual salary cost is £74,539, at 1994–95 rates. It is not possible to identify the number of people involved on a part-time or occasional basis within the Department or as external consultants or advisers, but the amount so far spent by this Department on external advice is £318,165.46. It is not the practice to name staff or external advisers.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many persons have been authorised to have access to documents held by the Secret Intelligence Service and GCHQ relating to the Scott inquiry; and if he will list such persons. [42052]

Mr. Hanley: Ministers, former Ministers, officials and other advisers have access to material relating to the inquiry as necessary in order to carry out their responsibilities.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many persons have been authorised to have access to documents held by his Department relating to the Scott inquiry; and if he will list such persons. [42050]

Mr. Hanley: Ministers, former Ministers, officials and other advisers have access to material relating to the inquiry as necessary in order to carry out their responsibilities.

Harjit Singh

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when his officers last contacted the Indian authorities concerning the progress of the court case into the disappearance of Harjit Singh; and what was the outcome of their representations. [42098]

Mr. Hanley: We remain in touch with the Indian authorities about the case of Harjit Singh. The final court hearing was held on 29 August. Judgment is now awaited.

Bankruptcy

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many petitions for bankruptcy have been begun by his Department for businesses with under 500 employees in each of the last five years. [40524]

Mr. Hanley [holding answer 1 November 1995]: None.

Annual Remuneration

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will estimate the number of individuals in his (a) Department, (b) agencies and (c) non departmental public bodies whose annual remuneration including benefits in kind exceeded (i) £100,000, (ii) £200,000, (iii) £300,000 in (1) 1985–86, (2) 1990–91, (3) 1992–93, (4) 1994–95 and (5) 1995–96. [40808]

Mr. Hanley [holding answer 1 November 1995]: Other than pension contributions, benefits in kind are not normally paid to staff in the Department, agencies and NDPBs. As members of the principal civil service pensions scheme, staff receive benefits in accordance with the scheme rules, which have been deposited in the Library of the House. The number receiving annual remuneration above the sums specified, excluding pension benefits in the years in question, were:

	1985–86	1990–91	1992–93	1994–95	1995–96
(i)	none	none	1	1	1
(ii)	none	none	none	none	none
(iii)	none	none	none	none	none

Salaries

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what was the (a) the lowest and (b) the highest full-time salary paid to any employee in his (i) Department, (ii) agencies and (iii) non departmental public bodies in (1) 1994–95 and (2) 1995–96. [40809]

Mr. Hanley [holding answer 1 November 1995]: It is the Government's normal policy to publish civil servants' salaries in bands. Accordingly, the lowest full-time salary for the Foreign and Commonwealth Office fell within the band:

	1994–95 £	1995–96 £
The lowest full-time salary fell within the band	7,000–12,000	7,000–12,000
The highest full-time salary fell within the band	106,000-111,000	110,000-115,000
At the agency Wilton Park, the lowest full-time salary fell within the band	7,000-12,000	7,000-12,000
At the agency Wilton Park, the highest full-time salary fell within the band	39,000-44,000	39,000-44,000
For Non-Departmental Public Bodies, the lowest full-time salary fell within the band	7,000-10,000	7,000-10,000

	1994–95 £	1995–96 £
For Non-Departmental Public Bodies, the highest full-time salary fell within the band	85,000-89,999	90,000-94,999

European Court Decisions

Sir Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to the oral answer of the Attorney-General of 30 October, Official Report, column 12, relating to decisions of the European Court of Justice and the European Court of Human Rights, if he will list those European Court decisions relating to responsibilities of his Department over the past two years; and if he will further indicate the estimated annual cost to public funds of each decision. [41207]

Mr. David Davis [holding answer 2 November 1995]: The table contains a list of the judgments in cases before the European Court of Justice and the European Court of Human Rights in which UK Departments have participated since 16 October 1993. The UK has also gained from ECJ decisions, or the threat of court action in cases involving other member states, such as the penalties incurred by the Italian and Spanish Governments for breaching the EC milk quota regulations.

I refer the hon. Gentleman to the reply given by the Attorney General on 30 October, Official Report, column 12-14. This answer included nine cases concerning the 1968 Convention on Jurisdiction and the Enforcement of Judgments in which the UK chose to submit written observations. In none of these cases was the UK a party and there was therefore no question of paying legal costs to another party, or compensation.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Greenbury Report

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what is the Government's response to the recommendations addressed to them in the report by the study group on directors' remuneration chaired by Sir Richard Greenbury. [42094]

Mr. Lang: The study group on directors' remuneration chaired by Sir Richard Greenbury published its report on 17 July. In an oral statement to the House that day, Official Report, columns 1311–12, I set out the Government's initial response, welcoming the group's work and the emphasis placed by its report on the need for pay to be justified by performance. The support which the report has commanded since its publication, and the fact that those to whom the report is addressed have already begun to act upon its recommendations, are further confirmation both of the value of the group's work and of the effectiveness of the self-regulatory approach that it promotes.

In the short time since the recommendations were published, it has become clear that the Greenbury report will do much to improve accountability and communication with shareholders, and to foster best practice in setting executive remuneration.

The Government welcome the stock exchange's agreement to enforce the Greenbury recommendations through its listing rules, which are binding on listed companies. Since publication of the report, the stock exchange has consulted on the wording of amendments to its listing rules designed to give effect to recommendations contained in the Greenbury report relating to the determination and disclosure of executive directors' remuneration and the explanation of company policy on executive remuneration. The stock exchange has now issued amended listing rules, which will come into effect for reporting periods ending on or after 31 December 1995. It is undertaking further consultation on incorporating other aspects of the Greenbury recommendations into its rules.

The Greenbury recommendations are primarily addressed to listed companies whose shares are traded widely, and the decision of the stock exchange to amend the listing rules is therefore an appropriate way forward. The Government do not propose to duplicate these requirements in legislation, but will seek to ensure that the legislation relating to disclosure of directors' remuneration is consistent with the Greenbury recommendations as implemented through the listing rules. In particular, the Government accept the recommendation that the Companies Act 1985 should be amended to remove overlap with the group's recommendations for full disclosure of directors' remuneration. We also note the conclusions reached by the Greenbury group on the disclosure of pension entitlements, and the recommendation that the information which companies supply on directors' pension entitlements should reflect the value of the pension entitlements to the director, rather than the pension contributions made by the company. We accept the recommendation that the Government should review the Companies Act requirements for disclosure of information on directors' pensions once the technical issues raised by the Greenbury recommendation have been resolved and companies are able to make the new form of disclosure.

We will undertake public consultation on detailed proposals for amending the Companies Act by statutory instrument, which will take account of these two specific recommendations and more generally will ensure consistency of approach between the Companies Act requirements and the Greenbury recommendations.

My right hon. and learned Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer has announced his intention to make amendments to the rules on the taxation of executive share options in the next Finance Bill.

The Government welcome the emphasis which the Greenbury report places on accountability to shareholders. We recognise the need to ensure that both institutional investors and private shareholders can continue to play their part in the affairs of the companies in which they invest. A company's annual general meeting provides a focus for shareholder involvement, particularly for private shareholders. Recent events have demonstrated the importance which shareholders rightly attach to the opportunity offered by the annual general meeting to express their views and to debate issues of general concern to the company. This is a matter to which the Employment Select Committee drew particular attention in its recent report on the remuneration of directors and chief executives of privatised utilities. The committee recommended that the Companies Act should be amended to require shareholders' resolutions, where they are supported by a sufficient number of shareholders and are limited in length, to be circulated by the company to all shareholders without cost. The Government will next year be seeking views on the existing statutory rules under which shareholders may table resolutions for discussion at general meetings, and whether any amendments are necessary in order to ensure that the arrangements work effectively without imposing undue burdens either on the company or on its shareholders.

Export Credits Guarantee Department

Mr. John Marshall: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement about the arrangements for providing Export Credits Guarantee Department support to Jordan. [42228]

Mr. Lang: I have been advised by the Export Credits Guarantee Department's accounting officer that, in his view, the risks involved in giving medium-term guarantees for exports to, and investments in, Jordan under sections 1(1) and 2 of the Export and Investment Guarantees Act 1991 do not meet ECGD's normal underwriting criteria.

However, in view of the importance which the Government attach to assisting the economic development of Jordan, given its key role in the middle east peace process, I have instructed him to make arrangements for such guarantees to be issued in support of commercially viable projects which will benefit Jordan's economy. These guarantees will be excluded from ECGD's break-even objective for new business.

European Space Agency Council

Mr. Duncan Smith: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement about the outcome of the recent European Space Agency ministerial Council at Toulouse. [42229]

Mr. Ian Taylor: I attended the meeting at ministerial level of the European Space Agency Council in Toulouse on 19 October. Important decisions were taken which will reinforce ESA's contribution to the UK's industrial and scientific goals for space and to European space collaboration generally. My ministerial colleagues and I agreed unanimously to set a level for the ESA science programme capped at 347 million ESA accounting units a year for 1996-2000, except to the extent that inflation exceeds 3 per cent.—that is, some 15 per cent. below earlier proposals. This decision was vital to allow the Particle Physics and Astronomy Research Council to devote adequate resources to domestic scientific activity which exploits the opportunities provided by the ESA programme. We endorsed the introduction of reforms to ESA's procurement practices and to internal management and structures, including a 12 per cent. staff reduction, which will significantly improve the agency's value for money and contribution to industrial competitiveness. We further agreed to develop and bring forward proposals in a year's time on industrial policy, including reforms to the agency's system of geographical industrial return. The ecu was adopted as ESA's unit of account, for both national contributions and contracts with industry, a change which also brings about the end of the system of retroactive exchange rate adjustments to member states' contributions. Agreement was reached on the European contribution to the international space station, in which the UK does not participate, and on the Ariane complementary programmes for which I indicated political support. A further formal ministerial meeting was envisaged to take space in Belgium in 1998, together with an informal meeting at the end of next year.

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Betts: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list by type of project (a) how many schemes have been approved to date under the private finance initiative, (b) what is the value of those schemes and (c) what public sector contribution will be required both initially and as revenue support during the lifetime of the schemes. [41747]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: Private finance was used in the refurbishment of the DTI's premises at 1 Victoria street and the relocation of the Radiocommunications Agency to South Quay 3 in docklands. These projects were valued at £68 million and £5.5 million respectively and were completed in the current financial year. Commercial rents will be paid in respect of the buildings. No further projects have yet been approved under PFI but all DTI projects are now considered under the initiative and likely proposals have been identified.

Export Licences

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if the practice not to disclose details of export licences has precluded providing information on the country of origin and destination of goods which are the subject of trans-shipment licences on every occasion that applications for such information has been made in 1993. [42018]

Mr. Nelson: To ascertain whether the practice precluded the provision of such information in 1993 would involve disproportionate cost. I would refer the hon. Member to my answer to her on 1 November 1995, Official Report, column 354–35.

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if export licences have been applied for or granted for the export of logging trucks to Jakarta, Indonesia, in the past five years. [42017]

Mr. Nelson: None in the period 1990 to 1995. Examination of manual records for earlier years would entail disproportionate costs.

Electronic Batons (Exports)

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what were the countries of origin and the destinations of the electronic batons which were covered by transhipment licences issued in (a) 1985, (b) 1986, (c) 1987, (d) 1988, (e) 1989 and (f) 1990. [40650]

Mr. Oppenheim: No transhipment licenses for such goods were issued in 1989 or 1990. To confirm the position in respect of the earlier years could be undertaken only at disproportionate cost.

Scott Inquiry

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many persons have been authorised to have access to documents held by his Department and the Export Credits Guarantee Department relating to the Scott inquiry; and if he will list such persons. [42054]

Mr. Nelson: Ministers, former Ministers, officials and other advisers have access to material relating to the inquiry as necessary in order to carry out their responsibilities.

Westcountry Development Corporation

Mr. Harvey: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what consideration the Government have given to the Westcountry development corporation's Coopers and Lybrand report about public sector funding of the south-west; and what action it intends to take in response. [41646]

Mr. Page: The Prime Minister commissioned the regional director of the Government office for the south-west to evaluate the claims made in the Coopers and Lybrand report and to report back. That report is with Ministers. My hon. Friend the Minister for Trade and the Minister for Local Government, Housing and Urban Regeneration are meeting Westcountry development corporation on 5 December to discuss the report. The findings of the report will be made public soon after.

Gas-powered Domestic Water Heaters

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many people have died or been injured by accidents due to a fault in gas-powered domestic water heaters in each of the past four years. [41668]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: The estimated numbers of people receiving treatment at accident and emergency units in the United Kingdom, for injuries from faults in gas-powered water heaters, are presented in the table. The corresponding numbers for fatalities in England and Wales are also given. However the figure for 1993, normally provided by the Office of Population Censuses and Surveys, is not available.

Data year	Non-fatal accidents (UK)	Fatalities (England and Wales)

Nuclear Material (Road Transport)

Mr. MacShane: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what discussions he has had with the Association of Chief Police Officers about escorting nuclear material by road. [41618]

Mr. Page: None. The escort of nuclear materials is carried out, where necessary, by the UK Atomic Energy Authority constabulary, with whom the appropriate arrangements are in place. These include provision for notification of local Home Office and Scottish Office police forces, where appropriate.

GIAT of France

Mr. McWilliam: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what contact there has been between Ministers or civil servants and Royal Ordnance or BAe regarding the setting up of a joint company or other arrangement involving GIAT of France; and if he will make a statement. [41636]

Mr. Eggar: My Department has regular contact with British Aerospace about collaborative opportunities, including possible arrangements between Royal Ordnance and GIAT. These discussions are commercially confidential.

British American Business Groups

Sir Irvine Patnick: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what is the total number of British-American business groups in the United Kingdom with whom his Department is in contact; and if he will make a statement. [41860]

Mr. Nelson: My Department has regular contact with a number of associations in the United Kingdom interested in promoting trade with the USA, including the British-American chamber of commerce in London and the British-American business groups in the north-west and in Bristol.

Consultancy Brokerage Service

Mrs. Roche: To ask the President of the Board of Trade with what he intends to replace the Consultancy Brokerage Service; and at what cost to public funds. [42005]

Mr. Page: The Consultancy Brokerage Service will not be replaced by any centrally driven initiative.

My Department will, however, be working with business links to ensure that they each have in place an acceptable approach to consultant selection. The Department would not rule out a modest contribution to the development of that work but no applications for support have been agreed nor have any funds been allocated.

Manufacturing Labour Costs

Sir John Stanley: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what are the manufacturing labour costs per hour in (a) the United Kingdom, (b) each EU country for which equivalent figures are available, (c) the USA, (d) Canada and (e) Japan at the latest available date. [41871]

Mr. Oppenheim: The information is provided in the table.

International comparisons of hourly compensation costs in US Dollars for production workers in manufacturing, 1994

World Trade (Shares)

Sir John Stanley: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what was the share of world trade held by each of the 20 countries in the world that had the largest shares of world trade in 1979; and if he will provide the equivalent information for the most recent year for which figures are available. [41870]

Mr. Oppenheim: The answer is in the following table:

Shares of world visible exports—20 largest exporters 1979 and 1994

Artillery Shells

Mr. Simpson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what were the number and value of 155 mm shells and cartridges produced for export by the United Kingdom in each of the years 1980 and 1990; and to which countries these items were exported. [42063]

Mr. Nelson: This is a matter for my hon. Friend the Minister of State for Defence Procurement, and I refer the hon. Member to his answer of today.

European Court Decisions

Sir Teddy Taylor: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, pursuant to the reply of the Attorney-General of 30 October, Official Report, column 12 relating to decisions of the European Court of Justice and the European Court of Human Rights, if he will list those European Court decisions relating to responsibilities of his Department over the past two years; and if he will further indicate the estimated annual cost to public funds of each decision. [41206]

Mr. Lang [holding answer 2 November 1995]: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply given to him today by my hon. Friend the Minister of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, the hon. Member for Boothferry (Mr. Davis).

BCCI

Mr. Vaz: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when he last met the liquidators of BCCI to discuss progress with the liquidation. [41288]

Mr. Oppenheim [holding answer 3 November 1995]: My officials last met the joint liquidators on 31 March 1995.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many creditors reports have been published by the liquidators of BCCI. [41289]

Mr. Oppenheim [holding answer 3 November 1995]: Three annual reports to the Secretary of State made under regulation 14 of the Insolvency Regulations 1994 have been made available to the creditors of BCCI. In addition, the joint liquidators have reported to the creditors on specific issues as they have arisen in the liquidation.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement on the outstanding settlement issues in the BCCI liquidation. [41290]

Mr. Oppenheim [holding answer 3 November 1995]: No. These are matters for the joint liquidators.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how much creditors' money is currently held by the liquidators of BCCI. [41291]

Mr. Oppenheim [holding answer 3 November 1995]: The joint liquidators are holding funds of £415 million. Additional sums have been recovered and are held in pool realisation accounts on behalf of the pooled liquidation. Sums held in these accounts currently amount to $694 million.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how much money has been recovered by the liquidators of BCCI since the liquidation commenced. [41292]

Mr. Oppenheim [holding answer 3 November 1995]: The joint liquidators had recovered £694 million since their appointment. In addition, $694 million has been recovered directly into pooled realisation accounts by the liquidators of the pooled liquidation.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how much money has been received by the liquidators of BCCI from (a) the USA settlements (b) other parties and (c) the sale of First American bank. [41291]

Mr. Oppenheim [holding answer 3 November 1995]: The pooled liquidations have received $487 million in respect of American settlements. The liquidators of the pooled liquidations have not yet received any funds from the sale of the First American bank.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what has been the total of fees taken by the liquidators of BCCI, Touche Ross, in respect of the liquidation (a) in dollars, (b) in £ sterling. [41295]

Mr. Oppenheim [holding answer 3 November 1995]: Total authorised fees drawn by the joint liquidators to 15 October 1995 amount to £116 million.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what has been the total fees taken by the solicitors acting for the liquidators of BCCI Messrs Lovell White Durrant in respect of the liquidation (a) in dollars and (b) £ sterling. [41296]

Mr. Oppenheim [holding answer 3 November 1995]: Legal fees paid to Messrs Lovell White Durrant and other solicitors by the joint liquidators amount to approximately £50 million.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when he now expects the creditors of BCCI to receive their first compensation payment. [41297]

Mr. Oppenheim [holding answer 3 November 1995]: The joint liquidators have advised my officials that the timing and amount of any distribution to creditors is dependent on the determination of the appeal currently before the Court in Luxembourg.

Felixstowe-Zeebrugge Ferry Service

Mr. David Porter: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when his Department was first informed of the closure of the P and O ferry service from Felixstowe to Zeebrugge; what steps his officials took to assess the impact of the closure on the economy of Suffolk; and if he will now make a statement. [41082]

Mr. Oppenheim [holding answer 6 November 1995]: My Department was first made aware of the closure of the Felixstowe to Zeebrugge ferry service on 27 September. While regrettable, the closure of the service is a commercial matter for the company. The Government office for eastern region monitors the state of the economy in Suffolk but no separate assessment has been made of the impact of the closure of the ferry service.

Felixstowe is this country's largest container port. It is expanding and only two weeks ago exceeded its own container handling records. I have no plans to make a statement.

Post Office Closures

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what steps he is taking to prevent post office closures in rural areas. [41687]

Mr. Oppenheim [holding answer 6 November 1995]: The commercial prospects of the network of post offices have already been much enhanced by Government initiatives on automation, and on freedom to take on new business. We will continue to work with the Post Office to make sure that the benefits of these initiatives are captured.

Rom Data Corporation

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, pursuant to his answer of 2 March, Official Report, column 719, if his Department was aware of the previous business and bankruptcy record of directors of Rom Data Corporation in Cornwall before making grants to the Company in (a) 1991–92 and (b) 1994. [34648]

Mr. Lang [pursuant to his reply, 19 July 1995, c. 1562]: The Department has now conducted its own investigation into the circumstances of the regional selective assistance grant made to the Rom Data Corporation and has passed the relevant information to the SFO, which has agreed to investigate the matter further. In addition, the Department's internal inquiries to date suggest that the background to the directors of the Rom Data Corporation may not have been investigated at the time that the decision was made to make the grant in 1991, in which case the replies given by my hon. Friends on 2 March 1995, column 719 and 19 July 1995, columns 1561–62 may not be correct. As soon as these inquiries have been completed, I will report further.

SCOTLAND

Toll Exemptions

Mr. Macdonald: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the exemptions for which vehicles displaying disabled orange badges are eligible on the (a) Tay bridge (b) Erskine bridge (c) Forth road bridge and (d) Skye bridge. [40141]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Disabled persons who display orange badges on their vehicles to officers at the Tay, Erskine and Forth road bridge toll booths and complete the appropriate form are exempt from tolls. The procedure applies for each trip across these bridges. Disabled drivers who are exempt from payment of vehicle excise duty are exempt from tolls on Skye bridge. Other users of Skye bridge can buy a book of 10 tickets and can cross at £2.44 for each journey. This is less than the 50 per cent. fare reduction provision—£2.70—offered by the ferry operators, Caledonian MacBrayne, for vehicles displaying an orange badge whose drivers can produce documentary proof of their disability. The exemption arrangements were put before the public local inquiry which considered the Skye bridge toll arrangements and no objections were received. However, I have written to the chairman of Skye Bridge Ltd. in order to discuss the exemption arrangements.

Caledonian MacBrayne

Mr. Macdonald: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the annual revenue earned by Caledonian MacBrayne from carriage of commercial goods vehicles on all routes to and from the Western Isles in (a) 1980, (b) 1985, (c) 1990 and (d) 1995 at 1995 values. [40140]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The information requested is set out in the table:

Year	Revenue £000	RPI adjusted (base December 1994) £000
1980	1,190	2,582
1985	1,530	2,341
1990	2,193	2,527
1994–95	2,566	2,566

Sporting Venues (Security)

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what consideration has been given to the establishment of an inspectorate for sport to lay down basic rules for security and safety at sporting venues following the death of boxer, James Murray. [41129]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: There are a number of provisions in place to deal with security and safety at sporting venues in Scotland, including powers under the Civic Government (Scotland) Act 1982, the Licensing (Scotland) Act 1976 and the Criminal Justice (Scotland) Act 1980. There are no plans to adjust these provisions or to establish an inspectorate for sport. Medical safeguards for boxing are matters for the British Boxing Board of Control and have recently been the subject of a review.

Temporary and Part-time Staff

Mr. Ian McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many staff are currently employed in his Department and in related agencies on (a) temporary or casual employment contracts and (b) part-time employment contracts, given as an actual figure and as a proportion of the total workforce; and what were the corresponding figures for five years ago. [41116]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Breakdowns by department and executive agency for 1 April 1995 of the number of permanent staff, the number of casual staff—normally those engaged for a period of up to 12 months, but, exceptionally, up to two years—and of the number of part-time staff are presented in the civil service staff in post summary table for 1 April 1995, a copy of which is in the Library of the House. Estimates on a comparable basis for 1 April 1990 have also been placed in the Library of the House.

Farm Woodland Premium Schemes

Mr. Lord: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the cost to public funds of the farm woodland premium schemes in the years ended March 1993, 1994 and 1995; and what is the projected cost for each of the next two years. [40882]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: Expenditure in Scotland on annual payments to farmers participating in the farm woodland scheme and farm woodland premium scheme in each of the last three financial years, estimated expenditure for the current year and the existing PES provision for next year, are shown in the table.

£ Thousand

	Actual expenditure 1992–93	1993–94	1994–95	Current estimate 1995–96	Existing PES provision 1996–97
Farm woodland scheme (closed to new applicants 31 March 1992)	446	461	414	470	470
Farm woodland premium scheme (opened 1 April 1992)	14	485	1,089	1,650	2,200
Total	460	946	1,503	2,120	2,670

Official Inquiries

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list all the official inquiries the Lord Advocate's Department has undertaken over the last five years indicating the dates they were initiated and the dates when findings were released to the public. [41454]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The Lord Advocate's Department has not undertaken any official inquiries in the last five years. On 14 September 1992, W. A. Nimmo Smith QC and J. D. Friel, regional procurator fiscal of north Strathclyde, were invited by the Lord Advocate to undertake an inquiry into an allegation of a conspiracy to pervert the course of justice in Scotland. Their report was ordered by the House of Commons to be printed on 26 January 1993.

Forests

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what financial aid he intends to provide to rural local councils to maintain public access to forests. [41705]

Mr. Kynoch: The Government appreciate the value of our forests for access and recreation, and we have taken steps to strengthen the arrangements for making agreements to maintain public access to forests which are sold by the Forestry Commission. The commission will meet the local authorities' legal costs in drawing up these agreements.

Environmentally Sensitive Areas

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the mean (a) tier one payment and (b) tier two payment for each environmentally sensitive area in Scotland. [41701]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: The information is set out in the table.

£

	Mean tier 1 payment during 1994–95	Mean tier 2 payment during 1994–95
Breadalbane	1,602	3,735
Loch Lomond	1,469	1,369
Stewartry	1,120	4,431
Central Borders	1,200	3,500
Machair of the Uists and Benbecula, Barra and Vatersay	323	975
Central Southern Uplands	952	4,235
Western Southern Uplands	912	5,305
Cairngorms Straths	1,722	3,899
Argyll Islands	1,099	0
Shetland Islands	601	1,570

Mrs. Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the total payment for each environmentally sensitive area in Scotland for the past two fiscal years. [41703]

Mr. Robertson: The information is set out in the table.

	£ 1993–94	£ 1994–95
Breadalbane	154,000	229,000
Loch Lomond	77,000	77,000
Machair of the Uists and Benbecula, Barra and Vatersay	215,000	109,000
Stewartry	453,000	335,000
Central Borders (formerly known as Whitlaw/Eildon)	50,000	36,000
Central Southern Uplands	11,000	150,000
Western Southern Uplands	3,000	59,000
Cairngorms Straths	—	17,000
Argyll Islands	—	24,000
Shetland Islands	—	8,000
Total	963,000	1,044,000

Mrs. Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many units in each environmentally sensitive area were entered under tier one only in Scotland. [41702]

Mr. Robertson: The total number of agreements under the Scottish environmentally sensitive area scheme is 930: the numbers containing tier one requirements only are set out in the table below:

	Number[1]
Central Southern Uplands	34
Western Southern Uplands	14
Stewartry	4
Argyll Islands	1

[1] As at 3 November 1995.

Decommissioning

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the number of applications for fishing vessel decommissioning in the most recent decommissioning round received from each port of registration in Scotland from which applications were received; and what was the number of successful applications in each case. [41261]

Mr. Michael Forsyth [holding answer 6 November 1995]: The table lists by port the number of decommissioning applications received in Scotland under the third round of the scheme, and the number of successful applications in each case:-

Port	Number of applications received	Number of successful applications
Aberdeen	2	2
Arbroath	4	4
Ayr	7	7
Buckie	2	0
Campbeltown	3	1
Eyemouth	3	1

Stornoway	10	10
Total	61	42

Rules and Regulations

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the rules and regulations he proposes to repeal or amend by means of reference to the Deregulation Committee before the end of 1995; and if he will make a statement. [41539]

Mr. Kynoch [holding answer 6 November 1995]: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer given earlier by my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster.

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the estimated saving to the Exchequer by the repeal of each rule and regulation which has so far been the subject of a reference to the Deregulation Committee from his Department; and in how many cases a compliance cost assessment has been carried out. [41540]

Mr. Kynoch [holding answer 6 November 1995]: My Department has an interest in two of the draft deregulation proposals laid to date. The explanatory document which is presented to the Committee alongside each draft order contains an assessment of the benefits, including any cost savings, to business and to any other persons whom the draft order is intended to benefit.

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what regulations his Department proposes to repeal by the end of 1995; if he proposes to conduct a compliance cost assessment on each regulation repealed; and what is the estimated cost of undertaking a compliance cost assessment to assess the advantages or disadvantages of such a repeal. [41558]

Mr. Kynoch [holding answer 6 November 1995]: The Scottish Office is currently taking forward the review or repeal of legislation in areas as diverse as the sale of farmed salmon roe, social work, slaughterhouses and town and country planning. The requirement to carry out a compliance cost assessment applies to regulations which impose additional burdens on business while the programme of repeals and amendments is concerned with reducing the burden.

NATIONAL HERITAGE

Archaeological Sites

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if she will list the archaeological sites that have been revealed as (a) crop marks and (b) parch marks in field as a result of aerial photography during the last 12 months. [40006]

Mr. Sproat: Archaeological aerial photography is carried out in England by the Royal Commission on the Historical Monuments of England, supported by regional aerial archaeologists assisted by RCHME grants. I am pleased to say that advantage was taken of the recent exceptional drought and additional funds were made available to survey Stonehenge and other nationally important areas. However, it is not the RCHME's practice to distinguish between buried archaeological sites displayed in cereal and other arable plants, knows as, "crop marks", and those presenting themselves under conditions of exceptional drought in grass, known as "parch marks". For the purposes of recording and interpretation, parch marks are regarded as a specialised sub-category of crop mark. A list of photographs showing crop marks is not available in an abbreviated form, although details and copies of all photographs funded by grants are readily available for consultation at the RCHME's headquarters in Swindon.

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if she will list by type of project (a) how many schemes have been approved to date under the private finance initiative, (b) what is the value of those schemes and (c) what public sector contribution will be required both initially and as a revenue support during the lifetime of the schemes. [41743]

Mr. Sproat: In the Department of National Heritage, which includes its two agencies, five projects have been approved to date:

(i) Royal Armouries project (Historic Royal Palaces Agency;
(ii) Hampton Court catering (Historic Royal Palaces Agency);
(iii) Dell Restaurant (Royal Parks Agency);
(iv) Lido, Hyde Park (Royal Parks Agency);
(v) Car Parking, Regents Park and Hyde Park (Royal Parks Agency).

In the bodies sponsored by the Department, one project has so far been approved, for computer equipment for the British Library.

The total value of these projects is:

(i) Royal Armouries: £42.7 million
(ii) Hampton Court: £1.3 million
(iii) Dell Restaurant, Regents Park £0.8 million
(iv) Lido, Hyde Park: £0.5 million
(v) Car parking, Regents Park and Hyde Park: £0.1 million; and,
(vi) British Library computer equipment: £0.55 million.

The initial and continuing public sector contributions are:

	Initial £ million	Continuing
(i) Royal Armouries	1.5	£18.5 million over the five years 1993–98
(ii) Hampton Court catering	0.3[1] (1995–96)	+ £0.17 million to date
(iii) Dell Restaurant, Regents Park	0.14	Small positive annual return expected.
(iv) Lido, Hyde Park	0.3	Small positive annual return expected.
(v) Car Parking, Regents Park and Hyde Park	None	+£0.275 million to date (1995–96)
(vi) British Library computer equipment	None	None

[1] Positive figures indicate that projects generate income, and require no continuing revenue support.

Ministerial Transport

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what has been the cost of ministerial transport in each of the past five years; what allowance has been paid to Ministers who use their own vehicles; and what has been the cost in each of the past five years. [40736]

Mr. Sproat: The Department of National Heritage was established in 1992 and figures are not therefore available before the 1992–93 financial year. The cost of ministerial use of the Government car service in the years for which information is available is as follows:

£ thousands
1992–93: 167.2[1]
1993–94: 192.7
1994–95: 151.3

[1] Figure includes cost attributable to Permanent Secretary's office.

No allowance has been paid to Ministers who use their own vehicles.

Stonehenge

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what success she had had in carrying out the pledges made by the Government in respect of the protection, conservation, presentation and rehabilitation of the world heritage site at Stonehenge; and if she will make a statement. [40005]

Mr. Sproat: Stonehenge, with its surrounding landscape, is one of the most important of Europe's pre-historic monuments. Its significance is recognised by its designation as a world heritage site. The Government fully support the efforts of English Heritage and the National Trust to improve the setting of the stones and provide better facilities for visitors. The possible re-routing of the A303 trunk road is a key factor in any plans for improving the Stonehenge landscape. Discussions have taken place between the Department of Transport, the Ministry of Defence, English Heritage, and my Department; and the Highways Agency will be holding a planning conference in early November for public discussion of route options.

Special Adviser

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what is the job description of her special adviser Mr. John Bercow; how many other applicants applied for the post; what is his salary and length of service contract; and if she will make a statement. [39517]

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: With the approval of the Prime Minister, and after interviewing a number of candidates, I appointed Mr. Bercow personally as my special adviser. For special advisers' roles and salary arrangements, I refer the hon. Member to the reply that my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister gave to the hon. Member for Paisley, South (Mr. McMaster) on 28 February 1995, at columns 484–85. The appointments of special advisers terminate in the circumstances set out in the model appointment letter for special advisers. A copy is in the Library.

Public Libraries

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage, further to her Department's press release, "Public Libraries in the 1990s," if she will list all the lottery awards made to public libraries to date. [38746]

Mr. Sproat: There have been five awards made to public libraries to date. The awards are as follows:

Distributing Body	Date	Recipient	Region	Amount £
Arts Council of Wales	24 March 1995	The Cardiff Old Library Trust	Cardiff	2,000,000
Arts Council of Wales	17 July 1995	Clwyd Library and Information Service	Mold	6,000
Scottish Arts Council	1 September 1995	Scottish Poetry Library	Edinburgh	506,301
The National Heritage Memorial Fund	19 September 1995	Tameside Central Library	Ashton-Under-Lyne	1,400,000
The Arts Council of England	21 September 1995	Bradford Central Lending Library	Bradford	58.310

In addition, the Ruskin library at the university of Lancaster has been awarded a grant of £2,314,259 to provide a new home for the world's greatest collection of the works of John Ruskin, the 19th-century social reformer and critic. Though the library is not, in essence, a public lending library, the award will make the collection easily accessible to the general public for the first time.

Mr. Chris Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if she will list the number of functioning public libraries in England annually since 1979. [41718]

Mr. Sproat [holding answer 6 November 1995]: Such information is contained in the Chartered Institute of Public Finance and Accountancy's "Public Library Statistics", copies of which are held in the House Library. The latest actual information is for 1993–94, but estimates are available for 1994–95.

Television Cabling

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what is the percentage of the land area of each county in England which is (a) cabled and (b) currently being cabled. [41672]

Mr. Sproat: The information requested is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate costs.

Mr. Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if she will give powers to the Independent Television Commission to alter and amend the boundaries of a local delivery area proposed by a cable franchise applicant so as not to exclude sizeable towns and adjacent settlements. [41674]

Mr. Sproat: The Broadcasting Act 1990 gives the ITC powers to determine the areas to be covered by local delivery licences and to alter those areas when licences come up for renewal.

Mr. Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage how many local delivery cable franchise areas stand alone and are not contiguous with another. [41673]

Mr. Sproat: Nineteen of the 127 cable franchises awarded by the Cable Authority, and two of the 22 local delivery franchises advertised by the Independent Television Commission, which replaced the authority, stand alone and are not contiguous with another.

Temporary and Part-time Staff

Mr. Ian McCartney : To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage how many staff are currently employed in her Department and in related agencies, on (a) temporary or casual employment contracts and (b) part-time employment contracts given (i) as an internal figure and (ii) as a proportion of the total work force. [41127]

Mr. Sproat: Breakdowns by Department and executive agencies for 1 April 1995 of the number of permanent staff, the numbers of casual staff—normally those engaged for a two-year period of up to 12 months, but exceptionally up to two years—and of the number of part-time staff are presented in the civil service staff in post summary table for 1 April 1995, a copy of which is in the Library of the House. Estimates on a comparable basis for 1 April 1990 have also been placed in the Library of the House.

Concessionary Television Licences

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what recent representations she has received from (a) pensioners and (b) other bodies urging the abolition of the television licence concession in favour of a low-cost television licence for all pensioners. [41675]

Mr. Sproat: The Government receive regular representations from and on behalf of pensioners, calling either for the extension of the concessionary television licence scheme or for reduced fee licences for all pensioners. There are few specific requests to abolish the concessionary scheme.

Sport (Disabled People)

Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what part the British Academy of Sport will be playing in the furtherance of sailing for the blind and sailing for disabled people; and when she expects to make an announcement on plans for disabled sports men and women. [41593]

Mr. Sproat: The precise functions of the British Academy of Sport will not be decided until the Sports Council's consultation is completed and bids to establish it are invited. The Government have no plans to make an announcement on disabled sports men and women, though we expect that the measures and recommendations announced in the sports policy statement, "Sport: Raising the Game", which the Government published on 14 July, will be interpreted and adapted for all sportsmen and women, regardless of their individual circumstances.

Mr. Field: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage how many medals (a) able-bodied and (b) disabled British sailing sports men and women have won in the last four years. [41592]

Mr. Sproat: I understand from the Royal Yachting Association that British crews have won a total of 18 medals in International Yacht Racing Union sanctioned world championships in the last four years, and one medal at the 1992 Olympic games. In the same period, disabled British sailors have won a total of five medals in their respective world championships and the 1992 Paralympics.

Mr. Field: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what proportion of British athletes took medals at (a) the last Olympic games and (b) the last Paralympic games. [41591]

Mr. Sproat: A total of 45 British competitors from a team of 389 won medals in 20 events at the 1992 Olympic games; 83 from a team of 205 won 128 medals at the 1992 Barcelona Paralympics; and 26 from a team of 93 won 11 medals at the 1992 Madrid Paralympics.

Deregulation

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what is the estimated saving to the Exchequer by the repeal of each rule and regulation which has so far been the subject of a reference to the Deregulation Committee from her Department; and in how many cases a compliance cost assessment has been carried out. [41528]

Mr. Sproat [holding answer 6 November 1995]: My Department has not yet laid any draft orders before the Committee.

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what regulations her Department proposes to repeal by the end of 1995; if she proposes to conduct a compliance cost assessment on each regulation repealed; and what is the estimated cost of undertaking a compliance cost assessment to assess the advantages or disadvantages of such a repeal. [41552]

Mr. Sproat [holding answer 6 November 1995]: There are no plans to repeal any further legislation by the end of 1995, but we are currently consulting on a number of proposals for deregulation. The requirement to carry out a compliance cost assessment applies to regulations which impose additional burdens on business, while the programme of repeals and amendments is concerned with reducing the burden.

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if she will list the rules and regulations she proposes to repeal or amend by means of a reference to the Deregulation Committee before the end of 1995; and if she will make a statement. [41527]

Mr. Sproat [holding answer 6 November 1995]: I refer my hon. Friend to the oral answer given by my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster on 6 November 1995, Official Report, column 590.

National Lottery

Mr. Hanson: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what estimate her Department has made of the short-term effects of the balances held by the lottery distribution fund on the PSBR; and what discussions her Department has had with Her Majesty's Treasury on this matter. [40087]

Mr. Sproat: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by my right hon. Friend the Chief Secretary to the Treasury today. My Department has regular discussions with Her Majesty's Treasury and exchanges information on the flow of lottery funds which enable it to assess the effect of lottery funds on the PSBR.

Dr. John Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what steps she is taking to ensure that there is an equitable distribution of Millennium Commission funds between Wales, Scotland, Northern Ireland and the regions of England. [41226]

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what guidelines she has (a) given and (b) proposed for determining the geographical balance of grants from the millennium fund as between (a) Wales, (b) Scotland, (c) Northern Ireland, (d) England and (e) the regions of England; and if she will make a statement. [40725]

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The Millennium Commission has been directed by the former Secretary of State for National Heritage under the section 26 directions concerning matters to be taken into account when making funding decisions. Direction 2 (H) states that the Millennium Commission shall take into account

"the objective of ensuring that major projects are supported in each country of the United Kingdom".

The spread of national lottery awards on a regional basis is a matter for the Millennium Commission. The commission seeks to ensure a fair geographical distribution of lottery proceeds. In its second round of awards the commission is encouraging applications from those regions which submitted few in the first round.

Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if she will make it her policy to make available figures for the distribution of national lottery proceeds by constituency. [41237]

Mr. Sproat: My Department is currently developing a dedicated database system which will enable me to make available figures on the distribution of national lottery proceeds across the United Kingdom by constituency.

Dr. Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if she will list the distribution of grants awarded by the Millennium Commission between Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland and the regions of England in both monetary and percentage terms. [41228]

Mr. Sproat: A report on the distribution of national lottery proceeds is placed in the Library of the House each month which includes information in the format requested. The October edition will be placed in the Library of the House in the coming week.

Ms Quin: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if she will give a breakdown by standard planning region of lottery grants since the introduction of the national lottery. [41221]

Mr. Jon Owen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if she will list the total lottery moneys allocated to be spent to date within each of the English regions, Wales, Scotland and Northern Ireland. [41234]

Mr. Sproat [holding answer 6 November 1995]: A report on the distribution of national lottery proceeds is placed in the Library of the House each month which includes information in the format requested. The October edition will be placed in the Library of the House in the coming week.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what proposals she has for providing representation from Wales in the membership of the Millennium Commission. [40728]

Mr. Sproat [holding answer 31 October 1995]: Members of the Millennium Commission are appointed by Her Majesty the Queen. They are not appointed to represent specific areas of the United Kingdom. The commissioners have a broad range of experience and travel widely before making any decisions concerning the allocation of national lottery funds.

Annual Remuneration

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage how many individuals in (a) her Department, (b) agencies and (c) non-departmental public bodies received annual remuneration including benefits in kind exceeding (i) £100,000, (ii) £200,000 and (iii) £300,000 in each year since 1985–86. [40860]

Mr. Sproat [holding answer 1 November 1995]: Other than pension contributions, benefits in kind are not normally paid to staff in the Department, agencies and NDPBs. As members of the principal civil service pension scheme, staff receive benefits in accordance with the scheme rules which have been deposited in the Library of the House.

The Department of National Heritage was created in April 1992. It has two agencies—the Historic Royal Palaces Agency, created in October 1989, and the Royal Parks Agency, created in April 1993. Prior to the year 1994–95 no staff in the Department of National Heritage, its agencies and non-departmental bodies received annual remuneration above £100,000. The numbers receiving annual remuneration above the sums specified in the following year was:

Organisation	1994–95
Department of National Heritage	0
DNH agencies	0
DNH non-departmental public bodies	1

Notes:

1. The above figures relate to staff based in the United Kingdom.
2. Figures for the current financial year 1995–96 will not be available until after the end of the financial year.

No staff received remuneration in excess of £200,000.

Salaries

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what was the (a) lowest and (b) highest full-time salary paid to any employee in her (i) Department, (ii) agencies and (iii) non-departmental public bodies in (1) 1994–95 and (2) 1995–96. [40861]

Mr. Sproat [holding answer 1 November 1995]: It is the Government's normal policy to publish civil servants' salaries in bands.

Organisation	1994–95 £	1995–96 £
The lowest full-time salary fell within the following bands
Department of National Heritage	5,000–9,999	5,000–9,999
DNH agencies	5,000–9,999	5,000–9,999
DNH non-departmental public bodies	0–4,999	0–4,999
The highest full-time salary fell within the following bands
Department of National Heritage	85,000–89,999	90,000–94,999
DNH agencies	60,000–64,999	60,000–64,999
DNH non-departmental public bodies	100,000–104,999	100,000–104,999

Notes:

1. The above figures relate to staff based in the United Kingdom.
2. Figures for the current financial year 1995–96 are estimates only (actual figures will not be available until after the end of the financial year).

TREASURY

Gross Domestic Product

Sir John Stanley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the per capita gross domestic product for each of the 20 countries in the world that had the highest wealth per head in 1979; and if he will list the equivalent information for the most recent year for which figures are available. [41869]

Mrs. Angela Knight: The figures requested are available only for countries who are members of the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development. The most recent year for which data are available is 1993. These are shown in "National Accounts Main Aggregates: Volume 1", published by the OECD and held in the House of Commons Library.

Shareholding

Sir John Stanley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many individuals in the United Kingdom he estimates were shareholders in the 1979; and how many he estimates are shareholders at the latest date for which figures are available. [41873]

Mrs. Angela Knight: In 1979 there were 3 million shareholders in the United Kingdom. The figure had risen to 10 million by 1993.

Scott Inquiry

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many persons have been authorised to have access to documents held by (a) the Treasury, (b) Her Majesty's Customs and Excise and (c) the Bank of England relating to the Scott inquiry; and if he will list such persons. [42080]

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: Ministers, former Ministers, officials and other advisers have access to material relating to the inquiry as necessary in order to carry out their responsibilities.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many persons in (a) the Treasury, (b) Her Majesty's Customs and Excise and (c) the Bank of England are on the public payroll or employed as consultants or advisers and work on a part-time or a full-time basis in relation to the Scott inquiry; if he will list their names; and how much each is paid. [42048]

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: There are no staff in the Treasury wholly employed on matters relating to the Scott inquiry. In HM Customs and Excise, there are two staff wholly employed on these matters and their direct salary cost is £36,114 per annum. It is not possible to identify the number of people involved on a part-time or occasional basis, but the amount so far spent by the Treasury on external advice is very small. HM Customs and Excise has so far spent £4,112.50. It is not the practice to name staff or external advisers.

Bank of England staff or consultancy costs would not be public expenditure. I understand that no Bank of England staff are wholly employed on matters relating to the Scott inquiry, and the bank has incurred no expenditure on external advice.

Disposable Incomes

Sir John Stanley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the average annual money increase in net disposable income (a) between 1974 and May 1979 and (b) between June 1979 and the present date at constant prices. [41880]

Mrs. Angela Knight: The average annual increase in real personal disposable income at 1990 prices between the first quarter of 1974 and the first quarter of 1979 was £1.27 billion. Between the second quarter of 1979 and the second quarter of 1995 the average increase was £1.97 billion.

Inflation

Sir John Stanley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the average annual rate of inflation from (a) 1974 to May 1979 and (b) June 1979 to date. [41881]

Mrs. Angela Knight: Between the start of 1974 and May 1979 the average rate of inflation, as measured by the retail prices index, was 15.5 per cent. per annum. This compares with 6.3 per cent. for the period June 1979 to September 1995, the latest month for which information is available.

Strikes

Sir John Stanley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the average annual number of working days lost through strikes (a) from 1974 to 1979 and (b) from 1979 to date. [41878]

Mrs. Angela Knight: The average annual number of working days lost in the United Kingdom through strikes from 1974 to 1979 was 12.2 million and from 1979 to 1994 was 6.6 million.

Sir John Stanley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the number of working days lost through strikes in (a) 1978 and (b) the last year for which figures are available. [41879]

Mrs. Knight: In 1978, 9.4 million days were lost to strikes in the United Kingdom. This compares with a 1994 total of 278,000.

Private Medical Insurance

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the cost of tax relief on private medical insurance for those over 60 years who are non-taxpayers. [39093]

Mr. Jack: Relief is given to all individuals, whether taxpayers or not, who pay qualifying private medical insurance premiums for those aged 60 or over. The cost of giving relief to non-taxpayers is estimated to be £3 million in 1995–96.

Executive Agencies

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list by grade the numbers of staff and their cost for (a) the financial year 1994–95 and (b) the estimated figures for the financial year 1995–96, for each executive agency for which he is responsible. [39494]

Mrs. Angela Knight: Estimated outturn for 1994–95 and plans for 1995–96 for civil service manpower and pay bill are set out in the Treasury's annual report, Cm 2817, copies of which are in the Libraries of the House. A breakdown by grade and individual agency could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

National Lottery

Mr. Hanson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the effects of the moneys held by the national lottery distribution fund on the public sector borrowing requirement. [40085]

Mr. Waldegrave: So far, the direct effect of the moneys held by the national lottery distribution fund has been to reduce the PSBR by £1.1 billion. This reflects timing lags between receipt of the money into the NLDF and its spending on good causes.

The effect of the lottery on the PSBR will be unwound in due course as the NLDF runs down its surplus by increasing its grants to good causes.

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the impact on the public sector borrowing requirement of the national lottery, distinguishing between revenue raised through taxation, lottery money not yet distributed and lottery money remaining unclaimed. [40778]

Mr. Waldegrave [holding answer 31 October 1995]: The table gives the relevant figures. The direct impact of the national lottery, before allowing for the displacement of other tax receipts, was to reduce the PSBR by £0.4 billion in 1994–95. The summer economic forecast projected that the direct effect of the lottery would be to reduce the PSBR by £1.4 billion in 1995–96. This assumed lottery spending of £5 billion.

Lottery prize money that remains unclaimed after 180 days is paid into the national lottery distribution fund. At the end of September, unclaimed lottery prize money received by the NLDF was £15 million.

The effect of the lottery on the PSBR will be unwound in due course as the NLDF runs down its surplus by increasing its grants to the good causes.

The direct effects of the lottery on the PSBR

	Outturn 1994–95	Forecast 1995–96
		£million
Receipts
Betting duty on Lottery	104	600
Payments into the NLDF	295	1,350
Total General Government Receipts	399	1,950
Payments
Payments from the NLDF	6	550
Total General Government Expenditure	6	550
PSBR	–393	—1,400

To date the total receipts of the NLDF, including interest, are £1.2 billion. This includes unclaimed prize money of £15 million. Deductions from the NLDF, for payment of both expenses and draw down to distributing bodies, so far totals £71.7 million. To date 2,329 projects have been approved, with a total value of £671 million. Most of the schemes approved are for capital spending, with a resultant lag between commitment and cash flow from the NLDF.

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his estimate of the effect on the public sector borrowing requirement in the first six months of 1995–96 of the cash flows associated with the receipts and disbursements of national lottery funds; and if he will make a statement. [40825]

Mr. Waldegrave [holding answer 1 November 1995]: The table gives the relevant figures. The direct impact of the lottery, before allowing for the displacement of other tax receipts, was to reduce the PSBR by £1 billion in the first six months of 1995–96.

The effect of the lottery on the PSBR will be unwound in due course, as the NLDF runs down its surplus by increasing grants to the good causes.

The direct effects of the lottery on the PSBR in the first six months of 1995–96

	£ million
Receipts
Lottery duty	307
Payments into the distribution fund	747
Total general Government receipts	1,054
Payments
Payments from the distribution fund	52
Total General Government Expenditure	52
PSBR	–1,002

To date, the total receipts of the NLDF, including interest, are £1.2 billion. This includes unclaimed prize money of £15 million. Deductions from the NLDF, for payment of both expenses and draw-down to distributing bodies, so far totals £71.7 million. To date 2329 projects have been approved, with a total value of £671 million. Most of the schemes approved are for capital spending, with a resultant lag between commitment and cash flow from the NLDF.

Child Allowances

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the comparative administrative costs of child allowances made available as (a) cash payments by (i) order and (ii) direct deposit in family accounts and (b) tax allowances to (i) one parent and (ii) to either parent, noting the burden in each case on employers. [41137]

Mr. Jack: The total administration costs of child benefit and one-parent benefit were estimated to be £132 million in 1993–94, the latest year for which information is available. It is not possible to split the costs between payments made by order book and those made by automated credit transfer.

The administrative costs of the other items listed would depend on the nature of such schemes.

Mr. Bottomley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has for a cost-effective, fair solution to the problem of a taxable child cash allowance being worth more to a married couple with one person earning £100,000 than to a married couple with each earning £15,000. [41140]

Mr. Jack: It would be inappropriate for me to comment on tax matters at this point in the Budget cycle.

Alcohol Tax

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what were the assumptions for the calculations of the estimated revenue for taxation on whisky and whiskey before and after the last three proposed changes; and if he will estimate the actual revenue in the current year and the past two years and (b) the revenue maximising tax rate. [41141]

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The estimated revenue effects for changes in spirits taxation follow normal practice. The responsiveness of spirits sales to changes in price is based on elasticities produced by the Institute for Fiscal Studies. It is assumed that changes in duty are fully passed on to consumers and that consumers' real incomes are constant. The effect on revenue reflects both the changes in revenue from spirits itself and also the change in revenue from diversion of expenditure into or from other goods as a result of the duty change,

The actual revenue from excise duty on spirits in the last two years and the forecast for the current year are as follows:

Revenue (spirits)

	£ billion
Actual 1993–94	1.7
Actual 1994–95	1.8
Forecast 1995–96	1.9

The assumptions underlying the revenue costings described imply that current duty levels are below the revenue maximising rate.

Unemployment

Sir Ralph Howell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish the basis for the figure of £13.2 billion as the total cost for unemployment for 1992–93 as given by the Chief Secretary to the Treasury in a letter dated 13 October 1993, ref.cst.ps/dr/llmp12.10, to the hon. Member for Norfolk, North; and if he will publish figures showing the overall cost of unemployment for 1993–94 and 1994–95 calculated on the same basis. [41375]

Mr. Waldegrave: The figure in my predecessor's letter was not an estimate of the cost of unemployment. It was simply the total public expenditure on various items specified by my hon. Friend. The corresponding figures for 1993–94 and 1994–95 are estimated at £14.3 billion and £13.5 billion respectively.

Overseas Aid Budget

Miss Lestor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many letters about the size of the overseas aid budget he has received from members of the public since 1 September; and what was the comparable figure for the same period in the previous year. [41660]

Mr. Waldegrave: The information is as follows:

Letters from general public

	Numbers
1 September 1995 to 3 November 1995	2,000
1 September 1994 to 3 November 1994	35

Miss Lestor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many letters about the size of the overseas aid budget he has received from hon. Members since 1 September; and what was the comparable figure for the same period in the previous year. [41661]

Mr. Waldegrave: The information is as follows:

Hon Members' letters

	Numbers
1 September 1995 to 3 November 1995	340
1 September 1994 to 3 November 1994	20

Miss Lestor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many letters about the size of the overseas aid budget he has received from non-governmental organisations since 1 September; and what was the comparable figure for the same period in the previous year. [41659]

Mr. Waldegrave: We do not keep separate records on the number of letters we receive from non-governmental organisations.

Cash Limits

Mr. Matthew Banks: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the final outturn for 1994–95 for (a) each running costs limit and (b) the Ministry of Defence's operating costs limit. [42241]

Mr. Waldegrave: The final outturn for each running costs limit and the Ministry of Defence's operating costs limit in 1994–95 are shown in the following table:

	£ thousand
Gross running costs limits
Foreign and Commonwealth Office (Diplomatic Wing)	491,127

Mr. Banks: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what changes are proposed to the Central Statistical Office's cash and running costs limits in 1995–96. [42193]

Mrs. Angela Knight: Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary supplementary estimate, the cash limit for class XVII, vote 12 will be increased by £1,630,000 from £48,400,000 to £50,030,000 and the running costs limit by £14,936,000 from £46,630,000 to £61,566,000. These increases reflect:

(a) The take-up of entitlement under the end-year flexibility scheme for running costs (£76,000) and capital (£854,000), as announced by the Chief Secretary to the Treasury on 13 July 1995, Official Report, columns 776–82.

(b) Additional capital to meet the net additional cash requirement, for 1995–96, of the cost of the move to new premises in London, which CSO will share with OPCS (£700,000).

(c) Additional running costs arising from increased sales, offset by a corresponding increase in appropriations in aid (£518,000).

(d) A transfer of provision from the former Department of Employment, class V, vote 1, to CSO, in respect of the transfer of responsibility for the compilation and publication of labour market statistics (£14,342,000 running costs, £60,000 capital and £240,000 receipts).

The increases are offset by inter-departmental transfers and additional receipts or are agreed charges to the reserve and do not, therefore, add to the planned total of public expenditure.

Consolidated Fund Shareholding

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the effect on the public sector borrowing requirement of selling all shares still held which are listed in table B13 of the Consolidated Fund and national loans fund accounts 1993–94, assuming share prices were those of 24 October 1995. [40773]

Mr. Waldegrave [holding answer 31 October 1995]: Information on all the shares which are assets of the Consolidated Fund is not held centrally. The Treasury holdings of shares have a total value of around £1,400 million at the closing market prices of 24 October 1995. If it were possible to sell all shares at these prices, the public sector borrowing requirement would be reduced by a like amount, less the costs of sale. In practice, some of the shares could not be sold in this way because they have been retained for bonus share entitlements.

No decisions have yet been taken on the timing or method of any sales.

Salaries

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the number of individuals in his (a) Department, (b) agencies and (c) non-departmental public bodies, whose annual remuneration including benefits in kind exceed (i) £100,000, (ii) £200,000, (iii) £300,000 in each of the years (1) 1985-86, (2) 1990-91, (3) 1992–93, (4) 1994–95 and (5) 1995–96. [40832]

Mrs. Angela Knight [holding answer 1 November 1995]: Other than pension contributions, benefits in kind are not normally paid to staff in the Department, agencies or NDPBs. As members of the principal civil service pension scheme, staff receive benefits in accordance with the scheme rules which had been deposited in the Library of the House. The numbers receiving annual remuneration above the sums specified, excluding pension benefits in the years in question, are as follows:

Department
(i)	—	1	2	2	2
(ii)	—	—	—	—	—
(iii)	—	—	—	—	—
Agencies
(i)	—	—	1	1	—
(ii)	—	—	—	—	—
(iii)	—	—	—	—	—

Note:

Members of the Treasury's NDPBs are either unpaid, or paid a daily fee depending on the work they carry out.

Mr. Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the (a) lowest and (b) highest full time salary paid to any employee in his (i) Department, (ii) agencies and (iii) non-departmental public bodies in (1) 1994–95 and (2) 1995–96. [40803]

Mrs. Knight [holding answer 1 November 1995]: It is the Government's normal policy to publish civil servants' salaries in bands.

Accordingly, the lowest full-time salary fell within the band:

		1994–95	1995–96
(i)	Department	£5,000—£9,999	£5,000—£9,999
(ii)	Agencies	Up to £4,999	Up to £4,999
(iii)	NDPB's[1]	—	—

The highest full-time salary fell within the band:

		1994–95	1995–96
(i)	Department	£110,000—£115,000	£115,000—£120,000
(ii)	Agencies	£110,000—£115,000	£90,000—£95,000
(iii)	NDPBs[1]	—	—

[1] Members of the Treasury's NDPBs are either unpaid, or paid a daily fee depending on the work they carry out.

Mr. Peter Wilmott

Mr. Wilkinson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he made to Mr. Santer of the European Commission that Mr. Peter Wilmott, Director General of Customs and Indirect Taxation at the European Committee, should be retained in post. [41404]

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory [holding answer 6 November 1995]: Neither my right hon. and learned Friend nor any other Treasury Minister made such representations. United Kingdom policy generally is to ensure that the number of senior posts in the European Commission held by British citizens reflects the UK's importance as a member of the European Union. In the light of Mr. Wilmott's departure, the UK is therefore seeking to maintain the number of posts filled by British citizens at that level within the Commission.

Rules and Regulations

Mr. Steen: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what regulations his Department proposes to repeal by the end of 1995; if he proposes to conduct a compliance cost assessment on each regulation repealed; and what is the estimated cost of undertaking a compliance cost assessment to assess the advantages or disadvantages of such a repeal. [41560]

Mrs. Angela Knight [holding answer 6 November 1995]: There are no plans to repeal any further regulations by the end of 1995.

VAT (Harmonisation)

Mr. Wilkinson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer on which dates during 1995 officials of Her Majesty's Treasury have attended discussions with the European Commission in Brussels on the harmonisation of value added tax within the European Union; and if he will list the individuals whom they met. [41402]

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory [holding answer 6 November 1995]: Officials of HM Customs and Excise regularly attend meetings with the European Commission in Brussels to discuss a wide range of VAT-related issues. In doing so they meet a number of Commission officials at all levels in the Directorate General for Customs and Indirect Taxation.

ENVIRONMENT

PSA Services

Mrs. Lait: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement about PSA Services. [42242]

Mr. Gummer: PSA Services' operational functions were either closed or successfully privatised during 1992–93. Since October 1993, when the building management businesses were sold, a residuary unit has been responsible for dealing with a number of post-sale personnel and finance issues and for discharging Government's responsibilities under the sale agreements. By 31 March 1996 these on-going functions will be absorbed by the Department of the Environment; consequently, the PSA will formally cease to exist from that date.

Council Tax

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to the answer of 27 June, Official Report, columns 549–60, if the Government have now studied the full text of Mr. Justin Ognall's judgment on separate valuation for council tax purposes of annexes set aside for elderly relatives and if the Government have decided what action may be necessary. [40256]

Sir Paul Beresford: I will write to the hon. Member.

Housing Corporation

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what is the total value of public sector loans made by the Housing Corporation under the Housing Act 1974; [40563]

(2) what is the Housing Corporation's total debt outstanding to the national loans fund under its borrowing in the Housing Act 1974. [40564]

Mr. Clappison: The Housing Corporation's lending and borrowing powers are now contained in the Housing Associations Act 1985. As at 31 October 1995, the outstanding principal on the corporation's lending to housing associations was £952.6 million. At the same date, the outstanding principal on Housing Corporation loans from the national loans fund was £942.6 million.

Air Pollution

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what is the total budget for the enhanced urban network air pollution monitoring programme for 1995–96; [41152]

(2) if he will publish a list of the sites to be included in the enhanced air pollution monitoring programme by 1997, including the time frame for each site. [41153]

Mr. Clappison: In January 1995 the Department of the Environment merged the enhanced urban network and the statutory urban networks to form a harmonised national automatic urban monitoring network. The current contract value for the automatic urban network is £2,084,874, exclusive of VAT, for the financial year 1995–96. This sum includes both the central management, quality assurance and quality control of the network.

The Department intends to expand the automatic urban network by 13 centrally funded sites by the end of 1996. Sites have been announced for Manchester, Glasgow, Sheffield, Nottingham, Bradford, Wolverhampton, Plymouth, Norwich, Stoke on Trent, and a further two locations in London. An additional two sites will be announced next year.

In addition, the Department aims to integrate a total of 35 locally operated sites into the national network by 1996. The location of the first 17 of these sites was announced in October this year. The Department plans to integrate sites at Oxford and the London borough of Brent by November 1995. Within Greater London sites at Sutton, two sites: Greenwich; Haringey, two sites; Kensington and Chelsea; Hounslow; Hackney; Tower Hamlets; Bromley; Camden; Wandsworth; Southwark, two sites and Lewisham will be integrated by April 1996, subject to the approval of the Department's quality assurance and quality control unit.

Mr. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many times serious air pollution has occurred without being forecast by his Department in each of the last three years for which figures are available. [41162]

Mr. Clappison: An air quality forecast of the following day's air quality for ozone, nitrogen dioxide and sulphur dioxide is updated twice a day and is made available to the public as part of the Department's air quality information service via Freephone, Ceefax, Teletext, the Internet and a wide range of other media outlets. An air quality descriptive banding is predicted for each of nine regions of the United Kingdom. Since 1 April 1991, across the United Kingdom, there have been three occasions of "very poor" air quality when "poor" air quality was forecast and two occasions of "very poor" air quality when "good" air quality was forecast.

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many times in the last 12 months motorists have been asked to leave their cars at home due to high levels of air pollution; what estimate he has made of the number who complied; and if he will make a statement. [41754]

Mr. Clappison: In the last 12 months, in periods of elevated air pollution, the Department of the Environment has advised motorists to leave their cars at home four times.

A survey undertaken following a period of poor air quality at the beginning of August this year found that 18 per cent. of drivers surveyed said that they had decided not to use their cars on at least one occasion during the high levels of air pollution. This compares with 10 per cent. reporting taking action when a similar survey was carried out the previous year.

Houses in Multiple Occupation

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what assessment he has made of the extent to which standards in houses in multiple occupation need to be improved; and what plans he has to set up a national registration scheme whereby landlords of such property would have to be licensed. [41055]

Mr. Clappison: An assessment of the need to improve standards in houses in multiple occupation was published in "Houses in Multiple Occupation—Consultation paper on the case for licensing", Department of the Environment, November 1994, and "Improving Standards in Houses in Multiple Occupation", Department of the Environment, July 1995. Copies of both are in the Library. I have no plans to set up a national licensing scheme.

Mr. Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans he has to make mandatory grants available to landlords of houses in multiple occupation in order that they may improve the safety and the standards of health in their property. [41056]

Mr. Clappison: Proposals for changes to the house renovation grant system, which includes grants to landlords, are contained in the explanatory paper "The Future of Private Housing Renewal Programmes". A copy has been placed in the Library of the House.

Mr. Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what percentage of current housing stock is made up of houses in multiple occupation. [41054]

Mr. Clappison: The definition of a house in multiple occupation is very wide and for statistical purposes is not capable of precision. In practice, there is considerable case law as to what constitutes an HMO and this will depend on the circumstances in each case. For the 1995 local authority HMO survey, the Department asked authorities to report the presence of six different HMO types, regardless of whether the LA considered them to be HMOs. The percentage of the current English housing stock in all of these types of HMO was found to be is 3.2 per cent., table 1 although more than half of these are buildings converted into self-contained flats which many authorities do not regard as true HMOs.

Total number of HMOs in England 1995

Type of HMO	Number	(Per cent. stock)
Traditional HMOs (houses converted into bedsits)	111,000	(0.5)
Shared houses/flats	100,000	(0.5)
Households with lodgers	41,000	(0.2)
Purpose-built HMOs	17,000	(0.1)
Hostels, guest houses, boarding houses, B and Bs	17,000	(0.1)
Buildings converted into self-contained flats	352,000	(1.8)
All types of HMO	638,000	(3.2)

Construction Industry

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans he has to introduce a construction contracts Bill designed to improve relations between clients, contractors and subcontractors in the construction industry; and what alterations he has considered. [41016]

Mr. Clappison: The Government's consultation paper "Fair Construction Contracts" set out our proposals for legislation to promote less adversarial contractual arrangements in construction projects with a view to bringing about more co-operative working relationships. We have published the results of the consultation exercise and are considering legislation in the light of these and subsequent discussions with the construction industry.

The Government are working with other members of the construction industry board on a range of initiatives to promote industry relationships based on teamwork.

Mr. Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is his policy in respect of improving the relationship between clients, contractors and subcontractors in the construction industry; and what assessment he has made the improvement in the value for money that would result from such a change. [41015]

Mr. Clappison: The Government share the concern of the construction industry about the level of adversarialism in the industry. We support the view expressed in Sir Michael Latham's report "Constructing the Team" that a real improvement in relationships depends upon moving from a culture based on conflict to one of co-operation. We are actively supporting and encouraging such a culture change and are taking a strong lead, together with other members of the construction industry board, in implementing the Latham recommendations.

While the information available does not permit a precise calculation of the scope for improving value for money by reducing conflict, we follow Sir Michael and the industry consensus in believing that increased teamwork could make the industry significantly more competitive and productive. Sir Michael recommended that, overall, it would be realistic to set a target to achieve 30 per cent. savings in construction costs by the year 2000.

Water Companies (Prosecutions)

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many times each of the privatised water companies have been (a) prosecuted and (b) convicted for water pollution offences in (i) the current year and (ii) each of the last five years; and if he will list the dates. [41164]

Mr. Clappison: The information requested is set out in the tables, except for the dates of prosecutions on which I shall write to the hon. Gentleman shortly. The figures attributed to 1995 are for the period since April.

Sites of Special Scientific Interest

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what measures he proposes to reduce the number of sites of special scientific interest that are damaged by road developments; [40912]

(2) what assessment he has made of whether the current system of sites of special scientific interest provides sufficient protection for endangered habitats and rare wildlife species against new developments, including quarries; [40985]

(3) if he will make it his policy to develop a new system of measures to preserve a percentage of each endangered habitat and rare wildlife species in England, Scotland and Wales; [40986]

(4) what assessment he has made of whether the current system of sites of special scientific interest provides sufficient protection for endangered habitats and rare wildlife species; [40989]

(5) what assessment he has made of the extent to which new measures are needed to preserve a percentage of each endangered habitat and rare wildlife species in England, Scotland and Wales. [40991]

Mr. Clappison: The United Kingdom's "Biodiversity: The UK Action Plan" contains some 59 broad targets, including a commitment to develop specific costed targets for key species and habitats for the years 2000 and 2010.

Notification as a SSSI identifies land of scientific interest. It ensures that in the determination of development proposals, the land use planning system takes careful account of nature conservation interests. Where conflict is unavoidable, appropriate mitigation measures are taken to minimise adverse effects. The continuing decline in SSSI loss and damage demonstrates the effectiveness of the system.

Mr. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list those sites of special scientific interest in English Nature's report on hydrological threats to sites of special scientific interest as being liable to be adversely affected by water abstraction. [41305]

Mr. Clappison: English Nature undertook an internal survey in 1991. This preliminary study identified SSSIs which may be affected. However, these need to be further investigated before a list is published.

Mr. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list those sites of special scientific interest identified by recent research carried out by English Nature and the university of Liverpool that could be adversely affected by eutrophication. [41306]

Mr. Clappison: English Nature will shortly publish a report containing this information. A copy will be placed in the Library.

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will (a) list and (b) make a statement on the sites of special scientific interest (i) along the western side of Southampton Water and the Solent and (ii) in the New Forest. [41456]

Mr. Clappison: The information requested is as follows:

Southampton Water—Eling and Bury marshes; Hythe to Calshot marshes;

Solent—North Solent; Hurst castle and Lymington river estuary; Thorness bay; Newtown harbour; Bouldnor and Hamstead cliffs; Yar estuary;

New Forest—the New Forest.

These sites have been notified for their biological and geological importance.

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many incidents involving damage to sites of special scientific interest in 1994 have resulted in prosecution. [41972]

Mr. Clappison: None. Prosecution is sought only when circumstances warrant such action. Where a site has been damaged, the first approach is to seek the co-operation of the landlowner in restoring it and avoiding any further damage.

Tenants (Repossessions)

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what assessment he has made of the effects the reduction from 13 to eight weeks for the time a landlord may repossess his property will have on tenants; and if implementation of such a policy will be accompanied by legislation allowing courts to safeguard the security of tenant in extenuating circumstances, with special reference to a delay in the payment of housing benefit. [41057]

Mr. Clappison: For many landlords, having a tenant who does not pay the rent can be very difficult, especially if there is a loan to repay. Under the legislative change we propose, a tenant will have to be at least eight weeks in arrears before the landlord can serve two weeks' notice of possession proceedings. By the time the case reaches court, the tenant will generally owe substantially more than eight weeks' rent. The change is not expected to cause any particular problems for tenants who claim housing benefit—about 80 per cent. of housing benefit cases are possessed within 14 days of all the required information being received. Where claims are delayed, through no fault of the claimant, local authorities have a statutory duty to make payments on account. We do not propose any additional legislative safeguards.

Housing Estates (Regeneration)

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what safeguards he will be introducing to ensure that the regeneration of poor-quality estates, outlined in the housing White Paper, will not be affected by cost-cutting building companies; and what regulation he will be implementing to make certain that building standards are safe and tenants' rights are recognised. [41052]

Mr. Clappison: The building regulations establish minimum standards of health and safety for all new dwellings created by new construction or conversion.

In addition, we are actively promoting a competitive construction industry which focuses on quality. For example, we are working with the other members of the construction industry board to implement the recommendations in Sir Michael Latham's report "Constructing the Team".

Waste Management

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what targets are being set in respect of the next (a) five years, (b) 10 years and (c) 20 years by his Department for the reduction of controlled waste going to landfill sites; and what percentage of municipal waste will be targeted for recycling at the end of a 10-year period. [41323]

Mr. Clappison: The Government intend to publish waste management targets in the waste strategy for England and Wales which we expect to publish before the end of the year.

Unified Business Rate

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his answer of 16 October, Official Report, column 166, what transitional arrangements he is proposing in respect of the increases in unified business rates in the west midlands. [41326]

Sir Paul Beresford: The transition scheme phasing in the effects of the 1995 revaluation, and contained in the Non-Domestic Rating (Chargeable Amounts) Regulations 1994, SI 1994 No. 3279, limits increases in rates bills from one year to the next to 10 per cent. plus inflation. There are tighter limits for small properties—those with rateable values less than £10,000, or £15,000 in Greater London—of 7.5 per cent. plus inflation, or 5 per cent. plus inflation if there is living accommodation on the same premises.

Environmental Legislation

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans his Department has to initiate legislation concerning the protection of the environment during the next 12 months. [41445]

Mr. Clappison: I would prefer not to anticipate Her Majesty's forthcoming Gracious Speech.

Wild Birds

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has received from the Royal Society for the Protection of Birds concerning the decline of bird species; and if he will make a statement. [41439]

Mr. Clappison: My Department has regular contact with the Royal Society for the Protection of Birds on a wide range of issues relating to conservation of birds. The society regularly publishes reports on trends in wild bird populations. A recent report dealt with farmland birds.

Mr. Mark Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what changes are intended to be made to the Wildlife and Countryside Act 1981 concerning the defences available to those who need to take urgent action to kill wild birds to prevent agricultural damage; and what plans there are to align the licensing provisions in the Act for killing or other use of birds more closely with the provisions of the EC directive on the conservation of wild birds. [42249]

Mr. Gummer: Regulations have today been laid in both Houses which would change the provisions of section 4(3)(c) of the Wildlife and Countryside Act 1981, which provide certain defences to the killing or injuring of wild birds to protect agricultural interests, to bring them into line with the defences provided in section 10(6) of the Act in respect of the killing or injuring of wild animals. The defences would be available to those who could show that there was no other satisfactory solution to killing or injuring wild birds; that if the need for such action could have been foreseen, a licence should have been applied for as soon as practicable and not yet have been determined; and that the person should notify the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food as soon as reasonably practicable after taking such action.

The regulations would extend the provisions of section 16 of the Act governing licensing authorities' responsibilities and the conditions under which licences may be issued, and would increase the range of licensing purposes.

These changes, which follow consideration of responses to public consultation, would align the Act more closely with the detailed derogation requirements of the birds directive.

Air Monitoring Stations

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the location of all air monitoring stations in the United Kingdom. [41810]

Mr. Clappison: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave him on 31 October 1995, Official Report, column 178.

Small Businesses

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans he has to reduce the burden of business rates on small traders. [41670]

Sir Paul Beresford: Small properties—those with rateable values of less than £10,000 or £15,000 in Greater London—receive more generous treatment under the transition scheme, which is phasing in the effects on rates bills of the 1995 revaluation.

As announced in the rural White Paper published on 17 October, the Government also intend to introduce, at a suitable legislative opportunity, a new rate relief scheme targeted specifically on general stores and post offices in villages.

War Pensioners

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans he has to introduce measures whereby war pensioners will be housed by local authorities only if they have exhausted all their income from war pensions. [41606]

Mr. Clappison: We have no such plans.

Hazardous Waste

Mrs. Anne Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) if the EC directive on hazardous waste incineration applies in retrospect to authorisations granted before January 1997 by Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution for the burning of liquid fuels in cement kilns; [41985]

(2) if the EC directive on hazardous waste incineration will apply to the burning of secondary liquid fuels in cement kilns. [41986]

Mr. Clappison: The hazardous waste incineration directive requires transposition into UK law by the end of 1996. On the basis that secondary liquid fuels constitute waste, the relevant provisions of the directive will apply to the burning of SLF in cement kilns. Plants for which authorisations to burn SLF are granted before 1 January 1997 will be required to meet these provisions by 30 June 2000 at the latest.

Isle of Wight

Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list those projects and schemes received by his Department for funds from the single regeneration budget from the Isle of Wight. [41848]

Sir Paul Beresford: One bid for funding from round two of the single regeneration budget challenge fund has been received from a partnership led by the Isle of Wight council, entitled "Altogether Wight".

Mr. Field: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he expects to announce his decision on the Isle of Wight's application for single regeneration budget funds. [41849]

Sir Paul Beresford: It is intended that decisions on successful bids for the second round of the single regeneration budget challenge fund will be made by Christmas.

Special Protection Areas

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is (a) the total number and (b) the total area of (i) special protection areas and (ii) special areas of conservation in the United Kingdom. [41851]

Mr. Clappison: Some 107 special protection areas have been designated in the UK covering a total area of some 355,000 hectares. Further designations are expected shortly.

In March, public consultation began on 280 possible special areas of conservation covering over 900,000 hectares. The final list must be agreed with the European Commission. The designation of agreed sites should be completed by 2004.

Liquid Fuel Waste

Mrs. Anne Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans he has to issue guidance to the waste regulation authorities about the classification of secondary liquid fuel as waste. [41987]

Mr. Clappison: Whether or not a substance is waste must be determined on the facts of the case and the interpretation of the law is a matter for the courts. The Department has provided guidance on the interpretation of the definition of waste in DoE circular 11/94.

The Department's views on the classification of secondary liquid fuel as waste were set out in our initial response of 13 June 1995 to the Environment Select Committee's report on the burning of this fuel in cement kilns. We have no plans to revise the guidance issued to waste regulation authorities in DoE circular 11/94.

Mrs. Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will ensure that the Government will respond to the Environment Select Committee's second report on burning of secondary liquid fuels in cement kilns before Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution reaches a decision on the permanent authorisation for the burning of secondary liquid fuels in cement kilns. [41988]

Mr. Clappison: The Government have already given their initial response to the Environment Select Committee and stated that when Parliament enacted the Environmental Protection Act 1990, EPA90, the systems thus created were, and are, sufficiently robust to cope with the regulation of cement kilns and secondary liquid fuels. Her Majesty's inspectorate pollution has a statutory obligation to deliver the requirements of EPA90 for all plants under its control. Under the circumstances, I see no useful purpose in delaying HMIP decisions.

Housing, Sheffield

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will increase resources for the provision of social housing in the Darnall area of Sheffield following the publication of the Darnall review. [40038]

Mr. Clappison: The need for social housing in the Darnall area is a matter best determined by Sheffield city council in consultation with the local community and other housing providers in the area. Allocations under the housing investment programme will be announced in December. Bids for Housing Corporation resources are due on 24 November, and allocations will be announced in early February.

Bats

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if English Nature recommends the removal of bat roosting sites after October. [40556]

Mr. Clappison: English Nature makes every effort to negotiate the retention of bat roosting sites. Where this is not possible, English Nature advises on the least harmful time of year to perform operations on a bat roost. This time will vary according to whether the site is used by the bats during the summer, or during the winter for hibernation. English Nature makes every effort to ensure that any removal of hibernacular sites does not take place between 1 November and 31 March.

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what legislation protects bats and their breeding sites. [40557]

Mr. Clappison: All bats are protected under the Wildlife and Countryside Act 1981, and the Conservation (Natural Habitats, etc.) Regulations 1994. Under sections 9 and 10 of the 1981 Act and regulations 39 and 40 of the 1994 regulations, unless a licence has been granted, it is an offence to kill or injure a bat deliberately or intentionally to possess or sell one or offer it for sale or to damage, destroy or obstruct access to any structure bats use for shelter. Certain assemblages of bats may also qualify as a roost notified as a site of special scientific interest.

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what licences have been issued for the further removal of bat roosting sites on the route of the A34 Newbury bypass; and where and when such works will be carried out. [40558]

Mr. Clappison: No licences have been issued for the further removal of bat roosts on the route of the A34 Newbury bypass.

Recycling

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what tonnage of waste is estimated to be recycled, annually; what percentage this constitutes of total waste; and if he will make a statement. [40328]

Mr. Clappison: An average of 38 million tonnes of controlled wastes, excluding sewage sludge and dredged spoils, are estimated to be recycled annually. This represents 22 per cent. of total controlled waste arisings. The Government's overall policy aim for achieving more sustainable waste management is to increase the proportion of waste managed by the options towards the top of the waste hierarchy including recycling.

Vacant Dwellings

Mr. Michael Spicer: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the current number of vacant dwellings. [41645]

Mr. Clappison: Estimates of the numbers of vacant dwellings on 1 April 1994, the latest date for which figures are available, are as follows:

	Number of vacant dwellings
Local authority[1]	70,300
Housing associations[2]	20,700
Other public sector[3]	17,000
Private sector[1]	737,000
Total	845,000

Sources:

[1] HIP1 returns.

[2] Housing Corporation HAR10/1 returns.

[3] Government Departments and HIP1 returns.

There are doubts about the quality of some authorities' estimates of the number of private sector vacants; independent survey data suggest that the HIP1 figures may over-estimate the total of these vacants.

Green Belts

Mrs. Helen Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what size land area constitutes a major development site in a green belt area; and what is his definition of a major development site. [41694]

Sir Paul Beresford: PPG2 gives guidance on major existing developed sites in green belts. If such a site is specifically identified in an adopted local plan or unitary development plan, construction of new buildings for the purpose of limited infilling or redevelopment is not inappropriate, providing it meets criteria stated in the PPG. The guidance applies only to sites which are substantial. Its proposed application to any particular site is tested through the planning process.

Mrs. Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans he has to advise or instruct local planning authorities to publish lists of sites for major development in green belt areas as part of his revised PPG2. [41688]

Sir Paul Beresford: PPG2 stipulates that, if limited infilling or redevelopment of a major existing developed site in the green belt is not to require justification by very special circumstances, the site must be specifically identified for this purpose in an adopted local plan or unitary development plan.

Mrs. Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment which local authorities have put forward revised guidelines to their urban development plan submissions following the revision to PPG2 for green belt sites. [41689]

Sir Paul Beresford: This information is not collected centrally.

Mrs. Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many extra dwellings he estimates being approved for planning permission in the current year in green belt areas following his revision to PPG2. [41690]

Sir Paul Beresford: I have made no such estimate. The revised PPG2 enables local plans and unitary development plans to provide greater certainty about the future of major existing developed sites and speedier development control decisions. The previous guidance permitted the redevelopment of redundant hospitals and, in very special circumstances, of other sites. The revised guidance stipulates that redevelopment must have no greater impact on the green belt than the existing development, and where possible less; must contribute to green belt land use objectives, such as countryside access and outdoor recreation; and must not occupy a larger area of the site than the existing buildings.

Mrs. Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many planning applications for major development sites in green belt areas he has called in since he published the revised guidance note on PPG2. [41692]

Sir Paul Beresford: I have called in 18 applications for development in the green belt since January 1995. This figure includes various types and sizes of development on different sorts of site.

Mrs. Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what notice he has had of planning applications for the development of major development sites of green belt areas, which include applications to build more than (a) 10, (b) 20, (c) 50 and (d) 100 houses, since his revised guidance note on PPG2. [41693]

Sir Paul Beresford: Planning applications for development in the green belt are formally notified to me only if they are departures from the development plan. Information on the scale of individual proposals is not collected centrally. Applications for the limited infilling or redevelopment of major existing developed sites specifically identified for this purpose in adopted local plans or unitary development plans would not be departures.

Public Finance Initiative

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list by type of project (a) how many schemes have been approved to date under the public finance initiative, (b) what is the value of those schemes and (c) what public sector contribution will be required both initially and as revenue support during the lifetime of the schemes. [41739]

Sir Paul Beresford: The Department of the Environment and its sponsored bodies attracted around £4 billion in private investment in support of its programmes in 1994–95 and expects to increase that figure in 1995–96. This will assist the delivery of a very large number of projects, most notably ones relating to housing, inner cities and regeneration. Secondary legislation to encourage and facilitate private finance initiative schemes in the local authority sector came into effect from 1 April 1995 and the Government aim to implement further measures by 1 April 1996. It is not practicable for the Department to collect detailed information on each project being advanced under private financing arrangements.

Home Owners

Sir John Stanley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what was the number of home owners in Britain in 1979; and what is the number at present. [41874]

Mr. Gummer: An estimated 10.2 million households owned their own home in 1979, and 15.4 million in 1993, the most recent year for which figures are available for the whole of Great Britain.

These estimates are based on the general household survey and the survey of English housing. Like all estimates from surveys, they are liable to sampling variability.

Training and Enterprise Councils

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how much money has been allocated to TECs for training from the single regeneration budget for 1995–96. [42008]

Sir Paul Beresford: Planned expenditure by training and enterprise councils on continuing programmes which now form part of the single regeneration budget is £40 million in 1995–96. In addition, there are 45 schemes which were successful under round one of the SRB challenge fund where a TEC is receiving funding as the accountable body on behalf of the SRB partnership concerned. Planned expenditure in 1995–96 on these schemes is £22 million. It is not possible to identify how much of the total of £62 million, expected to be paid to TECs from the single regeneration budget in the current year, will be specifically for training activities. TECs may also be receiving indirect funding from the SRB challenge fund where they are members of SRB partnerships but not the nominated accountable body.

Business Start-up Grants

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment for each training and enterprise council area how many firms have received business start-up grants in each of the last 12 months. [42007]

Sir Paul Beresford: The business start-up scheme was incorporated into the single regeneration budget from 1 April 1994 and ceased as a separate programme on 31 March 1995. For 1994–95, the information requested has been placed in the Library of the House.

Since 1 April 1995, support for new businesses is one of the objectives of the SRB challenge fund. Some 70,000 business start-ups are forecast to be supported under schemes approved in the first challenge fund bidding round. The second bidding round was launched on 12 April and this will provide further opportunities for similar support.

Water Profits

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what were the profits of each water company in England and Wales in each year since 1989 as recorded by Office of Water Services. [42135]

Mr. Clappison: Current cost operating profits for each of the regulated water companies in England and Wales for each financial year from 1990–91 are given in figure 4 of Ofwat's 1994–95 report on the financial performance and capital investment of the water companies in England and Wales, a copy of which has been placed in the Library.

Building Research Establishment

Mr. Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the future of the Building Research Establishment. [42245]

Mr. Gummer: The Building Research Establishment has made great strides in developing new services and improving operational efficiency since becoming an executive agency in 1990. It has played a central role in support of the Government's policy and executive responsibilities as they relate to construction and buildings. Government and other customers of BRE have a continuing need for access to the technical excellence and objectivity of judgment which BRE provides and which is much valued. I wish, however, to see BRE's expertise more directed towards stimulating innovation in construction and to helping industry improve its performance and competitiveness. I believe that closer links between BRE and industry will be achieved more effectively if BRE were in the private sector.

I therefore intend to commission consultants later this month to advise me on the relative advantages and disadvantages of the options for transferring BRE to the private sector. The consultants will be asked to take account of the need of the Government, industry and clients for construction research, advice and technical support which will be accepted as authoritative and independent of sectoral interests. The options examined will include the proposal from representatives of construction interests for a national centre for construction research and advice. Meanwhile, BRE will remain an executive agency of my Department under its present chief executive. I shall make a further statement when I have considered the consultants' report.

Local Government Staff

Mr. Simon Coombs: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he will finalise the measures to compensate staff who suffer a drop in remuneration as a result of local government reorganisation. [42246]

Sir Paul Beresford: I am today laying before the House regulations which will give effect to a scheme for detriment compensation. The regulations are being made following two separate consultation exercises, which generated helpful comments. The scheme provides for compensation staff in England and Wales who suffer a drop in remuneration as a result of local government reorganisation. Such staff will, provided they meet certain criteria, receive compensation equal to three times the drop in remuneration, payable over 36 months. This will provide transitional relief to staff if they work in an authority directly affected by reorganisation and suffer a drop in salary during the prescribed period. By avoiding the need for redundancy payments and encouraging councils to retain existing employees in new jobs, the scheme should benefit staff, employers and the taxpayer.

Pan-European Environment Conference

Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what was the outcome of the Pan-European conference of Environment Ministers held in Sofia on 23 to 25 October; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer: The Sofia conference reaffirmed the political framework and programme of action agreed in Lucerne in 1993 for pan-European co-operation to improve the environment, with particular reference to central and eastern Europe. Steps will be taken to strengthen the links between this process and the Helsinki environment and health process. The decisive role of domestic finance and policy reforms in achieving greater environmental investment in central and eastern Europe and the role of external finance as a catalyst to help bring this about were stressed. The importance of an effective dialogue between business on environmental matters was also strongly emphasised. The conference endorsed the strategy prepared by the Council of Europe as a framework for the conservation of pan-European biological and landscape diversity. It also endorsed the environmental programme for Europe which makes recommendations for long-term action on some of the findings of the pan-European state of the environment report published in September 1995. The conference reaffirmed the importance of public participation including the role of non-governmental organisations. It called for the development of a regional convention on public participation to be considered. The next "Environment for Europe" conference will be held in Denmark in 1998.

Audit Commission

Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what arrangements he has made for appointing a chairman of the Audit Commission. [42248]

Mr. Curry: I am minded to appoint Roger Brooke as a member and chairman of the Audit Commission for three years from 1 December 1995. This appointment is still subject to consultation, as required by section 11(2) of the Local Government Finance Act 1982.

Cash Limits

Mr. Faber: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he proposes any further changes to his Department's cash limits for 1995–96. [42244]

Mr. Gummer: Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary supplementary estimate, the following changes will be made:

The cash limit for class VII, vote 2—regeneration and countryside and wildlife—will be increased by £20,466,000 from £1,500,333,000 to £1,520,799,000. The increase is the net effect of the payment of £20,716,000 on capital projects which slipped from previous years for the city challenge programme within the single regeneration budget, the docklands light railway, Central Manchester development corporation, Trafford Park development corporation, coalfield areas fund, the Victoria arena Manchester and European Community regeneration projects, a transfer of £250,000 from the Department of Health in respect of urban programme payments following an excess transfer in the main estimates and a reduction of £500,000 to allow supplementary credit approvals to be issued in respect of the urban programme from the DoE/RCW non-voted cash limit.

The non-voted cash limit for regeneration and countryside and Wildlife, DoE/RCW, will be increased by £21,283,000 from £1,482,233,000 to £1,503,515,000. The increase is the net effect of the payment of £21,033,000 on capital projects which slipped from previous years for the same programmes on the cash limit for class VII, vote 2 including £817,000 for the issue of supplementary credit approvals for the Victoria arena Manchester and the transfer of £250,000 from the Department of Health in respect of urban programme payments following an excess transfer in the main estimates.

There will be associated increases to external financing limits for urban development corporations, by £15,775,000 from £243,739,000 to £259,514,000; and by £12,000,000 from £143,898,000 to £155,898,000 for the Urban Regeneration Agency—English Partnerships.

The DoE/European regional development fund cash limit remains unchanged at £184,219,000.

The increases are covered in full by take-up of the entitlement to capital end of year flexibility announced by the Chief Secretary to the Treasury on 13 July 1995, Official Report, columns 776–82, and will not therefore add to the planned total of public expenditure.

Local Government Reorganisation

Mr. Rendel: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the last date by which the orders for structural change must be laid before the House in order for elections to take place for the successor unitary authorities in May 1996; and what is the anticipated date that the Government expect to lay the order for structural change before the House in respect of (i) Leicester city, (ii) Rutland district council, (iii) Nottingham city, (iv) Plymouth city, (v) Torbay borough council, (vi) Wokingham district council, (vii) Newbury district council, (viii) Reading city, (ix) Windsor and Maidenhead district council, (x) Slough borough council, (xi) Bracknell Forest district council, (xii) Southend on Sea borough council, (xiii) Herefordshire, (xiv) The Wrekin district council, (xv) Thurrock borough council, (xvi) Northampton borough council, (xvii) Halton borough council, (xviii) Warrington borough council, (xix) Peterborough city, (xx) Dartford and Gravesham borough councils, (xxi) Gillingham borough council and Rochester/Medway city, (xxii) Blackburn borough council and (xxiii) Blackpool borough council. [41950]

Mr. Curry: There is no statutory requirement to lay structural change orders by a particular date. However, given the requirements governing the publication of the notice of election in the Local Elections (Principal Areas) Rules 1986 along with the administrative needs of the returning officer, we consider that an order should be made not less than two months before the date of the election to which it relates.

For all those districts which are the subject of fresh reviews by the Local Government Commission—xiv–xxviii—whether or not there will be an order to be laid will of course depend on the commission's final recommendations and the Government's response to them. For the others, there are outstanding issues such as judicial review in the case of Berkshire or the fact that the commission is examining the further case for unitary structures in certain counties. We aim to lay these orders before Parliament during the new Session once these various matters are resolved.

TRANSPORT

"Sally Star"

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when his Department received the first draft of the Marine Accident and Investigation Branch report into the fire aboard the ro-ro passenger vessel "Sally Star" on 25th October 1994. [41680]

Mr. Norris: The incident referred to occurred on 25 August 1994. The Secretary of State did not receive a copy of any drafts of the report. A copy of the final version was sent to him on 19 October 1995.

Marine Safety Agency

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what considerations led him to advise the Marine Safety Agency to cancel its appointment with the hon. Member for Nottingham, North scheduled for 6 November at 11 am. [41779]

Sir George Young: The meeting was cancelled because it would not be appropriate for an official to brief an opposition spokesman in the absence of a Minister.

Aircraft Noise

Sir John Cope: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what measures he has taken to encourage aerodromes to introduce noise amelioration schemes in accordance with his announcement of March 1993 in respect of the conclusions of the review of aircraft noise legislation; and what assessment he has made of their impact. [41437]

Mr. Norris: It has been the Government's policy for many years that measures to minimise noise nuisance from aerodromes are best developed and monitored locally. The Government continue to encourage aerodromes to consult their local communities. Many aerodromes have established voluntary arrangements and at most of the larger airports consultation is required. The manner in which consultation is conducted is a purely local issue, in which the Government have no role.

Sir John Cope: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects to issue the national guidance on aircraft noise amelioration, in accordance with his announcement of March 1993 in respect of the review of aircraft noise legislation. [41438]

Mr. Norris: In due course.

Sir John Cope: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what considerations will determine whether the use of non-military aircraft at military airfields will be subject to the new legislation on aircraft noise amelioration, set out in his announcement of March 1993 in respect of the conclusions of the review of aircraft noise legislation. [41436]

Mr. Norris: The use of military aerodromes by civil aircraft is governed by military regulations, which are the responsibility of my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Defence.

West Coast Main Line

Mr. Martlew: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to his answer of 25 October, Official Report, columns 578–79, if he will provide a breakdown of the £7 million European funding awarded indicating the amount allocated to each project, the terms of reference and the timetable for the project. [41258]

Mr. Watts: The funds were awarded to project costs incurred in 1995 as a whole, and not to any particular phase of the west coast main line scheme. Most of the relevant work in 1995 will be on feasibility studies, including the examination of the use of an in-cab control system and running high-speed trains and physical works to allow the running of European passenger services as far as Glasgow.

Deregulation

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State what regulations his Department proposes to repeal by the end of 1995; if he proposes to conduct a compliance cost assessment on each regulation repealed; and what is the estimated cost of undertaking a compliance cost assessment to assess the advantages or disadvantages of such a repeal. [41556]

Mr. Watts: We are developing a number of proposals for repeal or deregulatory amendment which we hope to bring forward this year. These include: abolition of the requirement for local authorities to use type approved parking equipment; liberalising signing for tourist attractions; amendments to regulations concerning cycle racing on the highways; the updating and consolidation of navigation and collision regulations for merchant shipping.

The requirement to carry out a compliance cost assessment applies to regulations which impose additional burdens on business while the programme of repeals and amendments is concerned with reducing the burden.

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is the estimated savings to the Exchequer by the repeal of each rule and regulation which has so far been the subject of a reference to the Deregulation Committee from his Department; and in how many cases a compliance cost assessment has been carried out. [41536]

Mr. Watts: My Department has not yet laid any draft orders before the committee.

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the rules and regulations he proposes to repeal or amend by means of a reference to the Deregulation Committee before the end of 1995; and if he will make a statement. [41535]

Mr. Watts: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given yesterday by my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of Duchy of Lancaster at column 593.

Gateshead Bypass

Ms Quin: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans he has to improve the A1 western bypass around Gateshead. [41821]

Mr. Watts: We are working closely with Gateshead metropolitan borough council on options for the improvement of the A1 around Gateshead.

Transport Projects (Moratorium)

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what estimate he has made of the savings resulting from a moratorium on transport construction projects which have not yet begun construction in (a) the current year and (b) 1996–97. [41781]

Mr. Watts: None.

Car Phones

Mr. French: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what information he has recently received about the installation and use of mobile telephones in cars; and if he will make a statement about their safety; [41480]

(2) if he will introduce safety standards for the installation of mobile phones in cars.

Mr. Norris: The Department has no evidence of accidents occurring as a result of mobile phones in cars interfering with vehicle electronic systems.

A forthcoming EC directive will require new types of vehicle to have a minimum level of resistance to electromagnetic interference. In addition, the Department is discussing with the Radiocommunications Agency, an executive agency of the Department of Trade and Industry, how best to ensure that devices such as in-car phones do not produce excessive interference which might affect vehicle electronic systems.

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans he has to curb the use of hand-held mobile telephones by car drivers while driving; and if he will make a statement. [40935]

Mr. Norris: The Highway Code makes it clear that drivers must exercise proper control of their vehicles at all times and should not use a hand-held telephone while driving.

Transport Council

Mr. Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Scarborough (Mr. Sykes) of 26 October, Official Report, columns 731–32, what was the voting record of each member state on items agreed at the meeting of the European Community's Transport Council held on 28 September; and if he will make it his practice to list all votes, including where there have been no votes, in the future. [41088]

Sir George Young: There were no formal votes at the 28 September Transport Council, but, as reported in my answer of 26 October to the hon. Member for Scarborough (Mr. Sykes), the UK and Germany opposed a scrapping scheme to reduce capacity in the inland waterways industry: other member states supported the measure.

I shall continue to list all formal votes, or the fact that no votes were taken, when reporting on future Transport Councils.

A36 (South Newton)

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to his answer of 19 July, Official Report, column 1327, when he plans to install experimental electronic speed limit warning signs on the A36 at either end of South Newton village. [41259]

Mr. Norris: The experimental electronic speed limit warning signs on the A36 are due to be installed at either end of South Newton village before Christmas.

Road Building

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what spending has been provisionally allocated to road building for the current year and for 1996–97 for projects which have yet to begin construction. [41780]

Mr. Watts: We have allocated £683 million to national schemes (schemes over £3 million in value) for the current year together with £108 million for network improvement schemes (schemes less than £3 million in value). These allocations are contained in the Highways Agency business plan. No decision has yet been taken on allocations for 1996–97.

European Aviation Centre

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is his policy towards a European aviation centre. [41594]

Mr. Norris: The term "European aviation centre" is not one that the Department recognises. If the hon. Member would provide further details, my noble friend the Minister of Aviation and Shipping will write to him.

Temporary and Part-time Staff

Mr. Ian McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many staff are currently employed in his Department and in related agencies on (a) temporary or casual employment contracts and (b) part-time employment contracts, given as an actual figure and as a proportion of the total work force; and what were the corresponding figures for five years ago. [41115]

Mr. Norris: Breakdowns by Department and executive agency for 1 April 1995 of the number of permanent staff, the number of casual staff—normally those engaged for a period of up to 12 months, but, exceptionally, up to two years—and of the number of part-time staff are presented in the civil service staff in post summary table for 1 April 1995, a copy of which is in the Library of the House. Estimates on a comparable basis for 1 April 1990 have also been placed in the Library of the House.

M1

Sir Irvine Patnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what are the proposed completion dates for current construction work on the M1; and what is his latest information on whether the dates will be met. [40980]

Mr. Watts: This is an operational matter for the Highways Agency. I have asked the chief executive to write to my hon. Friend.

Letter from Lawrie Haynes to Sir Irvine Patnick, dated 6 November 1995:

As you know, the Minister for Railways and Roads, Mr. John Watts, has asked me to reply to your Parliamentary Question asking the Secretary of State for Transport, what are the proposed completion dates for current construction work on the M1; and what is his latest information on whether the dates will be met.

The contract for the widening M1 between junctions 21 and 21A is due to end in February 1996 but we are currently considering an extension to late March because of unforseen ground conditions. If that extension is granted, we have no reason to think that the revised date will not be met.

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what proposals he has to widen the M1 from junctions 23 to 28. [41001]

Mr. Watts: This is an operational matter for the Highways Agency. I have asked the chief executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Lawrie Haynes to Mr. Graham Allen, dated 6 November 1995:

As you know, the Minister for Railways and Roads, Mr John Watts, has asked me to reply to your Parliamentary Question, asking the Secretary of State for Transport, what proposals he has to widen the M1 between Junctions 23 and 28.

The road programme contains two schemes covering this section of the M1. A preferred option for widening between Junctions 23A and 25 to dual 4 lanes was announced in March 1995.

Proposals for widening the motorway to dual 4 lanes between Junctions 25 and 28 were put to the public in July 1994. We are considering the responses received.

National Transport Debate

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects to publish a Green Paper following the national transport debate. [40992]

Sir George Young: Once my colleagues and I have considered responses to "Transport: The Way Ahead" we will publish a further report drawing together the threads of the debate.

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the organisations who contributed to the national transport debate and place copies of their responses in the Library. [40993]

Sir George Young: Individual responses, and the list of respondents, will not be made available for public inspection since we did not indicate in "Transport: The Way Ahead" that we would be doing so.

Bus Companies

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what proposals he has to re-regulate in any material way the operations of bus companies. [41273]

Mr. Norris: I have no such proposals. I am considering, with the help of the bus working group, which I am chairing with the bus industry, local authority associations and the users, what sensible measures might be introduced to assist buses within the deregulated framework.

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport which five cities have the largest municipally owned or controlled bus companies in the United Kingdom. [41329]

Mr. Norris: In terms of vehicle numbers including tramcars, the five largest local authority-owned bus companies, in descending order, are: Lothian RT, Nottingham, Blackpool, Cardiff and Reading.

Mr. Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the proposed sales of municipal bus companies to which he withheld his consent; and if he will give reasons in each case. [41270]

Mr. Norris: Consent for the proposed sale of a municipal bus company has in some cases been withheld because the method of sale did not meet the requirement that public assets must be sold by means of a competitive tender. It would not be appropriate to provide details of these cases as they are commercially sensitive.

Mr. Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to his answer of 24 October, Official Report, column 579, if he will make it his policy to monitor changes of ownership within the bus industry where this involves the onward sale of a company after a management–employee buy out for a local authority. [41307]

Mr. Norris: No.

Probationary Drivers

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what percentage of car accidents for the latest year for which figures are available, involve drivers who passed their driving test in the preceding 12 months. [41277]

Mr. Norris: The information is not available in this form but drivers aged 17 and 18 were involved in some 5 per cent. of all injury accidents during the period 1992–94.

Mr. Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what recent consideration he has given to the introduction of probationary driver plates to be displayed for a period on cars driven by newly qualified drivers. [41276]

Mr. Norris: I refer the hon. Member to the answer that I gave to the hon. Member for Gordon (Mr. Bruce) on 22 February, Official Report, column 188. We are keeping this issue under review but I have yet to see any conclusive evidence that P-plates are effective in reducing road accidents.

North Bridge, Doncaster

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is the life expectancy of the North bridge, Doncaster. [41580]

Mr. Watts: The existing North bridge in Doncaster is the responsibility of the local highway authority, Doncaster metropolitan borough council.

Roadside Vehicle Inspections

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list for each of the last five years the number of inspections undertaken by the Vehicle Inspectorate at roadside checks and the percentage of vehicles found to be defective. [40996]

Mr. Norris: This is an operational matter for the Vehicle Inspectorate. I have asked the chief executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Ron Oliver to Mr. Graham Allen, dated 6 November 1995:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question concerning the number of inspections undertaken at roadside checks and the percentage of vehicles found to be defective for the last 5 years.

The attached table shows the number of roadworthiness inspections carried out by vehicle type and the number that were prohibited as a result of a mechanical defect being found. The prohibition figure includes both immediate and delayed prohibitions.

Number of heavy goods vehicles, public service vehicles, private and light goods vehicles inspected and the number of vehicles prohibited at roadside 'spot' checks over the past five years

1990–91
Heavy goods vehicles	108,204	17,014	15.7
Public service vehicles	20,713	1,125	10.5

Number of heavy goods vehicles, public service vehicles, private and light goods vehicles inspected and the number of vehicles prohibited at roadside 'spot' checks over the past five years

Vehicle type	Number of vehicles inspected	Number of vehicles prohibited	Percentage
Private and light goods vehicles	12,405	2,779	22.4
Private and light goods vehicles special checks[1]	—	—	—
1991–92
Heavy goods vehicles	110,753	17,632	15.9

Private and light goods vehicles special checks	70,899	2,580	3.6

Briefings (Civil Servants)

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is his policy towards civil servants in his Department at grade 2 or above arranging briefings for the opposition spokesmen on their responsibility. [40711]

Sir George Young: Prior ministerial approval is required for briefings with officials at any grade and requests should be made to the Private Office of the relevant Minister. A Minister may wish to be present at any briefings which is arranged.

Midland Main Line

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what cost-benefit analysis his Department has received on electrifying the midland main line; and if he will make a statement on its future. [41000]

Mr. Watts: The Department has not received any cost-benefit analysis on the electrification of the midland main line during the last five years. Railtrack informs me that it will continue to ensure the safe and efficient operation of the line.

Nottingham Station

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list all those organisations that currently operate in and from Nottingham railway station, specifying in each case whether they own or lease assets and services once wholly delivered by BR with particular reference to catering, parking, track, signals, rolling stock and platforms. [40988]

Mr. Watts: Nottingham station is owned by Railtrack and operated under a lease by Regional Railways Central, which is the main passenger service operator. Midland Main Line also operates services to and from Nottingham and manages the travel centre at the station. Regional Railways Central leases all its rolling stock from the three rolling stock leasing companies, Eversholt, Porterbrook and Angel Train Contracts. Midland Main Line leases its rolling stock from the Porterbrook leasing company. Station catering is provided by Travellers' Fare under contract from Regional Railways Central. The platforms and the car park are managed by Regional Railways Central. The track and signals are owned by Railtrack.

Heathrow Airport

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many staff are directly employed at Heathrow Airport; what estimate he has made of how many staff would be employed at the new terminal 5; and what is his Department's estimate of the number of employees in west London who are employed on work dependent on Heathrow. [41281]

Mr. Norris: These are matters for the British Airports Authority.

Plane Crashes

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list all plane crashes in United Kingdom airspace since 1980 giving the date and location of each crash and the types of aircraft involved. [41442]

Mr. Norris: It is estimated that over 3,000 accidents involving civil aircraft have occurred in the United Kingdom since 1980. The vast majority of these were minor accidents involving light aircraft. A record of all reportable civil aviation accidents and incidents is held on a computer database by the Civil Aviation Authority. I have asked the chairman of the authority to write to the hon. Gentleman to establish his exact data requirement.

Carriage of Bicycles (Trains)

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will summarise the minimum conditions to which cyclists will be entitled in respect of the carriage of bicycles on trains, as a result of the passenger service requirements issues so far. [41255]

Mr. Watts [holding answer 3 November 1995]: The franchising director intends to specify requirements in respects of the carriage of bicycles on passenger rail services in the franchise agreements that he makes with franchises. He intends to include in franchise agreements the requirement that franchise operators shall, so far as is reasonably practicable and subject to the availability of appropriate space on their rolling stock, ensure that facilities for the carriage of bicycles on trains are made available at reasonable, if any, charges. There will be no provisions relating to the carriage of bicycles in the passenger service requirements, which are concerned with the protection of an overall level and pattern of service base on the BR timetable in operation immediately prior to franchising.

European Passenger Services

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the costs to public funds of creating those assets of European Passenger Services which it is now intended to privatise. [41256]

Mr. Watts [holding answer 3 November 1995]: The value of EPS's fixed assets covering land and buildings, plant and equipment and rolling stock, as stated in the company's annual report and accounts for the year ended 31 March 1995 is £1,149.4 million. This figure includes assets to a value of £357.6 million which have been leased. The value of any assets acquired since 1 April 1995 will be included in the next annual report for the company.

Rail Services

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the 1995–96 turnover and subsidy requirement under the section 52 agreement with the Office of Passenger Rail Franchising for (a) Great Western Trains, (b) LTS Rail and (c) South West Trains companies. [41257]

Mr. Watts [holding answer 3 November 1995]: I refer the hon. Member to my answer to the hon. Member for Fife, Central (Mr. McLeish), Official Report, 13 July, column 706. Negotiations between the franchising director and the British Railways Board on the support appropriate to each individual train operating company are yet to be completed. I will write to the hon. Member when the level of support has been agreed and will place a copy of the letter in the Library of the House.

Cones Hotline

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) on what date the cones hotline was established; and if he will make a statement as to its current status and past effectiveness; [40805]

(2) how many phone calls there have been to the cones hotline and its successor service since the establishment of these services; and if he will give a breakdown of the number for each full year of the service; [40833]

(3) how many traffic cones have been removed in response to communication via the cones hotline and its successor service; if he will list (a) the number of occasions when this has occurred and (b) the total length of cones in metres removed; and if he will make a statement; [40804]

(4) what has been the total cost to date of establishing and running the cones hotline and its successor service; [40806]

(5) what is his estimate of the total mileage of traffic cones in place on the United Kingdom roads network; and what was the equivalent figure for October 1992. [40807]

Mr. Watts [holding answer 1 November 1995]: These are operational matters for the Highways Agency. I have asked the chief executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Laurie Haynes to Mr. Malcolm Bruce, dated 6 November 1995:

As you know, the Minister for Railways and Roads, Mr. John Watts, has asked me to reply to your Parliamentary Questions asking the Secretary of State for Transport for information on the cones hotline and its successor service.

The cones hotline was introduced in June 1992 and was incorporated into the new, more general Highways Agency information line in September 1995. Information on the cones hotline service was given in Hansard on 10 July 1995, vol 263, cols 403 to 404. Highways Agency regularly reviews the needs of road users and we decided to expand the service into a broader information service which will be abe to tell people where roadworks are in place, when they are due to be completed and what delays can be expected as well as giving more general information about the Highways Agency.

Between June 1992 and September 1995 there was a total of 19,500 calls to the hotline and information line. There were 6,000 calls between June 1992 and February 1994, a further 8,000 calls between March 1994 and February 1995 and 5,500 calls between March 1995 and September 1995.

The cost of establishing and running the cones hotline prior to March 1994 is not available as, until then, calls were routed through the Department of Transport's general enquiry number. The estimated average cost of handling each call during the financial year 1994–95 is £2.22. The only additional cost of setting up the new service will be change to roadwork signing. Costs for these will be negligible because new signs are generally being phased in as new roadwork sites are started.

The traffic management arrangements for the roadwork at M3 junction 2 (M25 interchange) were changed at the beginning of this month following calls from motorists and discussions with the local police and our agents. Information is not held centrally on the length of roadwork altered or removed following calls.

The Highways Agency is responsible for trunk roads including motorways in England. Our target is to keep 93% of lanes available on each individual route, and 95% of lanes on the whole trunk road network available at all times. Over the first six months of this financial year, we exceeded this target with over 99 per cent. of lanes on the trunk road network available. Information is not available on the equivalent figure for October 1992, or on the extent of roadworks on local authority roads in England. Roads in Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland are the responsibility of the respective Secretaries of State.

I hope this information is helpful.

Ports (Privatisation)

Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he has reached a decision on the privatisation of the ports of Dover, Ipswich and Tyne. [42100]

Sir George Young: Following consultation with the trust port authorities concerned, I have decided to use my powers under the Ports Act 1991 to require the port authorities of Ipswich and Tyne to submit schemes for privatisation. As regards Dover, I accept the harbour board's advice that it would be better for privatisation to be deferred for two years until the effect of the channel tunnel on the port's business is clearer. The board has assured me that it is its aim to submit a scheme for privatisation by September 1997.

Newbury Bypass

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what contracts have been let to carry out preliminary works for the construction of the A34 Newbury bypass. [40555]

Mr. Watts: This is an operational matter for the Highways Agency. I have asked the chief executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Lawrie Haynes to Mr. Cynog Dafis, dated 7 November 1995:

As you know, the Minister for Railways and Roads, Mr. John Watts, has asked me to reply to your Parliamentary Question asking the Secretary of State for Transport, what contracts have been let to carry out preliminary works for the construction of the A34 Newbury Bypass.

We have let a contract which has been completed for the demolition of the properties needed for the scheme and plan to let a contract in the next few weeks for advance site clearance. This work will take place before the main works begin next year.

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what examination he has made of the Highways Agency's detailed cost-benefit analysis of the Newbury bypass; and if he will make a statement on the estimated economic benefit of this road. [40554]

Mr. Watts: The cost-benefit analysis prepared for the schemes progress through the statutory procedures was considered by the then Secretary of State for Transport, my right hon. Friend the Member for Southend, West, (Mr. Channon) when he considered the public inquiry inspector's report in February 1989. He accepted the inspectors' recommendation that the scheme should proceed. The Highways Agency study looked again at the economic evaluation and this was considered as part of the whole report by the then Secretary of State, my right hon. Friend the Member for Peterborough (Dr. Mawhinney) when he decided that the scheme should proceed. This decision is supported fully by my right hon. Friend the current Secretary of State. The net present value of the benefits of the scheme, at current prices, range between £124.8 million on low traffic growth assumptions and £285.6 million assuming high growth.

Mr. Rendel: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) on what date he expects the tender documents for the Newbury bypass to be sent out to contractors; [41954]

(2) what has caused the delay in the issue of Newbury bypass tender documents to contractors beyond the end date expected in August; [41958]

(3) on what date he now expects the construction of the Newbury bypass to commence; [41956]

(4) by what date he now expects the Newbury bypass to be completed; [41957]

(5) by what date he now expects the tendering process for the Newbury bypass to be completed. [41955]

Mr. Watts: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State confirmed on 11 October that the Newbury bypass will go ahead.

We are aiming to complete the tendering process in order to meet that commitment. Work will start as soon as possible in 1996 and we would anticipate that construction would be completed some two or so years after award of contract.

Following upon the previous Secretary of State's decision to go ahead with the bypass, work has continued to complete EC procedures for competition and bring the tender documents up to date. There has been no undue delay. The Highways Agency has moved as quickly as possible. We currently expect tenders to be invited within a few weeks.

Oil Tankers (Movements)

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what measures he proposes to review safety procedures and pollution control regarding movements of oil tankers. [41459]

Mr. Norris: This is an operational matter for the Marine Safety Agency. I have asked the chief executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from R. M. Bradley to Mr. Cynog Dafis, dated 7 November 1995:

The Secretary of State for Transport has asked me to reply to your Question about oil tanker movements.

A number of internationally-agreed routeing measures are in place around the United Kingdom (UK) to enhance safe navigation and protect the marine environment. Measures include Areas to be Avoided, Precautionary Areas, Recommended Routes, Traffic Separation Schemes and a Deep-Water Route west of the Hebrides, specifically for large tankers.

This Agency reviews the effectiveness of the routeing measures around the UK and takes rigorous action to follow up reported infringements. In particular, the Agency considers carefully any recommendations on routeing matters made by the Department of Transport's Marine Accident Investigation Branch as a result of its investigations into collisions and groundings.

Recent amendments to the Safety of Life at Sea (SOLAS) Convention will allow for the introduction of compulsory ship-reporting systems from 1 January 1996 and compulsory ship-routeing systems from 1 January 1997, subject to their acceptance at the International Maritime Organization (IMO). The UK is at the forefront of efforts to develop a workable system of automatic ship-identification transponders and is pressing at the IMO for the early introduction of this equipment on oil tankers. Transponders will increase the ability of coastal states to monitor the movement of shipping.

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what new plans he has to tighten regulations regarding movements of bulk oil tankers. [41490]

Mr. Norris: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to him today.

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list by type of project (a) how many schemes have been approved to date under the private finance initiative, (b) what is the value of those schemes and (c) what public sector contribution will be required, both initially and as revenue support during the lifetime of the schemes. [41748]

Mr. Watts: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my hon. Friend the Minister for Local Transport and Road Safety to the hon. Member for Nottinhgam, North (Mr. Allen) and 6 November. As to public sector contributions for approved projects, the position is as follows:

Project	Public funding
Northern Line trains	Payments to GEC over the period of the contract are confidential.
Midland Metro Line 1	In total, some £130 million is being contributed by the public sector towards the capital cost of the scheme. There is no public sector revenue support.

Emergency Tugs

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is the cost in the financial year of stationing emergency tugs at (a) Stornoway and (b) Dover; and what is the estimated cost for the stationing emergency tugs at the same ports during the forthcoming winter for six months from 1 November. [41730]

Mr. Norris: This is an operational matter for the Coastguard Agency. I have asked the chief executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from C. J. Harris to Mr. James Wallace, dated 7 November 1995:

The Secretary of State for Transport has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question as the question deals with operational matters, for which I have responsibility as Chief Executive.

The cost for the emergency tugs for winter 1994–95 (4 months) was as follows:

(a) Stornoway: £425,500

(b) Dover Strait: £418,400

The estimated cost of the vessels for winter 1995–96 (6 months) is as follows:

(a) Stornoway: £1,000,000

(b) Dover Strait: £1,100,000

Red Routes

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects the new priority routes, red routes, to be introduced in Islington; on which roads; at what costs; and if he will make a statement. [42043]

Mr. Norris: The programme of implementation of red routes is a matter for the traffic director for London. In Islington, he is currently introducing red route measures on the A501 Pentonville road, at a cost of around £500,000, and measures on the A503 Seven Sisters road are planned for 1997, subject to finance, at a cost of around £1 million.

Car-free Areas (London)

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans he has to authorise car-free areas in inner London; and if he will make a statement. [42041]

Mr. Norris: It is for local highway authorities to consider whether to introduce such schemes.

Traffic-Free Zones (London)

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what studies have been undertaken by the Government office for London into the possibility of creating traffic-free zones in inner London; and if he will make a statement. [42040]

Mr. Norris: None.

Car Commuting Estimates

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what are his latest estimates for the level of daily car commuting into central London for 1996 to the year 2000; and if he will make a statement. [42042]

Mr. Norris: The Department's most recent cordon survey recorded 114,000 cars entering central London between 7 am and 10 am on a typical weekday in 1993. Projections are not made for short spans of years but on present assumptions, growth is expected to average about 0.5 per cent. per year between 1991 and 2011.

Burnley and Pendle Bus Co.

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what indication he has given to Pendle council or any of its councillors regarding his consent to the sale of Burnley and Pendle Bus Co. [41920]

Mr. Norris: For reasons of commercial confidentiality, it is not my practice to disclose the details of any correspondence with a local authority on such an issue.

Vehicle Emission Checks

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what budget is allocated for enforcing emission standards; how many vehicle owners are fined for failing emission standards every year; and how many light vehicles fail emission standards at road tests every year. [42117]

Mr. Norris: The total budget for vehicle emissions checks in 1995–96 is £621,900, which includes £400,000 for the special emission blitzes we have been running over the past year. Latest figures show that around 16 per cent. of taxis, 4 per cent. of cars, and 8 per cent. of light goods vehicles exceed prescribed emission limits. Offenders are normally given 14 days to obtain a new MOT certificate in order to demonstrate that any roadworthiness defects have been corrected. Most comply and so there is only a very small number of prosecutions.

Bus and Coach Industry

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of the impact of the EC bus and coach directive on the United Kingdom industry. [42115]

Mr. Norris: We are currently awaiting a formal proposal for a bus and coach construction directive from the Commission. We have had full discussions with the manufacturing and operating industry and will do everything possible to ensure that any directive protects both the interests of industry and the future of existing UK vehicle types.

Transport Policy

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what were the main findings of the interactive survey to examine public attitudes to transport policy and the environment. [42116]

Mr. Norris: Results from the first stage of this research are not expected until the new year.

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects to publish a response to the 18th report of the Royal Commission on environmental pollution, transport and the environment. [41755]

Mr. Norris: Decisions on the Government's response will be taken in the light of the national debate on transport policy.

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what measures he is proposing (a) to promote (i) cycling, (ii) walking and (iii) use of public transport and (b) to reduce the amount of road traffic. [41756]

Mr. Norris: A range of measures is already in place. Views on further measures were invited as part of the national debate on transport policy.

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what steps he intends to take to reduce the proportion of urban journeys undertaken by car (a) in London from 50 per cent. in the London area to (i) 45 per cent. by 2000 and (ii) to 35 per cent. by 2020 and (b) in other urban areas from 65 per cent. (i) to 60 per cent. by 2000 and (ii) 50 per cent. by 2020. [41762]

Mr. Norris: Views on the desirability of such targets, and the measures required to meet them, were invited as part of the national debate on transport policy.

Ship-identification Transponders

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what progress has currently been made through the International Maritime Organisation for the early introduction of ship-identification transponders on oil tankers. [41864]

Mr. Norris: This is an operational matter for the Marine Safety Agency. I have asked the chief executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from R.M. Bradley to Mr. Elliot Morley, dated 7 November 1995:

The Secretary of State for Transport has asked me to reply to your Question about transponders.

There appears to be broad international acceptance of the principle of transponders and it is encouraging that the International Maritime Organisation (IMO) has now developed a performance standard for a system based on VHF radio, which is particularly suitable for monitoring coastal shipping.

The United Kingdom is continuing its efforts at the IMO to secure the compulsory carriage of transponders on larger ships as soon as possible. As part of that drive, this Agency is conducting a trial using automatic ship-identification transponders on a number of ships in the Dover Strait.

Official Hospitality (Expenditure)

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list (a) the total amount spent by his Department on hospitality and (b) each item of expenditure over £1,000 spent on hospitality by his Department in each of the last five years. [40995]

Mr. Norris: The Department of Transport—excluding its agencies—has spent the following amounts on official hospitality over the past five years.

1990–91: £204,040
1991–92: £170,015
1992–93: £233,762
1993–94: £234,986
1994–95: £127,247

These figures have been obtained from the Department's computerised accounts system. The categories of expenditure used to obtain the figures are:

C1300: Entertainment UK (superseded in 1993–94 by C1305 and C1306)
C1301: Official teas/working lunches
C1305: Entertainment UK (ministers)
C1306: Entertainment UK (others)
C1310: Entertainment overseas (ministers)
C1311: Entertainment overseas (others)
C1320: Road opening ceremonies
C1321: Medal ceremony costs.

The number of items of expenditure over £1,000 in each of the above categories over the past five years is as follows:

	C1300	C1301	C1306	C1311	C1320	C1321	Total
1990–91	13	11	—	3	1	1	29
1991–92	1	1	—	3	8	3	16
1992–93	4	2	—	2	3	1	12
1993–94	—	2	1	1	2	—	6
1994–95	—	—	3	2	—	—	5

Freight Transport

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what was the percentage of freight sent by (a) road and (b) rail in each year since 1979. [41811]

Mr. Watts: The percentage of total freight sent by (a) road and (b) rail in each year since 1979 is as follows:

1979	11	55
1980	10	53
1981	10	54

Year	Rail percentage of billion tonne KMs	Road percentage of billion tonne KMs
1982	9	53
1983	9	52
1984	7	55
1985	8	55
1986	9	56
1987	9	58
1988	8	60
1989	8	62
1990	7	62
1991	7	61
1992	7	61
1993	7	64

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what proposals he has to increase the proportion of freight carried by rail and decrease the proportion of freight carried by road. [41758]

Mr. Watts: Rail must improve its performance if it is to attract new traffic and retain existing freight customers. The key to this is liberalisation and privatisation. We have already opened up the rail network to competition. Privatisation of British Rail's freight businesses will follow as soon as possible.

Rail freight is being further encouraged by a considerably enhanced grants regime. Some 145 grants have been awarded since 1979, with a total value of £100 million at today's prices, securing traffic to rail equivalent to over 2.5 million lorry journeys per year.

Channel Tunnel Rail Link

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the total amount of EU funds that have been made available to the channel tunnel rail link; for what purposes and to which organisations; and if he will make a statement. [41761]

Mr. Watts: Grant has been provided from the transport infrastructure programme since 1991 to support Union Railway's expenditure on feasibility studies for the channel tunnel rail link project. The payments made are as follows:

Year	£ million
1991	4.0
1992	9.6
1993	8.0
1994	14.7
Total	36.3

Note:
£1 = 1.25 ECU.

The Commission has recently awarded £13.6 million feasibility studies grant to Union Railways from the 1995 trans-European networks programme. This programme has replaced the transport infrastructure programme.

Union Railways, a Government-owned company, is responsible for CTRL project development. Its feasibility studies work includes environmental and consultation work, geotechnical surveys, business planning and engineering design.

Drivers' and Pilots' Working Hours

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what transport issues relating to (a) drivers' hours and (b) pilots' hours are currently before the EC's Social Committee and what is Her Majesty's Government's policy on each of them. [41766]

Mr. Norris: The European Commission's Joint Transport Committee on Road Transport is carrying out a survey of drivers' working hours in member states and has been asked to produce conclusions on the adoption of working time into the EU regulation on drivers' hours rules. The committee comprises representatives from employer organisations and unions. The Government are not party to these discussions but will consider the report when produced.

We are not aware of any issues relating to pilots' hours before European Commission committees at present. However, flight and duty time for aircrew are being considered by the joint aviation authorities and we will consider any recommendation they propose.

European Directives

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to his answer of 31 October, Official Report, column 136, if he will list the 12 directives under consideration indicating the action required or being taken in each case and the timetable for parliamentary consideration in each case. [41598]

Mr. Watts: My answer of 31 October should have said that only 11 directives require secondary legislation. These directives are listed, along with the action required or being taken in each case:

Directive number	Title	Outstanding action
95/21/EC	On the enforcement, in respect of shipping using Community ports and sailing in the waters under the jurisdiction of the member states, of international standards for ship safety, pollution prevention and shipboard living and working conditions (port state control). The Regulations are being redrafted and it is intended to have domestic legislation in place at the beginning of 1996.
94/57/EC	Concerning common rules and standards for ship inspection and survey organisations and for the relevant activities of maritime administrations.	Draft regulations are being prepared and will be the subject of public consultation. No Parliamentary timetable has yet been set.

Directive number	Title	Outstanding action
94/58/EC	Concerning the minimum level of training for seafarers.	The vast majority of the IMO Standards for Training, Certification and Watchkeeping regulations have already been implemented. New legislation is required only for that part dealing with communication by the crew.
Number not yet assigned	On the allocation of railway infrastructure capacity and the charging of infrastructure fees.	Discussions are underway with industry partners in advance of preparation of secondary legislation.
Number not yet assigned	On the licensing of railway undertakings.	Discussions are underway with industry partners in advace of preparation of secondary legislation.
87/540	Access to the occupation of carrier of goods by waterway in national and international transport, and on the mutual recognition of diplomas, certificates and other evidence of formal qualifications for this occupation.	The United Kingdom benefits from a derogation for United Kingdom domestic carriers. Secondary legislation is being drafted to provide for certification for United Kingdom carriers operating in other member states and for the recognition in the United Kingdom of certificates granted in other member states for non-United Kingdom carriers using United Kingdom inland waterways.
94/56	On the investigation of civil aviation accidents and incidents.	Implementation of this directive entails amendments to both primary and secondary legislation. It is anticipated that this will be completed before the obligatory date of 21 November.
92/97	Amends 70/157 in respect of the permissible sound level and the exhaust system of vehicles.	Regulations applying this directive to new vehicle types came into effect on 1 October 1995. Regulations applying it to all vehicles entering into service are in preparation and will come into effect on 1 October 1996. Subject to statutory consultation the latter will be made and laid in Parliament early in 1996.
93/75	Minimum requirements for vessels bound for or leaving Community ports and carrying dangerous or polluting goods.	This directive as implemented on 31 October 1995.
94/55	On the approximation of the laws of member states with regard to the transport of dangerous goods by road.	The Health and Safety Executive will soon publish draft regulations for consultation. The regulations are expected to be laid before Parliament in the summer of 1996.
91/439	On driving licences.	Draft regulations amending primary legislation are now with Parliamentary Counsel. The drafting of regulations to amend secondary legislation is in hand. It is not possible at present to indicate when either set of regulations will be submitted to Parliament.

Cycling

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what measures exist, or are proposed, to increase cycle use to 10 per cent. of all urban journeys by 2005. [41757]

Mr. Norris: We have taken a number of initiatives which are designed to encourage and increase the number of people cycling. I announced in June this year that we intended to identify national targets for more cycling use. The steering group that we have set up to generate a national strategy for cycling will consider what targets are most appropriate.

Railways (Expenditure)

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list figures for total Government spending on the railways for the current year and in each of the last 10 years. [41809]

Mr. Watts: The table provides details of the railways' external finance requirement for each year since 1985–86.

	£ million cash
1985–86	910
1986–87	777
1987–88	545
1988–89	376
1989–90	711
1990–91	1,077
1991–92	1,464
1992–93	2,064
1993–94	1,461
1994–95	1,541
1995–96	[1]975

Notes:

[1] Planned figure.

1. From 1987–88, figures exclude movements in payroll creditors.

Ro-ro Ferries

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on the decision by the Council of Ministers in respect of the European Parliament's proposal in respect of the safety management certificates of ro-ro ferries visiting EU ports. [41759]

Mr. Norris: This is an operational matter for the Marine Safety Agency. I have asked the chief executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from R.M. Bradley to Mr. Graham Allen dated 7 November 1995:

The Secretary of State for Transport has asked me to reply to your request that he make a statement on the decision by the Council of Ministers in respect of the European Parliament's proposal in respect of the Safety Management Certificates of ro-ro ferries visiting EU ports.

The UK fully supports this proposal which will require all such ro-ro passenger ferries to carry a Safety Management Certificate from the 1 July 1996 regardless of the flag of the vessel.

Council of Transport Ministers

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make available the minutes of the last EU Council of Transport Ministers meeting on 28 September. [41760]

Mr. Watts: Details of the voting at the Transport Council were set out in my right hon. Friend's reply of 6 November to the hon. Member for Derbyshire, North-East (Mr. Barnes). Minutes of the Council meetings prior to a Council decision of 2 October 1995 on the release of such minutes were not routinely made public. However, the Council Secretariat has issued a press release reporting on the outcome of the Transport Council. I shall send a copy to the hon. Member.

Rail Commuters

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport which five cities have the lowest percentage of commuters using rail. [41331]

Mr. Watts: This information is not held by my Department.

Road Accident Statistics

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) if he will list for each police force area the number of children killed or injured while travelling on school transport for each of the last five years; [40998]

(2) if he will list for each police force area the number of fatalities resulting from accidents involving heavy goods vehicles for each of the last five years. [40997]

Mr. Norris: Available information is shown in the following tables.

Heathrow Airport (Emergency Calls)

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the numbers and categories of Mayday emergency calls made to Heathrow airport in each of the last 10 years. [42114]

Mr. Norris: The Mayday call is used where there is a serious and/or imminent danger and immediate assistance is required.

Mayday calls are normally made to air traffic control centres rather than to airports. Mayday calls made by aircraft bound for Heathrow airport for the last 10 years are as follows:

Years	Mayday calls
1985 to 1989 inclusive	0
1990	2
1991	0
1992	0
1993	1
1994	1

Hidden Report

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if the legal obligation on the British Railways

Board to implement the recent recommendation of the Hidden report, following the Clapham accident, is also binding on Railtrack. [42082]

Mr. Watts: Railtrack, like the British Railways Board, implements railway accident inquiry recommendations relating to its responsibilities according to the principles of the Health and Safety at Work, etc. Act 1974. The Act is based on reducing risks as low as reasonably practicable, taking into account costs and safety benefits.

All the Hidden report recommendations addressed to British Rail and the British Transport police have either been implemented, or have alternative actions in hand, or are on-going. The position on outstanding recommendations is recorded in my reply to a question by the hon. Member for Stoke-on-Trent, North (Ms Walley) on 16 October 1995, columns 86–87.

A350

Mr. Faber: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what estimate of future traffic flows has been made by his Department for the A350 between the M4 and Warminster in both directions. [41856]

Mr. Watts: This is an operational matter for the Highways Agency. I have asked the chief executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Lawrie Haynes to Mr. David Faber, dated 7 November 1995:

As you know, the Minister for Railways and Roads, Mr. John Watts, has asked me to reply to your Parliamentary Question asking the Secretary of State for Transport, what estimate of future traffic flows has been made by his Department for the A350 between the M4 and Warminster in both directions.

The A350 is a principal road for which Wiltshire County Council is the highways authority. However, the Highways Agency have carried out limited traffic survey work on the A350 at West Aston to the east of Trowbridge, in connection with our trunk road proposals for the A36 East of Bath-Beckington Improvement scheme. The annual average two-way daily flow forecast for the year 2018 at West Aston is in the range 27,000–35,000 if there is no improvement to the A36, and in the 18,000–24,000 if the A36 East of Bath–Beckington Improvement scheme is built to dual carriageway standard on the preferred route.

International Marine Safety Corps

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is his policy towards re-establishing an international marine safety corps to inspect vessels globally. [41595]

Mr. Norris: The original international marine safety corps was set up in 1978 primarily to provide expert advice to developing countries in the formulation of regulations and survey procedure.

International co-operation in maritime safety has now advanced to a point where re-establishment of such a corps would no longer be appropriate or necessary.

Roads Expenditure

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list total Government spending on roads in each year for the last 10 years. [41808]

Mr. Watts: The information requested regarding total Government spending on roads, in cash terms in each year for the last 10 years is set out below in £ million:

1985–86: 1,317.8
1986–87: 1,391.8
1987–88: 1,476.6
1988–89: 1,599.3
1989–90: 1,852.5
1990–91: 2,435.4
1991–92: 2,623.8
1992–93: 2,919.3
1993–94: 3,084.6
1994–95: 2,929.2

European Court Decisions

Sir Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to the oral answer of the Attorney-General of 30 October, Official Report, column 12, relating to decisions of the European Court of Justice and the European Court of Human Rights, if he will list those European Court decisions relating to responsibilities of his Department over the past two years; and what was the estimated annual cost to public funds of each decision. [41217]

Mr. Watts [holding answer 2 November 1995]: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given today by my hon. Friend the Minister of State at the Foreign Office.

PRIME MINISTER

Engagements

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list his official engagements for Tuesday 7 November. [40299]

Sir Peter Tapsell: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list his official engagements for Tuesday 7 November. [40300]

The Deputy Prime Minister: I have been asked to reply.

My right hon. Friend, the Prime Minister is travelling to New Zealand to attend the Commonwealth Heads of Government meeting.

Campaign for Nuclear Disarmament

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Prime Minister, pursuant to his oral answer of the 31 October 1995, Official Report, column 96, regarding membership of the Campaign for Nuclear Disarmament, if he will make a further statement. [41994]

The Prime Minister: I understand that the hon. Member for Walsall, North (Mr. Winnick) was a member of Parliamentary Labour CND in the 1980s. I would be delighted if he has since recanted his views.

Council of Europe and Western European Union

Mr. Peter Atkinson: To ask the Prime Minister if he will place in the Library a copy of the information bulletin on the activities of the United Kingdom delegation to the Parliamentary Assembly of the Council of Europe and the Assembly of the Western European Union covering the period March to September 1995. [42215]

The Prime Minister: I have done so today.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Terrorist Offences

Mr. Robert McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people were first prosecuted for terrorist type offences (a) in the year prior to the 1 September 1994 in respect of crimes occurring before 1 September 1993 and (b) in the year prior to 1 September 1995 in respect of crimes occurring over a year before that date. [38483]

Sir John Wheeler: I will write to the hon. and learned Gentleman as soon as possible.

Occupational Health and Safety

Mr. Robert McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what public funds have been made available to the Northern Ireland occupational health and safety group over the last three years. [40887]

Sir John Wheeler: Since 1 April 1992 the Health and Safety Agency for Northern Ireland has contributed £11,226 to initiatives involving the Northern Ireland occupational health and safety group. Details are provided in the table.

Financial year	Purpose of payment	Amount £
1992–93	Purchase of display stand space at Group conference	130
1993–94	Contribution towards costs of Group safety quiz and three Group safety awareness seminars	5,500
1994–95	Contribution towards costs of Group safety quiz, school leavers' seminars and school video project	4,450
1995–96[1]	Costs of advertising occupational safety awards scheme	1,146
Total		11,226

[1] To date.

Child Support Agency

Mr. Robert McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what consideration is given in the rules relating to the Child Support Agency to pre-existing debts owned by the absent parent; what assessment he has made as to whether the regulations are leading to bankruptcies; and what evidence he has as to the relationship between claims for incapacity benefit and the agency's financial demands. [40890]

Mr. Moss: At present no allowance is made for pre-existing debts in the child support maintenance formula. Such debts will, however, be considered under the proposed departure system, which it is anticipated will come into force towards the end of 1996.

While we have undertaken no formal evaluation, there is no indication that child support regulations have led to bankruptcies; nor is there any evidence of a relationship between claims for incapacity benefits and the requirements to pay child support maintenance.

Temporary and Part-time Staff

Mr. Ian McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many staff are currently employed in his Department and in related agencies on (a) temporary or casual employment contracts and (b) part-time employment contracts, given as an actual figure and as a proportion of the total workforce; and what were the corresponding figures for five years ago. [41118]

Sir John Wheeler: The information requested is listed:

	Temporary/ casual employment	Percentage of total workforce	Part-time employment	Percentage of total workforce
1995	1,365	5.21	1,910	7.29
1990	1,137	4.18	754	2.77

The 1990 figures for civilian staff of the Prison Service are not included as the information is not held in the format requested.

Official Inquiries

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list all the official inquiries he and his Department have undertaken over the last five years indicating the dates they were initiated and the dates when findings were released to the public. [41449]

Sir John Wheeler: The information is as follows:

Official enquiries	Date initiated	Date findings released to public
The Stormont Fire and Fire Safety in Crown Buildings Inquiry	January 1995	April 1995
'An Abuse of Trust' an investigation by the Social Services Inspectorate	November 1992	January 1994
Review of the Operational Policy in Belfast Prison for the Management of Paramilitary Prisoners from opposing factions.	December 1991	March 192

Business Assistance

Ms Mowlam: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people who have been helped to return to business in Northern Ireland by the local enterprise development unit, have also received assistance from (a) Industrial research and technology unit and (b) the Training and Employment Agency. [41896]

Sir John Wheeler: One company which was established following the original launch of LEDU's "Making it Back Home" campaign in 1991 has received assistance from both the Training and Employment Agency and the industrial research and technology unit.

Ms Mowlam: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many businesses in Northern Ireland have (a) applied for assistance from the export marketing research scheme and (b) been granted assistance by the export marketing research scheme in the past five years in Northern Ireland. [41904]

Sir John Wheeler: Since March 1990, 11 Northern Ireland companies have applied for assistance under the export marketing research scheme. Of these, eight applications were successful and three were rejected.

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what public funds were invested in the Rath Mor community business centre in Creggan, Londonderry; what assistance was given to the project by the International Fund for Ireland; what plans there are for the location of a Wellworths supermarket in the centre; and if he will make a statement about the availability of public funds for supermarket chains from (a) Great Britain; and (b) the Republic of Ireland locating in Northern Ireland. [41947]

Mr. Moss: The public sector contribution to the Rath Mor centre comprised a grant of £1.08 million and a loan of £0.27 million paid by the Department of the Environment for Northern Ireland together with an amount of £12,500 paid by the local enterprise development unit of the Department of Economic Development.

I understand that the International Fund for Ireland has assisted the development. The fund is administered by an independent board appointed jointly by the two Governments. All disbursements are a matter for that Board and questions regarding them should be directed to the fund's chairman, Mr. William T. McCarter, PO Box 2000, Belfast BT4 3SA.

Wellworths has occupied the supermarket unit in the Rath Mor centre since it opened.

There are no public funds available for supermarket chains from Great Britain or the Republic of Ireland wishing to locate in Northern Ireland.

Ms Mowlam: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much money will be available in total every year for the "Making it Back Home" scheme. [41898]

Sir John Wheeler: The initial budget will be £2 million next year. Experience from that year will help set future budgets.

Jobskills Programme

Ms Mowlam: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) if he will list the names of the Training and Employment Agency approved providers of the jobskills programme in Northern Ireland; [41900]

(2) how many people are currently participating in jobskills programmes in Northern Ireland (a) in the 16–24 year age group, (b) in the 25–60 year age group, (c) who have never been in employment and (d) who have been unemployed for more than one year; [41902]

(3) how many of the participants in the jobskills programme in Northern Ireland are currently on a jobskills access course. [41901]

Mr. Ancram: Responsibility for the subject in question has been delegated to the Training and Employment Agency under its chief executive, Mr. Ian Walters. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

A list of organisations approved by the Training and Employment Agency to provide training for the jobskills programme has been placed in the library.

Letter from Ian Walters to Ms Marjorie Mowlam, dated 6 November 1995:

The Secretary of State for Northern Ireland has asked me, as the Chief Executive of the Training and Employment Agency, to reply to your questions about Jobskills.

1. Question No 1683

Attached is a list of the organisations approved by the Training and Employment Agency to provide training for the Jobskills programme.

2. Question No 1696

The numbers of participants in Jobskills Access from the latest information available at 13 October 1995 is 1,496.

3. Question No 1691

From the latest information available the number of people participating in the Jobskills programme at 13 October 1995:

(a) in the 16–24 year age group is 9,104;

(b) in the 25–60 year age group is 1,477.

The eligibility conditions for entry to Jobskills do not require information from participants which would provide answers to questions (c) and (d).

I hope you find this helpful.

Investors (Visits)

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many investors visited the (a) district of Down (b) borough of Castlereagh (c) borough of Ards at the request of the industrial development board in each of the past 10 years and if he will make a statement about the number of new jobs promoted by the IDB in each of these areas. [41908]

Sir John Wheeler: The information requested on the number of visits by investors is not available for all of the period specified and could be provided only at disproportionate cost. The table shows the number of IDB sponsored visits by potential investors to the areas concerned between April 1993 and September 1995.

Visits by investors

District Council	1993–94	1994–95	1995–96 (to 30 September)	Total
Newtownards	10	3	1	14
Castlereagh	5	3	5	13
Down	2	10	3	15

In the past 10 years IDB has promoted a total of 2,863 jobs in the areas concerned as follows:

District council area	Down	Castlereagh	Ards	Total
1985–86	10	141	155	306
1986–87	67	168	247	482

European Regional Funds

Ms Mowlam: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) if private sector funding is admissible to match funding available under the European Union objective 1 funding programmes for Northern Ireland; [41889]

(2) if private sector funding is admissible to match funding available under European Union objective 2 funding programmes for Northern Ireland. [41890]

Sir John Wheeler: Northern Ireland is entirely an objective 1 region and as such the Government welcome private sector contributions to projects which the structural funds support. Where activities merit and are eligible for support under approved programmes in Northern Ireland private sector contributions are admissible as matching funding.

Radioactivity

Ms Mowlam: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what systems are in place to monitor levels of radioactivity in the seas surrounding Northern Ireland and how often such monitoring is carried out. [41891]

Mr. Moss: In Northern Ireland the Department of the Environment's chief inspector, appointed under the Radioactive Substances Act 1993, monitors levels of radioactivity in the Irish sea and the Northern Ireland coastal environment.

The inspectorate arranges for samples of seaweed, sediment, fish, nephrops and winkles to be collected and forwarded for analysis by the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food's fisheries research laboratory at Lowestoft. Samples are taken quarterly except in the case of sediments, where the frequency is six monthly. The Northern Ireland results are published annually in the MAFF report "Radioactivity in Surface and Coastal Waters of the British Isles" and in the Northern Ireland abstract of statistics.

In addition to this programme the inspectorate monitors the gamma dose rate in air over intertidal sediments in each district council in Northern Ireland with a coastline.

Peace and Reconciliation Programme

Ms Mowlam: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what have been the administration costs to date to the Northern Ireland Office for the management and distribution of the European special support programme for peace and reconciliation. [41894]

Sir John Wheeler: To date, the administration of the European special support programme for peace and reconciliation has been undertaken by the Department of Finance and Personnel and other Northern Ireland Departments from within their existing resources. This activity is undertaken alongside other activities and has not been separately costed. As is the case with other structural fund programmes, the costs of this administration will not be scored against the programme.

Ms Mowlam: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if private sector funding is admissible to match funding available under the European Union programme for peace and reconciliation in Northern Ireland. [41888]

Sir John Wheeler: The Government welcome private sector contributions to projects which the structural funds support. As is the case with all other European programmes, there is scope for the private sector and private finance to play their part in the special support programme for peace and reconciliation.

Ms Mowlam: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much of the funding allocated under the European Union special support programme for peace and reconciliation has been distributed to organisations in Northern Ireland to date; and what percentage this is of the total planned spending for the first year of the programme. [41893]

Sir John Wheeler: To date, no funding from the special support programme for peace and reconciliation has been distributed to organisations outside central Government in Northern Ireland, though provisional allocations have been determined for all measures. It is hoped that payments under the technical assistance sub-programme and for some projects can be made in November 1995. This reflects the need to establish the novel delivery mechanisms envisaged in the programme, including the need to develop contracts between the European Commission, Northern Ireland departments and intermediary funding bodies. In addition, the Government recognise that small organisations, which would not usually apply for funding, must be given time to submit an application. Any funds unspent in the first year of the programme will be carried forward to future years.

Asbestos Pipes

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what assessment he has made of (a) the presence and (b) the effects on health of asbestos fibres in water systems using asbestos cement pipes; what proposals exist to monitor the presence of asbestos fibres in the proposed Mourne to Belfast water supply pipelines; what is the estimated cost of monitoring the pipeline during its working lifetime; and if he will make a statement about the use of asbestos cement pipes for water supply systems. [41906]

Mr. Moss: The Department has commissioned a study by the water research centre to advise on the use of asbestos cement pipes for public water supply. The questions asked by the right hon. Gentleman are being considered as part of the study. I will let him know the outcome of the study in due course.

Community Work Programmes

Ms Mowlam: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is (a) the target number of trainees set for the pilot projects under the community work programme in (i) Fermanagh, (ii) Strabane and (iii) west Belfast and (b) the target date for completion of the pilot projects; [41895]

(2) how many trainees have been placed to date under the community work programme pilot project in (a) Strabane, (b) Fermanagh and (c) west Belfast. [41905]

Mr. Ancram: Responsibility for the subject in question has been delegated to the Training and Employment Agency under its chief executive, Mr. Ian Walters. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Ian Walters to Ms Marjorie Mowlam, dated 6 November 1995:

The Secretary of State for Northern Ireland has asked me as Chief Executive of the Training and Employment Agency to reply to your questions on the Community Work Programme.

The target number of participants and current occupancy in each of the pilot areas is as follows:

	Target	Occupancy
Fermanagh	250	89
Strabane	250	38
West Belfast	500	69

A full evaluation of the Community Work Programme will be undertaken by March 1997 when decisions will be taken regarding the future of the Programme.

Deregulation

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what consideration led to the decision not to replicate sections 1, 2, 3 and 4 of the Deregulation and Contracting Out Act 1994 in the proposed Northern Ireland Order. [41866]

Mr. Ancram: This approach was not adopted because of concerns that subordinate orders, made under an Order in Council, would not be subject to formal scrutiny by Parliament— a situation substantially at odds with that in Great Britain.

Employment Schemes

Ms Mowlam: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what structures are in place to monitor the success rates of people gaining full-time employment after finishing a placement with an action for community employment scheme in Northern Ireland. [41899]

Mr. Ancram: Responsibility for the subject in question has been delegated to the Training and Employment Agency under its chief executive, Mr. Ian Walters. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Ian Walters to Ms Marjorie Mowlam, dated 6 November 1995:

The Secretary of State for Northern Ireland has asked me, as Chief Executive of the Training and Employment Agency, to reply to your question about ACE.

The ACE Leavers Survey is a biannual survey which examines the destinations of leavers three months after leaving the programme. The first survey analyses the results of those who leave in May each year with a corresponding exercise being carried out for October leavers.

A Community Audit Return is undertaken on an annual basis. All ACE Projects are asked to provide information on a range of measures related to their performance including destinations of leavers.

In 1994–95, 19% of ACE leavers entered full-time employment.

I hope that you find this helpful.

Planning Permission (Black Mountain)

Ms Mowlam: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what consultations with the local community took place before the Department of the Environment gave planning permission to White Quarry Industries for quarrying to go ahead in the Black Mountain area of Belfast. [41903]

Mr. Moss: Prior to 1974, express planning permission was not required in Northern Ireland for the continuation of operations in respect of a quarry undertaking which had been in existence when planning control was first introduced in 1944. The Black Mountain quarry was such a quarry undertaking and enjoyed what were known as "existing use rights". Quarry operations were brought under control in 1974 subject to a compensation provision for loss of existing use rights. Since that date eight planning applications for planning permission for the continuation of quarrying at Black Mountain have been granted subject to conditions. Before the applications were determined, notices were placed in local newspapers, in accordance with normal statutory procedures, giving the opportunity for members of the public to make representations and objections which were taken into account before the applications were determined.

Export Marketing Research Scheme

Ms Mowlam: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much money is available to employers of up to 500 workers in Northern Ireland under the export marketing research scheme. [41911]

Sir John Wheeler: The maximum amount of financial assistance available to Northern Ireland employers under the export marketing research scheme is £20,000 per project. A maximum of two projects can be funded annually.

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list by type of project (a) how many schemes have been approved to date under the private finance initiative, (b) what is the value of those schemes and (c) what private sector contribution will be required both initially and as revenue support during the lifetime of the schemes. [41744]

Sir John Wheeler: No schemes under the private finance initiative, announced by the Chancellor of the Exchequer in November 1992, have been approved in Northern Ireland to date. A number of areas, including two pilot projects covering sewage treatment plans in the water executive with an estimated value of £20–25 million are under consideration. It is too early, however, to put a total value on these schemes or estimate what the public sector contribution is likely to be.

Scott Inquiry

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many persons in his Department are on the public payroll or employed as consultants or advisers and work on a part-time or full-time basis in relation to the Scott inquiry; if he will list their names; and how much each is paid. [42078]

Sir John Wheeler: None.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many persons have been authorised to have access to documents held by his Department relating to the Scott inquiry; and if he will list such persons. [42079]

Sir John Wheeler: Ministers, former Ministers, officials and other advisers have access to material relating to the inquiry as necessary in order to carry out their responsibilities.

Guided Learning Hours

Mr. Rooney: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, pursuant to his answer of 4 April, Official Report, column 1062, what definition he intends to introduce to mirror the concept of guided learning hours appropriate to England and Wales. [41949]

Mr. Moss: The guided learning hours concept does not apply in Northern Ireland where the distinction between full-time and part-time courses remains clear in all sectors of education. The determining rules for Northern Ireland will continue to be that attendance at a full-time course will normally exclude a person from benefit. Attendance at a part-time course will not exclude that individual from benefit, so long as he or she remains available for and actively seeking work.

Abortions

Mr. Robert McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will commence recording as a separate statistic the number of medical terminations of pregnancy carried out in the Northern Ireland health service; and for what reasons they are not so recorded. [42083]

Mr. Moss: The number of medical terminations of pregnancy carried out in the Northern Ireland health service is not collected as a separate statistic. The Abortion Act 1967 does not apply in Northern Ireland and thus there is at present no legal obligation for doing so.

Regimental Pension Provision

Mr. Robert McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list those sections of the RUC, Royal Ulster Constabulary reserve, Ulster Defence Regiment and Royal Irish Regiment that were since 1969 ineligible to join their appropriate public sector pension scheme and if he will list (a) the dates on which they became eligible, (b) what backdating was applied and (c) in each case which sections were (i) part-time and (ii) full-time; and what plans he has to review the position of those whose service has not been pensionable. [42084]

Sir John Wheeler: Pension provision for the UDR and the RIR is a matter for my right hon. Friend the Defence Secretary.

The RUC full-time reserve was given access to the RUC pension scheme on 1 July 1994 and awarded full credit for service from 6 April 1988.

The RUC part-time reserve does not have access to the RUC pension scheme. However, in the light of a recent European Union directive, a review of the terms and conditions, including pensions, of part-time employees generally will be undertaken by the Northern Ireland Office.

Former members of the Ulster Special Constabulary who on 1 March 1969 had less than 10 years' continuous mobilised service or who had 10 or more years of such service but elected to retain their mobilised status, and who were subsequently embodied in the RUC on 1 May 1970 as full-time "auxiliary constables", are entitled under the terms of the RUC Pensions Regulations 1988 to a gratuity rather than a pension. Their entitlement is under review at present.

Civil Service Transfers

Mr. Robert McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what plans he has to add to the categories of compassionate grounds for facilitating inter-service transfers between the Northern Ireland and home civil service of those civil servants who marry a person resident in Great Britain and vice versa. [42085]

Sir John Wheeler: I have no plans to add to the categories of compassionate grounds for facilitating inter-service transfers. As I said in my reply to the hon. and learned Gentleman on 16 October 1995, Official Report, column 177, the criteria for compassionate transfers between the Northern Ireland civil service and the home civil service include those who need to move to be with their spouse. A civil servant seeking a transfer because of marriage to a person resident in Great Britain or vice versa would be eligible for consideration.

However, movement is dependent on suitable vacancies being available and the recent contraction of both services has reduced opportunities for transfers.

Ulster Scots Language

Mr. Robert McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the Arts Council's policy in respect of initiatives to support the Ulster Scots language. [42087]

Mr. Ancram: I shall write to the hon. and learned Gentleman as soon as possible.

Mr. McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will propose to the Arts Council that it (a) takes steps to give symbolic recognition to the Ulster Scots language and (b) produces part of its annual report in that language. [42088]

Mr. Ancram: I shall write to the hon. and Learned Gentleman as soon as possible.

Annual Remuneration

Mr. Malcom Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many individuals in (a) his Department, (b) agencies and (c) non-departmental public bodies received annual remuneration including benefits in kind exceeding (i) £100,000, (ii) £200,000 and (iii) £300,000 in each year since 1985–86. [40858]

Sir John Wheeler [holding answer 1 November 1995]: Other than pension contributions, benefits in kind are not normally paid to staff in the Northern Ireland Office and NI Departments, agencies and NDPBs. As members of the principal civil service pensions scheme, staff receive benefits in accordance with the scheme rules which have been deposited in the Library of the House. The numbers receiving annual remuneration above the sums specified, excluding pension benefits, in the years in question, is not available in some Departments prior to 1992–93. In 1992–

93, one individual received annual remuneration exceeding £100,000.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Ministerial Information Systems

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he has established a MINIS system for his office. [41468]

The Deputy Prime Minister: Yes.

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Betts: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will list by type of project (a) how many schemes have been approved to date under the private finance initiative, (b) what is the value of those schemes and (c) what public sector contribution will be required both initially and as revenue support during the lifetime of the schemes. [41736]

Mr. Horam: The Cabinet Office, including the Office of Public Service, HMSO and the Central Office of Information have not approved any schemes to date under the private finance initiative.

Mr. Betts: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will list by type of project (a) how many schemes have been approved to date under the private finance initiative, (b) what is the value of those schemes and (c) what public sector contribution will be required both initially and as revenue support during the lifetime of the schemes. [41735]

The Deputy Prime Minister: In respect of the Cabinet Office (Office of Public Service), HMSO, and COI, I refer the hon. Member to the answer given today by the Parliamentary Secretary, Office of Public Service.

Scott Inquiry

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how many persons in (a) his Office and (b) the Central Office of Information are on the public payroll or employed as consultants or advisers and work on a part-time or full-time basis in relation to the Scott inquiry; if he will list them; and how much each is paid. [42070]

Mr. Freeman: There are no staff within my private office or within the Central Office of Information wholly employed on matters relating to the Scott inquiry. It is not possible to identify the number of people involved on a part-time or occasional basis within my private office or the Central Office of Information or as external consultants or advisers. It is not the practice to name staff or external advisers.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how many persons have been authorised to have access to documents held by (a) his Office and (b) the Central Office of Information relating to the Scott inquiry; and if he will list such persons. [42071]

Mr. Freeman: Ministers, former Ministers, officials and other advisers have access to material relating to the inquiry as necessary in order to carry out their responsibilities.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many persons have been authorised to have access to documents held by the Deputy Prime Minister's Office and the Office of Public Service relating to the Scott inquiry; and if he will list such persons. [42056]

The Deputy Prime Minister: Ministers, former Ministers, officials and other advisers have access to material relating to the inquiry as necessary in order to carry out their responsibilities.

WALES

Local Education Authorities (Administrative Costs)

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list by local eduation authority the number of administrative staff employed and the administrative costs in cash and constant terms, indicating the percentage of total education spending in each of the last five years for which figures are available. [41159]

Mr. Richards: The latest available outturn information is given in the tables. Administration expenditure includes service strategy and regulation and management and administration within the education management and support services sector. Administration expenditure was charged directly to the relevant parts of the education service in 1990–91 for Gwent, 1990–91 and 1991–92 for Gwynedd and 1993–94 for Powys, and is not available separately. Outturn information is not available on a consistent basis for 1989–90.

The number of administrative staff employed by education authorities cannot be identified from the information held centrally. The estimated number of full-time and part-time non-manual staff employed in the education service, other than lecturers and teachers, in June 1994 was 11,050—8,870 full-time equivalents.

This comprises all non-manual support staff identified as employed within the education service and includes administrative, secretarial and clerical staff, youth and community workers, nursery and other non-teaching classroom assistants, library staff serving educational establishments, educational psychologists and careers guidance staff. Figures for individual education authorities are not published by the Local Government Management Board because estimates at this level of disaggregation are not sufficiently reliable.

Teacher Training

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many students taking places in teacher training for (a) primary and early years and (b) secondary in each of the last three years were able to teach through the medium of Welsh; and if he will make a statement about the extent to which all schools will have sufficient staff to meet the Welsh language requirements of the national curriculum. [41156]

Mr. Richards: The number of student teachers enrolled on to Welsh medium primary and secondary initial teacher training courses in the period 1992 to 1994 is shown in the table. Enrolment figures for 1995 are not yet available.

	Primary	Secondary	Total
1992	229	95	324
1993	197	103	300
1994	203	121	324

In addition, students on English medium courses of training, but who are Welsh speaking, may also be available to teach in Welsh medium schools if prospective employers judge that the individual teachers can meet the needs of their school.

As from September 1996, all ITT primary courses are required to have, as an integral part of their courses, training in Welsh as a second language. This should increase substantially the number of teachers capable of teaching Welsh in primary schools.

The enrolment target given to the Higher Education Funding Council for Wales for secondary courses with Welsh as the main subject takes into account the Department's published projections of demand for teachers of Welsh. In 1994, the number of students enrolled on secondary Welsh courses increased, for the fifth consecutive year, and was in line with the target set. A substantial investment is also being made in in-service training for teachers, particularly to support the teaching of Welsh as a second language and to enable schools to meet the requirements of the national curriculum.

Grant-maintained Schools

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of state for Wales what is the average class size in (a) grant-maintained secondary schools and (b) grant-maintained primary schools; and what changes in average class size have taken place in each of the last three years. [41169]

Mr. Richards: Average class sizes in grant-maintained primary and secondary schools are shown as follows:

	Average Class Size[1]
Year	Primary Schools	Secondary Schools
September 1991	—	20.9
September 1992	—	22.5
January 1994[2]	25.9	21.1
January 1995[3]	25.2	20.8

[1] Average class size is calculated as the number of pupils divided by the number of classes. In the case of primary schools, the number of classes used is the number of registered classes whereas for secondary schools it is the number in which the pupils were taught in a specified period on the day of the school census.

[2] From 1993–94 onwards class size information has been collected in January not September.

Mr. Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many pupils at (a) primary and (b) secondary level currently attend grant-maintained schools; and what was the percentage attended at each level listed by local education authority. [41155]

Mr. Richards: The number of pupils in grant-maintained schools in each local authority as at January 1995 is as follows:

Local Education Authority	[1]Number of pupils	[2]Per cent.

Further Education Colleges

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list by local education authority or local authority area the capital expenditure on colleges of further eduction in both cash and constant prices since 1978–79. [41163]

Mr. Richards: The figures for 1978–79 to 1992–93 are not available. Capital expenditure made available by the Further Education Funding Council for Wales since it became responsible for funding the FE sector in April 1993 is shown in the table by local education authority area.

School Catering

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was the total net expenditure on the school catering service in each local education authority in each of the last five years. [41154]

Mr. Richards: The latest available outturn information is given in the following table. Figures for 1989–90 have been reworked to match, as closely as possible, the definition of current expenditure used from 1990–91 onwards.

Current Expenditure on School Catering

Class Sizes

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is the average class size in (a) primary schools and (b) secondary schools; and what were the comparable figures in 1989 to 1994. [41171]

Mr. Richards: The table shows the average class size in Wales for both primary and secondary schools.

Average class size[1] as at:	Primary Schools	Secondary Schools
September 1989	24.8	20.5
September 1990	24.8	21.0
September 1991	25.0	21.5
September 1992	25.0	21.4

Average class size[1] as at:	Primary Schools	Secondary Schools
January 1994[2]	25.6	20.1
January 1995[3]	25.8	21.1

[1] Average class size is calculated as the number of pupils divided by the number of classes. In the case of primary schools, the number of classes used is the number of registered classes, whereas for secondary schools it is the number in which the pupils were taught in a specified period on the day of the school census.

[2] From 1993–94 onwards, class size information has been collected in January not September.

[3] Provisional data.

Source: Schools Census

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was the number of primary school pupils in Wales taught in classes of over 40 pupils in (a) January 1994 and (b) January 1995, per local authority and if he will make a statement. [41631]

Mr. Hague: The annual schools census collects information about class sizes only in respect of the number of classes, not the precise number of pupils in the classes. The information can, however, be used to make broad estimates of the numbers of pupils in classes of a particular size. On the basis of these estimates, there were approximately 500 pupils in ordinary classes of more than 40 pupils in January 1994 and approximately 700 in January 1995. These pupils represented 0.2 per cent. of all pupils in ordinary classes in January 1994 and 0.3 per cent. in January 1995.

No estimates are available for individual local authorities.

New Homes

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was the total number of new homes started by (a) local authorities and new towns and (b) housing associations in each year since 1974. [41150]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: I refer the hon. Member to my reply to the hon. Member for Greenwich (Mr. Raynsford) on 19 October 1995, Official Report, column 340.

Dunlop Semtex Factory

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what action his Department has taken to date to preserve the Brynmawr rubber factory; and if he will make a statement. [40947]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: In 1986, the former Dunlop Semtex factory at Brynmawr was listed grade II* as a building of special architectural or historic interest. The associated boiler house was listed grade II. As listed buildings, listed building consent—from the local planning authority—is required before either structure can be altered or demolished. In 1986, an application to demolish the factory was called-in for determination by the then Secretary of State and consent refused. Subsequently, a working party was convened by the local planning authority under the chairmanship of Dame Margaret Weston to seek uses for the buildings. The Welsh Office has given financial assistance towards the costs of a project to re-use the boiler house as a theatre. The future of the former factory building continues to be considered through the planning system.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he expects to make a statement on local government finance, and if he will include additional information in respect of Welsh Office expenditure. [41049]

Mr. Hague: In accordance with usual practice, I plan to announce my proposals for 1996–97 local government total standard spending and aggregated external finance in a written parliamentary answer on Budget day, 28 November.

I hope to make an oral statement to the House some time in December on public expenditure in Wales. My statement will include expenditure on Welsh Office services; provisional standard spending assessments for local authorities; details of a damping scheme to limit increases in council tax levels in 1996–97; my capping proposals and relevant notional amounts; and local government capital settlements for 1996–97.

Pupil-teacher Ratios

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list by local education authority the number of (a) primary pupils and (b) secondary pupils and the number of teachers with the pupil-teacher ratio in both categories since 1989. [41157]

Mr. Richards: Information on pupils, teachers and pupil teacher ratios in maintained primary and secondary schools in each local education authority area since 1989 is as follows:

Improvement Grants

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many people in each housing authority area are waiting for (a) improvements and (b) disabled improvement grants; and what percentage of the population this is for each area. [41170]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The information requested is not collected centrally.

Pupil Statistics

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list by local education authority in cash and constant prices the spending per child in (a) primary and (b) secondary schools since 1989 and the average cost per pupil in cash and constant prices of an assisted place since 1989. [41161]

Mr. Richards: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my reply in the Library of the House.

Historic Houses

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what support is given to help private owners of homes that have a historic and architectural interest to retain and maintain their homes; and if he will list those private historic homes which have received grants over the past three years, giving the amount of grant in each case and the specific purpose of each grant. [41149]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The Welsh Office may offer grants for the repair of buildings judged to be of outstanding historical or architectural interest or for works that make a significant contribution towards the preservation or enhancement of a conservation area. The Historic Buildings Council for Wales must be consulted before a grant is made and details of grants and their purpose are set out in the council's annual reports, which have been laid before the House.

Homelessness

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many people are estimated to be homeless in each local housing authority area, and what were the comparable figures in 1986 and 1990. [41147]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: Information on people accepted as homeless under part III of the Housing Act 1985 is shown in the table.

Departmental Staff

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list for each civil service grade dealing with education at all levels the number of (a) male and (b) female and (i) full-time and (ii) part-time employees and the comparable figures for 1990 and 1985. [41151]

Mr. Hague: The following tables show the numbers of staff in my Department by grade dealing with education as at 1 November 1995 and 1 October 1990.

The staff figures shown for 1 November 1995 exclude staff working in the office of Her Majesty's chief inspector of schools in Wales, which was established as a separate department in 1992.

Comparable figures for 1985 are not available.

Nursery Classes

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish for each local education authority and for Wales as a whole the number of statutory proposals made for the introduction of new nursery classes into a school during each of the last three years, indicating how many of these were in respect of Welsh medium schools. [41440]

Mr. Richards: The number of statutory proposals made by local authorities or governing bodies of voluntary schools to make a significant change in the character of a school by introducing a nursery class is given as follows. None was in respect of a Welsh medium school.

Number of statutory proposals published to establish nursery classes/units at infant/primary schools by relevant county and all Wales within the last three academic years:

Permanent Exclusions

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) if he will list by local education authority for each of the last five years the number of (a) primary and (b) secondary pupils who have been permanently excluded from school to attend pupil referral units; [41317]

(2) if he will list by local education authority for each of the last five years the number of (a) primary and (b) secondary pupils who are receiving home tuition after being permanently excluded from school and (i) the average, (ii) the most and (iii) the least tuition hours provided [41319]

Mr. Richards: This information is not collected centrally at present. Consideration is, however, being given to the introduction of monitoring arrangements for the collection of such data.

Mr. Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list by local education authority the number of pupils in each of the last five years who have been permanently excluded from (a) LEA-maintained schools and (b) grant-maintained schools; and what percentage of the school population this represents in each case. [41308]

Mr. Richards: I refer the hon. member to my reply of 19 July 1995 to the hon. Member for Darlington, (Mr. Milburn) Official Report, columns 1403–4.

Cheese Production

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish a list showing which varieties of cheese are produced in Wales together with the location of these production centres and his estimate of the total volume of production in tonnes for each of the last three years. [41463]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The following varieties of cheese are produced in Wales:

Caerphilly
Cheddar and other rigid hard pressed cheeses
Brie

Specially blended cheeses such as:

Y Fenni, St Illtyd, Harlech, Tintern Cambrian
Goats cheeses
Sheep cheeses
Mozzarella
Stilton

This list may not be exhaustive.

There are 29 cheese producers in Wales, nine of whom are major producers.

Location of cheese producers

Area	Number
Clwyd	3
Dyfed	19
Glamorgan-Mid	1
Glamorgan-West	1
Gwent	1
Gwynedd	3
Powys	1

Information on the volume of production is not available.

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish the total volume of cheese production in Wales in tonnes and in pounds sterling at constant 1995 prices for each of the last three years, expressing each set of figures as a proportion of the corresponding totals for the United Kingdom. [41462]

Mr. Jones: This information is not available for Wales.

NHS Finance

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what proportion of the NHS budget in Wales was spent on management, administrative and clerical staff in (a) 1989 and (b) the latest year for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement. [41245]

Mr. Richards: The proportion of the NHS budget in Wales spent on management, administrative and clerical staff in 1988–89 and 1994–95 was about 6 per cent. and 7 per cent. respectively.

Nurse Regrading

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement about regrading in the nursing profession. [41246]

Mr. Richards: The management and staff side secretaries of the Nursing and Midwifery Negotiation Council are working together to formulate arrangements to complete all the clinical grading appeals as soon as possible.

Special Educational Needs

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list by local education authority the amount (a) not included and (b) included in schools' budgets to cater for special educational needs; and what were the comparable figures for 1990. [41315]

Mr. Richards: According to the section 42 budget statements submitted earlier this year by local education authorities in Wales, the following amounts have been retained by LEAs in 1995–96 for special needs support services including special units:

	£
Clwyd	3,412,000
Dyfed	8,005,000
Gwent	1,606,000
Gwynedd	1,747,000
Mid Glamorgan	4,377,000
Powys	1,447,000
South Glamorgan	4,520,000
West Glamorgan	991,000

Comparable figures for 1990 are not available because the content of the section 42 statement was changed in 1992.

Details of the amounts delegated to schools through their LEA's local management of schools budget formulae for special educational needs are not collected centrally.

Mr. Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list by local education authority the numbers of (a) primary and (b) secondary school children who have received statements because of their emotional and behavioural difficulties in each of the last five years. [41318]

Mr. Richards: Information for 1994 and 1995 on the number of pupils in primary and secondary schools with statements of special need linked to emotional and behavioural difficulties is shown in the table. The information relates to the major need of the pupil identified on the individual statements of special educational need. Comparable figures for earlier years are not available.

Unitary Authorities

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales which of the unitary councils have formally selected the name of their council; if he will indicate, in each case, the name chosen; if there are separate English and Welsh versions; and if he will make a statement. [41380]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The 22 unitary councils bear the names of their authority area as approved by Parliament in the Local Government (Wales) Act 1994.

All authorities have Welsh and English names as listed in schedule 1 to the Act and are identified as either counties or county boroughs. The authority names were chosen after an extensive consultation exercise held in the spring of 1993. The new section 21 of the Local Government Act 1972—inserted by section 2 of the 1994 Act—requires all councils to have Welsh and English titles. Section 74 of the 1972 Act provides for local authorities to change the name of their area. Until 1 October 1996, a name change requires the consent of the Secretary of State for Wales. His consent is not required after that date. If a name is changed under section 74 and there are generally accepted alternative Welsh and English forms of the name, or alternative names, both names should be used.

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the name of each community or town council within each of the new unitary council areas. [41381]

Mr. Jones: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

Traffic Calming

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list for each county and for Wales as a whole for 1992, 1993 and 1994 (a) the number of applications received to implement traffic-calming measures (b) the number for which permission was granted (c) the total actual expenditure for each category and (d) the total actual expenditure paid for by the Welsh Office, together with this amount expressed as a proportion of (c), and if he will make a statement. [41441]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The information is not available in the form requested.

On the Welsh trunk road network, the Welsh Office is considering approximately 20 locations as possible sites for trials of significant traffic-calming measures mainly on the rural network in Gwynedd, Powys and Dyfed.

To date, eight sites have been authorised with a total cost of approximately £400,000 being fully funded by the Welsh Office as the trunk road highway authority. Design work is proceeding on a further three locations.

The information on the county road network is not held by the Welsh Office. However the Welsh Office has received eight applications for the approval of 20 mph zones and a number of additional applications for the authorisation of non-standard measures in the period 1992–94. Decisions on implementation rest with the local highway authority and funding is provided from unhypothecated resources.

National Blood Service

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement concerning the reorganisation of the National Blood Service as it affects Wales. [41266]

Mr. Richards: The review of the National Blood Service undertaken by the National Blood Authority is a matter for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Health. Organisational changes stemming from the review which could have implications for the delivery of blood services in Wales will be considered by the Welsh Office and the managers of the National Blood Transfusion Service (Wales).

Prostate Cancer

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many cases of prostate cancer have been treated in each of the last 10 years, and if he will make a statement. [41249]

Mr. Richards: Information on the number of cases of prostate cancer treated is not available. The latest information on the number of new cases of prostate cancer registered by the Wales Cancer Registry is given in the following table.

Prosate Cancer (ICD9 185)

Year	Number
1981	569

English and Welsh Education

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what plans he has to improve spoken English and Welsh in schools. [41316]

Mr. Richards: The revised national curriculum, in place from September 1995, sets clear targets for improvements in spoken English and Welsh. Progress against these targets is assessed at ages seven, 11 and 14 and at age 16 through the GCSE. Additionally, discussions will be held shortly with the Curriculum and Assessment Authority for Wales and the Welsh Joint Education Committee on recording grades of spoken English and Welsh on GCSE certificates.

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list by type of project (a) how many schemes have been approved to date under the private finance initiative, (b) what is the value of these schemes and (c) what public sector contribution will be required both initially and as revenue support during the lifetime of the schemes. [41737]

Mr. Hague: Within Welsh Office programmes, no contracts have been signed to date under the private finance initiative for projects costing over £1 million. Information on schemes costing less than £1 million is not collected.

Scott Inquiry

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) how many persons in his Department are on the public payroll or employed as consultants or advisers and work on a part-time or full-time basis in relation to the Scott inquiry; if he will list their names; and how much each is paid; [42044]

(2) how many persons have been authorised to have access to documents held by his Department relating to the Scott inquiry and if he will list such persons. [42045]

Mr. Hague: None.

Environment Charters

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list those district councils which have published environmental charters since 1991; and if he will make a statement. [42081]

Mr. Hague: This information is not held centrally. In 1993 the Government published guidance to assist local authorities in the production of local environmental charters and a number of Welsh councils have now prepared these.

Welsh Language

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish those projects promoting the Welsh language and culture which have received European funding during the last five years, indicating the amount received in each case. [42092]

Mr. Hague: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

Rural Development

Mr. John Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for [illegible]les if in the further consideration he is giving to rural development he will issue guidelines as to how much housing development he will allow in villages, in order that they retain their present character. [40937]

Mr. Gwilym Jones [holding answer 6 November 1995]: At present, planning guidance on housing development in villages is included in planning policy guidance note 7 "The Countryside and The Rural Economy", issued in January 1992. This indicates that new housing will continue to be required in rural areas to sustain the health of the rural economy and the viability of village communities and that in many villages, provision can be made for modest development without damage to the character of the village. It is for the local planning authorities to determine the level of housing allowed in particular villages. These issues have been raised in the responses to the consultation exercises which have taken place both on the proposed revision of planning policy guidance in Wales and on the forthcoming rural White Paper for Wales. My right hon. Friend is now considering the responses received.

Mr. Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what consideration he has given to Welsh Office guidelines on out-of-town store development; and what account he has taken of the rules governing planning applications in England. [40936]

Mr. Jones [holding answer 6 November 1995]: Planning policy guidance on out-of-town retail developments is incorporated in the draft planning policy guidance (Wales) document which my right hon. Friend issued for public consultation in July. This draft provides similar planning policy guidance to that contained in the draft PPG6—"Town Centres and Retail Developments" issued by DoE for Consultation in England.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list by type of product (a) how many schemes have been approved to date under the private finance initiative, (b) what is the value of those schemes and (c) what public sector contribution will be required both initially and as revenue support during the lifetime of the schemes. [41742]

Mr. Howard: Two contracts have been awarded under private finance initiative terms to date:

The police national network

Immigration detention facilities at Gatwick airport

The total capital values of these projects are matters for the contractors, but are estimated to be £50 million and £12 million respectively.

No public sector initial contribution has been required. Individual police forces purchase usage of PNN from public funds, but the value during the lifetime of the scheme will vary with demand. The rental for the Gatwick centre is projected to be £987,000 per annum.

Private Security Industry

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if it is his policy to introduce legislation in the coming Session of Parliament to bring into effect statutory regulation of the private security industry; [41930]

(2) if he will make it his policy to establish a system of regulation in the private security industry to provide for (a) the international nature of operators and (b) the range of inter-related services provided by some operators; [41936]

(3) if he will make it his policy to introduce a statutory system to regulate the private security industry; and if he will set a target date for these measures; [41929]

(4) if he will make it his policy to protect those companies in the private security industry which his Department assesses to be well run under statutory regulation of the industry; [41939]

(5) if he will make it his policy to establish a system of regulation for the private security industry which can respond quickly to changes in the market. [41937]

Mr. Maclean: The case for regulation is being considered in the light of the Home Affairs Select Committee report. We will provide a full response to the Committee as soon as possible.

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what mechanisms are in place in his Department to ensure that any private security company providing services to his Department is and remains a member of the relevant voluntary regulatory body for the industry. [41934]

Mr. Howard: No formal systems are in place, but membership of voluntary regulatory bodies may be taken into account with other factors when assessing companies for the award of security services contracts.

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make it his policy to bring into effect arrangements to allow for proper vetting procedures for (a) employees and (b) employers within the private security industry within statutory provisions to regulate that industry. [41938]

Mr. Maclean: We are aware that there are concerns about the employment within the industry of individuals with criminal records. The whole issue of disclosure of criminal records for employment vetting purposes is currently under review. A White Paper containing the Government's proposals in this area will be issued during the next few months.

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make it his policy to give powers to the police to intervene in the work of the private security industry in circumstances where there is a threat to public safety. [41926]

Mr. Maclean: The police have comprehensive powers to protect the public and to deal with criminal behaviour whenever it occurs.

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will include (a) manned guarding and (b) patrol duties and (c) door supervision within statutory provisions to regulate the private security industry. [41931]

Mr. Maclean: The issue of regulation for the industry is under review. We are aware that concerns lie mainly in the contract manned guarding sector, which includes private patrolling services. Door supervisors raise particular difficulties which are being tackled through local registration schemes—a measure which the Home Affairs Select Committee supported—and guidance on these will shortly be issued.

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will list the private security firms undertaking work for his Department during the present financial year and for each of the last five financial years, listing in each case and for each year the total number of full time equivalent posts paid for by his Department and the numbers in each category of role in each year; [41932]

(2) how many private security firms employed by his Department have ceased to be a member of the relevant voluntary regulatory body during the period in which such services were being provided; and if he will indicate (a) the firms and (b) the regulatory bodies concerned; [41935]

(3) if he will list the organisations providing private security services of any sort to his Department or to any agency responsible to him or to his Department in the current financial year and in any part of each of the past five financial years; indicating against each name the voluntary regulatory body or bodies to which each belongs. [41933]

Mr. Howard: The following organisations have provided private security services to my Department over the past five years. Those marked are currently employed.

Information about the voluntary regulatory bodies to which these organisations belong, and whether the membership of such bodies has been maintained for the duration of the contract period, is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. Information about the number of staff employed on each contract and their role is also not readily available; in some cases the number varies from day to day for operational reasons.

Kent Police Costs

Sir John Stanley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the expenditure on the police in Kent in 1979; and what it is at present and on a cash basis and as a percentage change in real terms since 1979. [41876]

Mr. Maclean: Total expenditure on the Kent county constabulary has increased from £27.05 million in 1978–79 to an estimated £164.93 million for 1995–96. This is a real terms increase of 103 per cent.

Mr. Abdul Onibiyo

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what consideration he gave to the safety of Abdul Onibiyo before ordering his removal to Nigeria; and if he will make a statement. [42003]

Mr. Kirkhope: Mr. Onibiyo's asylum application was fully considered and rejected. This decision was subject to review by the independent appellate authority, which dismissed his appeal. Mr. Onibiyo's further application for leave to appeal to the tribunal was not granted and he was therefore returned to Nigeria under normal immigration procedures.

Employment Vetting

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make it his policy to introduce effective penalties against those who fail to follow proper procedures in respect of (a) vetting of staff, (b) vetting of employers and (c) provision of appropriate training to those so employed. [41925]

Mr. Maclean: The Government have been engaged in a review of all aspects of the employment vetting process and will be publishing a White Paper within the next few months setting out its proposals for new vetting arrangements.

Stage Hypnosis

Mr. Tim Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when the review established to examine the evidence of the possible risk of harm to people taking part in stage hypnosis will report its findings. [42216]

Mr. Kirkhope: The expert panel appointed to consider this matter submitted its report on 11 October 1995. A copy of the report has been placed in the Library. The report concludes that there is no evidence of serious risk to the public from stage hypnosis. The report recommends that it may none the less be desirable to revise the scope of present licensing arrangements and the terms of associated guidelines. A public consultation paper will accordingly be issued shortly to interested parties.

Electronic Monitoring

Mr. Simon Coombs: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what action he has taken in respect of representations from the Magistrates Association about the trials of electronic monitoring currently in progress in Manchester, Reading and Norfolk: and if he will make a statement. [42217]

Mr. Howard: I have agreed to extend the area covered by the trials from the city of Manchester to the whole of Greater Manchester, and from Reading to the whole of Berkshire, and a statutory instrument has been made to give effect to this from Monday 6 November. As a separate issue, I am considering whether to extend the number of courts involved in the trial.

I have also agreed to fund a Magistrates Association seminar on sentencing in relation to electronic monitoring and this will be held on 8 and 9 November.

Former Yugoslavia

Mr. Simon Coombs: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what arrangements are being made for the reception and support of those additional people whom he announced on 6 August the Government had accepted under the temporary protection programme for people from the former Yugoslavia. [42218]

Mr. Kirkhope: On 28 July this year the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees wrote to a number of Governments asking for further 5,000 temporary protection places for citizens of the former Yugoslavia. In view of the pressing humanitarian need, my right hon. and learned Friend the Home Secretary announced on 6 August that the United Kingdom would accept 500 people, principals and dependants, under the programme. This was an addition to the 1,000 vulnerable people and their dependants accepted under the previous programme announced in November 1992. The United Kingdom was one of the first countries in the world to respond to the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees' request.

The UNHCR will continue to be responsible for identifying those who are most in need of temporary protection. The first group arrived on 5 October and arrangements are in hand to bring in a further group shortly. The Home Office is continuing to liaise with UNHCR about the timing of further arrivals.

The Home Office is funding the Refugee Council and other voluntary agencies to support these new arrivals, by running reception centres to accommodate them on arrival, arranging more permanent housing and providing support in the community. Two centres have been opened and two more will open in November. On leaving the reception centres the evacuees will be housed, as were those on the current programme, in "clusters" which enable them to support each other but do not place an undue burden on local services. Programmes are being established to involve volunteers in the work of reception centres and in providing community help such as sports, social and cultural events.

A request was also received from the International Organisation for Migration for the United Kingdom and other countries to accept for treatment sick and wounded people from the former Yugoslavia. The United Kingdom has agreed to accept a further 20 medical evacuees. Three patients have so far arrived under this programme.

In addition to the temporary protection programme, the Home Office continues to examine carefully asylum applications made in the United Kingdom by people from the former Yugoslavia. Up to the end of June more than 12,000 people had applied for asylum. The Government's policy remains that those refused asylum will not be expected to return to a war zone, but will be granted leave to remain exceptionally until it is safe for them to return.

Police Personnel Services

Mr. Booth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what are his proposals for bringing competition to bear on police personnel services. [42219]

Mr. Maclean: It is the Government's intention that compulsory competitive tendering should be introduced to police white collar support services as part of a rolling programme. Detailed consultation proposals for police personnel services were issued on 24 February 1995. The Government have now considered the responses received from the police service, local authority associations and other interested bodies.

The Government have decided that police authorities will be subject to the same CCT regime for personnel services as other authorities defined under the Local Government Act 1988, except for a number of specific exemptions. The exemptions centre on the provision of operational and specialist training, together with the personnel work associated with police complaints and discipline, unsatisfactory performance proceedings against police officers, and discharging probationary constables. The exemptions will protect operational policing, security, and management functions special to the police service.

Prisoner Costs

Mr. Heppell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the total cost per prisoner in each prison within the United Kingdom. [41971]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the temporary Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. John Heppell, dated 7 November 1995:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about the cost per prisoner in each prison within the United Kingdom.

The attached table shows the net average operating cost per prisoner per year for each of the prisons in England and Wales for the year 1993–94, the latest year for which information has been published.

Information on prisons in Scotland is a matter for the Secretary of State for Scotland and the Scottish Prison Service and on prisons in Northern Ireland for the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland and Northern Ireland Prison Service.

Vehicle Crime

Mr. Burden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list for each year since 1990 the numbers of (a) thefts from vehicles and (b) thefts of vehicles, together with the numbers of vehicles involved (i) by make of vehicle and (ii) by year of manufacture. [41862]

Mr. Maclean: The requested information on the number of thefts from and of a motor vehicle is published in table 2.18 of "Criminal Statistics, England and Wales" Cm 3010, a copy of which is in the Library. Information is not collected centrally on the make and year of manufacture of vehicles.

Mr. Robert Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was (a) the number of vehicles stolen, (b) the number of vehicles recovered and (c) the recovery rate for 1994 (i) in the United Kingdom and (ii) by constabulary area. [41458]

Mr. Maclean: The latest published information relates to England and Wales and is contained in table 2.14 of "Criminal Statistics, England and Wales, 1994", Cm 3010. A copy of this publication is in the Library. Information on Scotland and Northern Ireland are matters for the Secretary of State for each Department.

Prisons (Efficiency Savings)

Mr. Heppell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what were the target efficiency savings from the year 1992–93 to 1995–96 in each of Her Majesty's prisons within the United Kingdom; and what ere the actual savings in spending from 1992–93 to 1994–95. [41970]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the temporary Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. John Heppell, dated 7 November 1995:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about the target efficiency savings from the year 1992–93 to 1995–96 in each of Her Majesty's prisons within the United Kingdom; and the actual savings in spending from 1992–93 to 1994–95.

For England and Wales as a whole current expenditure costs per prisoner place reduced in real terms by 2.1 percent between 1992–93 and 1994–95, equivalent to £27 million. Details relating to individual prisons are not readily available.

Access to Criminal Records

Sir Andrew Bowden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects to publish the Government White Paper on new arrangements for access to criminal records. [41695]

Mr. Maclean: I expect to publish the White Paper within the next few months.

Immigration

Mr. Fraser: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if, in the exercise of discretion in allowing a person who has resided in the United Kingdom for more than 10 years with leave to remain indefinitely, it is his practice to take into account residence in (a) Ireland and (b) other parts of the common travel area. [41467]

Mr. Kirkhope: Under the long residence concession, a person who has 10 years or more continuous lawful residence in the United Kingdom, or 14 years continuous residence regardless of legality, may qualify for the grant of indefinite leave to remain in the absence of any strong countervailing factors. For the purposes of the concession, residence in the Republic of Ireland is not considered to be residence in the United Kingdom and is therefore not taken into account. The Channel Islands and the Isle of Man are, for the purposes of the concession, considered to be part of the United Kingdom. Residence in the islands is therefore taken into account.

Police National Computer

Mr. Mike O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what percentage of information available to the police between January 1991 and 22 May 1995 has been placed on to the Phoenix system of the police national computer; which company has the contract for preparing the information to be placed on Phoenix; what percentage of files which have been attempted to be loaded have been rejected by the system in each week of September 1995; what was the expected number of files to be placed on the system for each week in September; what was the actual number which were loaded; and to what extent these results breached the contract. [41360]

Mr. Maclean: The Phoenix database holds specified categories of data. It is not possible to assess what proportion this forms of all information available to the police between January 1991 and 22 May 1995. Since Phoenix went live on 22 May 1995 the police have input information directly for new offenders. Conversion of existing records by keying data from scanned images of the microfiche records held by the national identification service, and the provision of specially written software for quality assurance and problem resolution is undertaken by PCL Group Ltd.

The percentage of records which have been loaded and rejected by the system in each week of September 1995 is shown in the table, together with the actual number of records loaded in each week. The expected average number of records to be placed on the system for each week over the life of the contract is 46,000. Discussions between the Home Office and PCL Group on technical and contractual matters are commercially confidential.

Records exported to Phoenix in September 1995

Week	Total accepted	Percentage rejected
1	7,178	28.23
2	3,087	30.14
3	3,866	27.84
4	765	23.5

Mr. O' Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many complaints have been received from (a) police officers and (b) others about the quality of information on Phoenix. [41362]

Mr. Maclean: We have received no complaints about the quality of the information currently held on Phoenix from the police service or others.

Mr. O' Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when the Phoenix system on the police national computer went live; and when was it nationally announced to go live. [41358]

Mr. Maclean: The Phoenix system went live on 22 May 1995. The police service was informed of this date on 24 March 1995.

Mr. O' Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department on how many days in September 1995 the police national computer office attendant did not receive tapes from the company designated to provide information to go on to Phoenix. [41361]

Mr. Maclean: Tapes were not sent to Hendon data centre on nine of the 21 working days in September.

Mr. O' Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what percentage of (a) pre-1981 information and (b) post-1981 information is on Phoenix for direct access by the police. [41359]

Mr. Maclean: All criminal record data held on the police national computer was transferred to the Phoenix database on 22 May 1995. This comprised 2.8 million records originating before 1981 which consisted of name and criminal record office number and 2.3 million records originating after 1981 which also included details of convictions. Back record conversion is in progress which will add information currently held only on microfiche to selected earlier records. It is not possible to state precisely what percentage of all criminal record information held centrally or locally by the police service this represents.

Police Numbers

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will list the numbers of police posts requested and granted under the annual application procedure in each police authority region in 1995; and if he will make a statement; [41452]

(2) if he will list the numbers of officers requested by each chief constable in each police authority region for the year 1995–96 under the annual application procedure; and if he will make a statement. [41451]

Mr. Maclean: No applications were submitted for 1995–96. The centralised system of determining police numbers by setting an establishment of officers for each police force was abolished from 1 April 1995.

Mr. Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how he expects to allocate the 3,000 new police officers outlined in the Prime Minister's speech of October 1995; where he will locate the officers; what is the timetable; and if he will make a statement. [41453]

Mr. Maclean: Funding will be provided to enable chief constables to recruit an additional 5,000 officers over the next three financial years. The basis on which that funding will be distributed between police authorities is still to be decided. An announcement about police funding will be made after the Budget.

Gaming Act Review

Mr. Illsley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects to publish his review of the Gaming Act 1968; and if it is his intention to introduce legislation in the next Parliamentary Session. [41364]

Mr. Kirkhope: We are currently reviewing the present controls on casinos and bingo clubs as part of the Government's deregulation initiative. Public consultation would be necessary before introducing legislation. We hope to publish a consultation paper soon.

Young Offenders (Yorkshire)

Mr. Illsley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what proposals he has to establish a secure unit for young offenders in (a) Barnsley, (b) South Yorkshire or (c) Yorkshire. [41367]

Mr. Maclean: We have no plans to set up a secure training centre in Barnsley, South Yorkshire or Yorkshire and no plans to establish a new young offender institution in this area.

Prisoners from Wales

Mr. Allan Rogers: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) convicted and (b) remand prisoners from Wales are currently in custody (i) by county (ii) by sex and (iii) in total. [41382]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the temporary Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. Allan Rogers, dated 7 November 1995:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question asking how many a) convicted and b) remanded prisoners from Wales are currently in custody i) by county ii) by sex and iii) in total.

Table 1 gives the number of prisoners born in Wales who were held on 30 September in Prison Service establishments in England and Wales. Information by county of birth is not routinely collected. However, the 1991 National Prison Survey collected this information for the prisoners in that sample. The numbers given in table 2 should be treated with care as they are taken from a medium sized sample study.

Police Standard Spending Assessment

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will take into account the number and type of police stations within a police authority's area when calculating the police standard spending assessment. [41275]

Mr. Maclean: No.

Police (Firearms)

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department on how many occasions in the last year officers in each police force had to draw firearms in the line of duty; and what are the figures for each of the previous three years. [41363]

Mr. Maclean: Numbers of police operations in England and Wales in which firearms were issued to officers are as follows:

[1] This figure is unreliable due to inadvertent double-counting.

Figures for operations in which firearms were issued to officers are not available for the first three months of 1994. The number of operations in which police firearms were fired was five in 1991, 12 in 1992, five in 1993 and six between 1 January 1994 and 31 March 1995.

Domestic Violence

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will provide figures collected by Her Majesty's inspectorate of constabulary on domestic violence incidents recorded by the police in England and Wales in 1994 in terms comparable with the 1993 figures given in the answer on 26 October 1994 to the hon. Member for Liverpool, Mossley Hill (Mr. Alton), Official Report, columns 640–41. [41173]

Mr. Maclean: The information available has been provided by Her Majesty's inspectorate of constabulary and is in the table. It covers incidents of domestic violence recorded by the police in England and Wales in calendar year 1993 and financial year 1994–95. HMIC is currently examining the reasons for the disparities highlighted in the table and the methods used by police forces to record incidents of domestic violence.

Child Sex Offenders

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what records exist within his Department in respect of convicted child sex offenders who have committed such offences outside the United Kingdom; [40945]

(2) in what circumstances his Department seeks to be informed of people convicted of sex offences overseas who have served their prison sentence and have then departed to the United Kingdom. [40944]

Mr. Maclean: The national criminal intelligence service maintains a paedophile index which holds detailed intelligence based information on known active paedophiles, whether they are active in the United Kingdom or abroad. There is no formal requirement for NCIS to be notified of the convictions of people normally resident in the United Kingdom who commit child sex offences abroad, but it receives information from foreign law enforcement agencies and also from non-governmental organisations concerned about overseas paedophile activities.

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to review the arrangements for children giving evidence in court against alleged sex offenders; and if he will make a statement. [41708]

Mr. Maclean [holding answer 6 November 1995]: We keep this area of law under review. We have already done a great deal to make it easier for children to give evidence effectively and to make the experience less of an ordeal. Recent research has indicated that the provisions for children's evidence which we have introduced have been useful, particularly in reducing the level of trauma for the child. We are considering in conjunction with the other agencies involved how further practical improvements can be made.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make it his policy to implement the recommendations of the report, "The Game's Up", on child prostitution. [39697]

Mr. Maclean [holding answer 6 November 1995]: We share the concern of the Children's Society about child prostitution and fully support the multi-agency approach recommended by the report. We will continue to encourage all the agencies concerned to give a high priority to action to prevent the sexual exploitation of children and young people.

Temporary and Part-time Staff

Mr. Ian McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many staff are currently employed in his Department and in related agencies on (a) temporary or casual employment contracts and (b) part-time employment contracts, given as an actual figure and as a proportion of the total work force; and what were the corresponding figures for five years ago. [41121]

Mr. Howard: Breakdowns by Department and executive agency for 1 April 1995 of the number of permanent staff, the number of casual staff—normally those engaged for a period of up to 12 months, but, exceptionally, up to two years—and the number of part-time staff are presented in the civil service staff in post summary table for 1 April 1995, a copy of which is in the Library. Estimates on a comparable basis for 1 April 1990 have also been placed in the Library.

Crime, South Yorkshire

Sir Irvine Patnick: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what are the latest quarterly recorded crime figures for South Yorkshire metropolitan area; what the figures were one year ago; and if he will make a statement. [40978]

Mr. Maclean: There were 37,494 offences recorded in the South Yorkshire police force area in April to June 1995. This represents a fall of 3 per cent. over the April to June 1994 figure of 38,500 offences.

HM Inspector of Prisons

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects to announce the name of the new inspector of prisons. [40946]

Mr. Howard: In due course.

Ministerial Transport

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what has been the cost of ministerial transport in each of the past five years; what allowance has been paid to ministers who use their own vehicles; and what has been the cost in each of the past five years. [40738]

Mr. Howard: The information requested is as follows:

1990–91: £210,096

1991–92: £170,903

1992–93: £207,980

1993–94: £233,916

1994–95: £195,916

Home Office Ministers do not use their own vehicles for official business.

Prison Service Performance Indicators

Ms Janet Anderson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what progress has been made with the seven key performance indicators since the appointment of Derek Lewis as Director General of the Prison Service. [39603]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the temporary Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Ms Janet Anderson, dated 7 November 1995:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about the Prison Service's progress against its Key Performance Indicators (KPIs) since April 1993.

The attached table shows the Service's KPI performance in the first six months of 1995–96 and compares this performance to 1992–93.

Prison service performance against KPIs; April 1993–September 1995

Key performance indicator (KPI)	Performance: April to September 1995	Comparison to 1992–93
KPI1: Escapes	64 escapes in total so far, including 15 which, in previous years, would have been the responsibility of the police, (annualised escape rate 0.19 per cent. of population)	169 in same period 1992–93 (annualised rate of 0.74 per cent. of population):
KPI2: Assaults	2,739 assaults in total so far this year (annualised assault rate 10.7 per cent. of population)	2,244 in same period 1992–93 (annualised rate 9.9 per cent. of population). 10 per cent. reduction on same period 1994–95
KPI3: Overcrowding	no prisoners held 3 to a cell for 1 so far this year	average of 817 in same period 1992–93
KPI4: Sanitation	97 per cent of prisoners have 24 hour access to sanitation	70 per cent in March 1992
KPI5: Purposeful activity	average of 25.5 hours per prisoner per week so far this year	23.7 hours per prisoner per week in 1992–93
KPI6: Time unlocked	41 per cent. of prisoners unlocked 12+ hours at end of August	24 per cent of prisoners unlocked 12+ hours at end March 1993
KPI7: Minimum visits	100 per cent of prisoners exceeding minimum visits so far this year	90 per cent. at end March 1993
KPI8: Cost per prison place	in 1994–95, the average cost of a prison place was £22,037 (at 1992–93 prices	in 1992–93, the average cost of a prison place was £22,588.

[1] Escapes which would, in previous years, have been the responsibility of the police, are shown separately. to ensure a like-for-like comparison, these are excluded in the year-to-year measurement of escapes as a percentage of the prison population.

Deregulation

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the estimated saving to the Exchequer by the repeal of each rule and regulation which has so far been the subject of a reference to the Deregulation Committee from his Department; and in how many cases a compliance cost assessment has been carried out. [41545]

Mr. Howard [holding answer 6 November 1995]: My Department has laid two draft deregulation proposals to date. The measures concerned are not expected to accrue any significant savings to the Exchequer, but certain benefits to business are expected. For example, in the case of the draft Deregulation (Greyhound Racing) Order, the financial savings likely to accrue to the greyhound industry have been estimated at £260,000 per annum.

The explanatory document which is presented to the Committee alongside each draft order is required to contain an assessment of the cost savings to business and any other persons whom the draft order is intended to benefit.

Michael Hunt

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department on what conditions Michael Hunt is released from prison; and if he will make a statement. [41076]

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 2 November 1995]: I will write to the hon. Member.

Secure Training Centres

Ms Armstrong: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will now outline the measures he proposes to take following the court hearing of 26 September to ensure that the secure training centres conform to the Children Act 1989 and the volume 4 guidance and regulations. [41370]

Mr. Maclean [holding answer 6 November 1995]: Secure training centres will be regulated by secure training centre rules as provided for in section 6 of the Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994, and contract terms. Secure training centre rules will be made by statutory instrument shortly before the first centres open, and it is intended that they will take account for the principles on which the Children Act 1989 is based.

Volume 4 of the Children Act 1989 guidance and regulations produced by the Department of Health for children's homes will not apply to secure training centres. However, it is a source document for the development of the rules.

Ms Armstrong: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he proposes to complete the signing of the first two contracts for secure training centres; and if he will lodge the relevant documents in the Library, with particular reference to information which indicates how the contracts comply with the Children Act 1989. [41371]

Mr. Maclean [holding answer 6 November 1995]: The signing of the first two contracts for the provision of secure training centres at Gringley, Nottinghamshire, and at Cookham Wood, Kent will take place as soon as possible after completion of negotiations with tenderers. The final signed contract documents will be placed in the Library. These documents will not contain commercially confidential information such as costs or prices.

Mr. Illsley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what proposals he has to increase the security of the Needlewood centre in Barnsley to accommodate young offenders. [41366]

Mr. Bowis: I have been asked to reply.

Responsibility for the arrangements for the accommodation of young persons in the Needlewood centre, Barnsley, lies with Barnsley metropolitan borough council. The hon. Gentleman may wish to contact the chairman of the social services committee of the council.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Child Support Agency

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many absent parents had their Child Support Agency assessments (a) increased and (b) decreased as a result of the changes introduced in April; and if he will provide a breakdown. [41038]

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the chief executive, Miss Ann Chant. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Miss Ann Chant to Ms Liz Lynne, dated 6 November 1995:

I am replying to your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary for Social Security about Child Support Agency assessments.

It is estimated that no more than 150 absent parents have had their child maintenance assessments increased because of the April changes. We believe that nearly all these relate to cases where parents with care were awarded an allowance for travel to work costs.

So far over 40,000 absent parents had their maintenance decreased because of the April changes. It is not possible to give a precise breakdown of this figure and cases are still being processed. It is estimated that almost 19,000 absent parents benefitted from the new 30% of net income limit on the amount of maintenance an absent parent is required to pay and 16,000 benefitted from the inclusion of all housing costs in exempt income. So far about 2,000 absent parent have benefitted from either the award of allowances of property and capital settlements or from the award of an allowance for travel to works costs. The balance of over 3,000 cases would have been reduced because they were affected by one or more of the other changes (e.g. reduction in the maximum amount paid under the formula; liability plus arrears to be a maximum 33% of absent parents earnings).

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will outline the specific changes that have recently been made to the accuracy measurements of the Child Support Agency to ensure that they align with the definition used by the National Audit Office. [41040]

Mr. Mitchell: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the chief executive, Miss Ann Chant. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Miss Ann Chant to Ms Liz Lynne, dated 6 November 1995:

I am replying to your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security about accuracy measurements of the Child Support Agency.

The Child Support Agency developed a definition to measure the accuracy of maintenance assessments, in liaison with the National Audit Office during 1994/95.

The Agency asked the National Audit Office to examine how this definition worked in practice as part of the audit undertaken early in 1995. The National Audit Office concluded that we should alter our method of measuring the cash value of assessments in the following ways.

We should exclude from the calculation any cases which were closed prior to assessment.

We should attempt to establish whether assessments made before all the evidence was gathered, were correct at the time of the assessment. If so these should be treated as correct, as the value of the assessment was not in error. Although procedures may not have been followed precisely, this will not have had an adverse impact on our clients. Other cases in this category, for instance where the missing evidence would result in a changed assessment, should be treated as errors.

Both these changes were implemented from April 1995.

I hope this is helpful.

Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans he has to establish an independent complaints adjudicator for the Child Support Agency. [41887]

Mr. Mitchell: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has asked the chief executive to look at current complaints procedures and see how they might be improved. One of the options could be the establishment of a Child Support Agency complaints adjudicator. It is too soon to say whether such an arrangement could operate in the context of CSA business.

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many of the cases assessed by the Child Support Agency would have had no opportunity to arrange a child maintenance agreement (a) because they are new separations or (b) for some other reasons. [41339]

Mr. Mitchell: All cases assessed by the Child Support Agency have had the opportunity to make a child maintenance agreement whether or not they are newly separated. However, if an agreement is made which is insufficient to remove the need for the parent with care to claim either income support, family credit or disability working allowance, the parent with care may be required to authorise the Secretary of State to take action to recover child support maintenance.

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many of the absent parents who had previously paid no child maintenance at the time they were taken on by the Child Support Agency were on benefits. [41341]

Mr. Mitchell: The agency does not collect this information as there is no business need for it.

Mrs. Roe: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will report on the review of the arrangements for compensating clients who have a genuine grievance against the Child Support Agency. [42192]

Mr. Mitchell: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Morley and Leeds, South (Mr. Gunnell) on 17 July 1995, Official Report, column 1300.

Since its inception, the agency has had the facility to consider special payments to compensate clients where a clear, unambiguous error or delay has been caused by the agency.

Although each case is considered on its individual merits, the agency has now established clear criteria for deciding whether, and if so, how much, to pay in compensation.

The details of this scheme, which is comparable to those operated by other DSS agencies, have now been developed from experience of cases arising in this new and unique business. This will ensure that each case receives fair and consistent consideration.

Claimants, Doncaster and Mexborough

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the number of current benefit claimants at each of his Department's benefit offices covering the Doncaster and Mexborough area; and what the figure was 12 months ago. [39483]

Mr. Roger Evans: The administration of social security benefits is a matter for Mr. Peter Mathison, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member with such information as is available.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. Martin Redmond, dated 6 November 1995:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking what is the number of current benefit claimants at each of his Department's benefit offices covering the Doncaster Mexborough area; and what was the comparable figure 12 months ago.

The latest information for locally administered benefits (ie those benefits calculated and paid at the Benefit Agency's local offices) is provided in the enclosed Appendix A and includes the comparable figure for 12 months ago. You should note that more than one benefit can be payable to a customer at the same time.

Information is usually collated at District level. On this occasion, however, I am able to give you details about incapacity benefits for Doncaster East, Doncaster West and Mexborough offices and details about Income Support for Doncaster East and Doncaster West. The Rother and Dearne District includes Mexborough, Goldthorpe, Rotherham South and Rotherham North offices. Information about Income Support is only available at District Level for Rother and Dearne.

I hope you find this reply helpful.

The latest available statistics for locally administered incapacity benefits are as follows:

Appendix A—incapacity benefits

	Doncaster West BO	Doncaster East BO	Mexborough BO
September 1994
Invalidity Benefit	7,457	6,018	4,025
Sickness Benefit	1,909	1,354	308
Maternity Allowance	24	24	11
Severe Disablement Allowance	1,095	788	577
September 1995
Incapacity Benefit[1]	8,323	7,000	4,239
Maternity Allowance	41	27	11
Severe Disablement Allowance	1,231	839	597

[1] From 13 April 1995 Invalidity Benefit and Sickness Benefit were replaced by Incapacity Benefit.

Income Support

	August 1994	August 1995
Doncaster East BO	13,039	13,054
Doncaster West BO	17,397	17,664
Rother & Dearne District Office	38,431	38,686

Note:
More than one benefit can be payable to a customer at the same time.

Grants

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security for what grant-giving funds his Department is responsible requiring a private sector contribution where the use of national lottery funds is not allowed to count towards that private sector portion. [38608]

Mr. Burt: We have no schemes which seek exclusively non-public sector funding in partnership.

Consultancy Costs

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the cost of the employment of Ernst and Young as consultants in two pilot areas commencing on 2 October in connection with the identification of benefit claimant fraud; and which two areas have been selected for this. [39973]

Mr. Heald: The estimated cost of the employment of Ernst and Young to work in partnership with fraud managers in the Benefits Agency for a period of 12 months is £525,000. The two areas taking part are West Mercia and Manchester. This partnership will examine work processes, information technology and management of fraud investigations. What we learn from this partnership will be applied across the whole of the Benefits Agency, helping further to increase the productivity of its fraud investigation services and to target resources more effectively.

Disability Living Allowance

Mr. Clelland: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security approximately how many blind or partially sighted people have appealed to the disability appeal tribunal against the disability living allowance unit's decision not to award them the middle rate of the DLA care component since 14 October 1994. [40892]

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: The information is available only at disproportionate cost.

Temporary and Part-time Staff

Mr. Ian McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many staff are currently employed in his Department and in related agencies on (a) temporary or casual employment contracts and (b) part-time employment contracts, given as an actual figure and a proportion of the total workforce; and what were the corresponding figures for five years ago. [41122]

Mr. Burt: Breakdowns by Department and executive agency for 1 April 1995 of the number of permanent staff, the number of casual staff—normally those engaged for a period of up to 12 months, but, exceptionally, up to two years—and of the number of part-time staff are presented in the civil service staff in post summary table for 1 April 1995, a copy of which is in the Library. Estimates on a comparable basis for 1 April 1990 have also been placed in the Library.

National Insurance Contributions

Mr. Robert McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what would be the extra return to the Exchequer resulting from removing the upper limit on employees' national insurance contributions; and what proportion of employers' national insurance contributions that would represent if their gross national insurance contributions were reduced by that amount overall. [40907]

Mr. Heald: The additional return and proportion of employers' national insurance contributions would be about £3.1 billion and 12.8 per cent. respectively in Great Britain for 1995–96 in a full year, if the upper limit on employees' NICs was removed, but an upper earnings limit at current levels remained in place for the purposes of calculating contracted-out rebates. Information for Northern Ireland is a matter for my right hon. Friend and the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland.

Source: Government Actuary's Department.

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) what is his policy towards the introduction of exemptions from national insurance contributions for employers of seafarers; [41596]

(2) if he will list the European countries which (a) exempt and (b) do not exempt seafarers employers from national insurance contributions. [41597]

Mr. Heald: Exemptions for this or any other group of employers would be contrary to the principle of universal contribution liability for universal benefit coverage on which the national insurance scheme is based. The information in the table shows that most European countries do not exempt seafarers' employers from contribution liability. We are, however, aware of the concerns expressed by the shipping industry about their national insurance position and these are being considered.

European Countries which (a) exempt and (b) do not exempt seafarers employers from national insurance contributions

(a) Exempt
  Denmark[1]
  Portugal[1]
(b) Not exempt
  Belgium
  Luxembourg
  Finland[2]
  France
  Germany
  Greece
  Ireland
  Italy
  Netherlands
  Norway
  Spain
  Switzerland
  United Kingdom

Notes:

1. Exemption applies only in respect of crews of ships on the second register.

2. Contributions are refunded to employers in respect of crews of ships on the second register.

Asylum Seekers

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what was the total weekly cost of benefits paid to those awaiting determination of their application for asylum in the United Kingdom as at 12 October. [41497]

Mr. Roger Evans: The latest figures available are in the November 1994 quarterly statistical inquiry. This indicates there were about 42,000 asylum seekers in receipt of income support. The estimated cost of income support, housing benefit and council tax benefit payments to those people was about £5 million per week. The information is not available for other benefits.

Parliamentary Ombudsman

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security in how many cases his Department or its agencies has been criticised by the parliamentary ombudsman since 1979. [41253]

Mr. Burt: The information is in the table.

Year	Complaints upheld	Complaints not upheld but department criticised	Total
1979	42	15	57
1980	50	9	59
1981	53	16	69

Widow's Benefit

Sir Anthony Durant: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what was the number of widows in receipt of widow's benefit excluding those receiving widow's bereavement allowance as at March. [41612]

Mr. Heald: The information is not available in the format requested. The number of widows in receipt of widow's benefit at March 1995 is 290,000[1]. The number of widows in receipt of widow's bereavement allowance in the 1995–96 tax year is 70,000[2].

War Pensions

Mr. Patrick Thompson: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list those councils in Norfolk which allow war pensioners and war widows to keep all their war pension even if they are receiving benefits and those which do not. [40114]

Mr. Heald: The following local authorities in Norfolk have advised me that they operate local schemes which disregard war pensions in full when calculating entitlement to housing benefit and council tax benefit: North Norfolk, King's Lynn and West Norfolk, Breckland and Broadland.

Great Yarmouth, South Norfolk and Norwich city have advised that they do not operate such a local scheme.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how much, on average, war pensions have changed in real value since the new guidelines for determining housing and council tax benefit were introduced. [41605]

Mr. Heald: Since the introduction of the revised housing benefit scheme in April 1988, the basic weekly rate of war disablement pension payable in respect of a 100 per cent. disabled private soldier, and equivalent, has increased from £67.20 to £101.10. If increased only in line with the retail prices index, the estimated current rate would be £95.30 per week.

The basic weekly rate of war widow's pension payable to the widow of a private soldier, and equivalent, has increased from £67.20 to £76.35. Increases in line with RPI alone would have produced an estimated current rate of £75.85 a week.

In addition, since April 1990, most war widows have received a fully upratable supplementary pension—originally £40 a week, currently £49.77—which is totally disregarded for housing benefit and council tax benefit purposes.

Incapacity Benefit

Mr. Heppell: To ask the Secretary of Social Security what extra provision is and will be provided for the existing claimants who will lose benefit due to the change to incapacity benefit from invalidity benefit over the first three years in which incapacity benefit is paid. [41962]

Mr. Burt: Unemployment benefit and income-related benefits such as income support are available to those who are no longer incapable of work and who are seeking and available for employment. In addition, significant extra resources have been made available to the Employment Service over the first three years to fund back-to-work help for those leaving incapacity benefit.

Disability Discrimination

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if children with learning difficulties who are currently attending special schools for children with learning difficulties will be automatically protected under the disability discrimination legislation. [41340]

Mr. Burt: The definition of disability in the Disability Discrimination Bill, subject to the provisions of schedule 1, provides that a person has a disability for the purposes of the Act if he has or has had a physical or mental impairment which has or had a substantial and long-term adverse effect on his ability to carry out normal day-to-day activities. Children who meet this definition will be protected by the provisions of the Disability Discrimination Bill and by complementary provisions of the Education Act 1993.

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many children with learning difficulties are estimated to be covered under the Disability Discrimination Bill. [41343]

Mr. Burt: Centrally maintained statistics are not kept in a form that will provide this information. The definition of disability in the Disability Discrimination Bill does not correlate directly with information held by the Department of Health about children who have learning disabilities, or to definitions used by the Department for Education and Employment to collect information about children with learning difficulties.

Evidence from epidemiological studies suggest that there are about 30,000 children under the age of 16 in England with severe or profound learning disabilities, but others with a mild or moderate degree of learning disability.

Under the Education Act 1993, a child has special educational needs if he or she has a significantly greater difficulty in learning than the majority of children of that age. This difficulty in learning may be entirely unrelated to any disability. It has been estimated that up to one in five children may have special educational needs at some time in his or her school career.

In view of the existing comprehensive protection under the 1993 Act and code of practice on the identification and assessment of special educational needs, the House has agreed that education should be excluded from the scope of part III of the Bill. Subject to that, the other relevant provisions of the Disability Discrimination Bill will apply equally to children with special educational needs as to all other people.

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what financial assistance will be available for children with learning difficulties to enable legal action to be taken on their behalf under the provisions of the Disability Discrimination Bill. [41345]

Mr. Burt: The majority of actions taken under the new right of access will be via the small claims procedure, where the proceedings are informal, legal representation is not required and no costs can be awarded. Where actions are taken in open court of proceed to higher courts, legal aid will be available to children with learning disabilities provided they meet the normal means and merits tests. Children are assessed for legal aid according to their own means and not their parents. A child is therefore more likely to be financial eligible than an adult.

Child Support

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make a statement in respect of the operational policy of the Department of Social Security liable relatives unit and the child support unit when arranging child maintenance from liable parents. [41779]

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: There was no liable relative unit as such: liable relative work formed part of the operation of DSS local offices. The aim of liable relative sections in those offices was to ensure that people liable to maintain their spouse, child or sponsored immigrant did so to the best of their ability, where possible removing the need for income support. The child support unit had similar aims but relating to child maintenance only.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security by how much the combined value of child benefit and child dependency increases would have to be raised in April 1996, in cash and percentage terms to restore them to their November 1979 values relative to prices and average earnings for (a) war widows and (b) other widows. [41640]

Mr. Mitchell: The information for values relative to prices is set out in the table.

The same information for values relative to average earnings is not yet available.

War widows	Cash rise	Percentage rise
Eldest qualifying child	£10.60	43.4
Other children	£11.35	48
Other widows
Eldest qualifying child	£7.50	37
Other children	£8.25	42.3

Notes:

1. A higher rate of child benefit for the eldest child was introduced in April 1991. Prior to that date all children were paid at the same rate.
2. Figures have been rounded to the nearest 5p.
3. The retail prices index, all items, as published by the Central Statistical Office was used in the calculation.

Lone Parents

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how much his Department has spent on research into (a) lone-parent families and (b) absent parents, in each year since 1989. [41800]

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: The Department's research programme is announced each year. Details and overall costs of all projects are set out in the Department's research yearbook, published annually by HMSO, copies of which are available in the Library. Previous editions cover projects from 1989 onwards; the yearbook for 1994–95 will contain details of projects currently under way and will be published in December.

Income Support (Young People)

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what would be the cost in a full year of reintroducing income support payments for 16 to 17-year-olds. [41867]

Mr. Roger Evans: Information is not available to calculate the cost of reintroducing income support payments for 16 to 17-year-olds within normal estimating margins. The behaviourial factors are difficult to estimate; however, illustrative costs, based on a range of assumptions, are in the table:

Cost of restoring income support to 16 and 17-year-olds

£ million

Assumptions	Benefits costs 1996–97
10 per cent. move from Education to Income Support	340
20 per cent. move from Education to Income Support	550
40 per cent. move from Education to Income Support	975

Notes:

1. Costs are derived from the movement of young people from education to income support plus the cost of those who claim income support while waiting for a youth training placement plus the costs of those who claim income support who are not in education, training, nor employment.
2. In addition to assumptions regarding the movement from education to income support, it is assumed that: all 16 and 17-year-olds move on to income support from day one of the policy change; 15 per cent. of the families of 16 and 17-year-olds in education are on income support; this assumption is the basis for an estimate of reduction in cost as a result of families losing entitlement to dependency and other family benefits; half of the 16 and 17-year-olds who claim income support move away from home and live independently and so receive housing benefit; and half of the 16 and 17-year-olds are the only children in their families.
3. The numbers of education and youth training are based on projections for 1996–97.
4. The numbers not in education, training or employment are based on information from the spring labour force survey and DSS benefit statistics.
5. Costs have been rounded to nearest £5 million but are not accurate to that degree.

Medical Reports

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans he has to apply (a) the commitment given by his predecessor on 8 July 1988, Official Report, column 1355, during the passage of the Access to Medical Reports Act and (b) the provisions of the Access to Health Records Act 1990 to medical reports prepared by the Benefits Agency for its own use or that of an equivalent authority overseas; and if they will be available to, and may be corrected by, the subject of the report. [41997]

Mr. Roger Evans: It has for many years been the practice of the Department of Social Security to supply copies of medical reports in connection with claims to benefit at the request of the claimant, subject to any information which could be detrimental to the claimant's well-being removed.

In the event of an appeal against a decision made by the independent adjudicating authorities, copies of all reports are supplied to the claimant, again subject to withholding information as described above. If the claimant disagrees with the information in the reports, an appeal to the relevant tribunal is the means by which they can express their disagreement.

Nursing Home Residents

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what has been the annual cost of higher level income support payments to nursing home residents with preserved rights in each of the last three years (a) nationally, (b) regionally and (c) by area. [41943]

Mr. Roger Evans: Information is not available in the format requested. Such information as is available is set out in the table:

Annual cost of income support limits for nursing home residents

£ million

	1992	1993	1994
England	1,071	1,184	916
Scotland	127	132	104
Wales	106	100	78
Great Britain	1,300	1,416	1,097

Notes:

1. Figures are rounded to the million. Due to rounding some of the totals may not tally.
2. Estimated annual expenditure is calculated by multiplying the number of cases in May of each year by the average weekly income support at the enquiry date and then multiplying by 52.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Apprenticeships

10. Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans the Government have to increase apprenticeships for school leavers. [40047]

Mr. Paice: The Government welcome employers' enthusiastic response to the modern apprenticeships initiative. We hope that approaching 30,000 trainees will be recruited in the current year.

Grant-maintained Schools

11. Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many pupils are currently educated in grant-maintained schools. [40049]

Mr. Robin Squire: More than 680,000 pupils are currently being educated in grant-maintained schools in England.

Primary School Class Sizes

12. Mr. Chris Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many primary school pupils in England are taught in classes of 36 or more; and if she will make a statement. [40051]

16. Mr. Connarty: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many primary school children are currently being taught in class sizes of more than 35. [40055]

Mr. Robin Squire: In January 1995 there were 108,000 primary school pupils taught in classes of 36 or more in England.

Economic Regeneration, Workington

13. Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what contribution her Department is able to make to local economic regeneration in Workington. [40052]

Mr. Forth: This Department makes a major contribution to the development of Workington through the activities of the Employment Service and Cumbria training and enterprise council.

Grammar Schools, Kent

14. Mr. Dunn: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many grammar schools there are in Kent. [40053]

Mrs Gillan: Thirty-nine.

School Repairs

15. Mr. Heppell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans she has to deal with the backlog of repairs to schools. [40054]

Mrs. Gillan: It is up to individual local education authorities and governors to make their own plans for any repairs to schools.

Standard Spending Assessments

17. Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will make it her policy to ensure that education standard spending assessments are adjusted fully to take into account increases in pay and prices and demographic changes. [40056]

Mr. Robin Squire: When determining the level of resourcing for education, the Government take into account the pressures on the education service, including projected trends in pupil numbers and inflation. But we also look at the scope which local authorities have for making efficiency savings and consider what the country can afford given the continuing need for restraint in public expenditure.

Primary School Standards

18. Sir Malcolm Thornton: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what action she is taking to raise standards in primary schools. [40117]

Mrs. Gillan: The national curriculum and its assessment, national tests, regular inspections, improvements to teacher training and our improving schools programme all act to raise standards in primary schools. The chief inspector of schools has confirmed that our reforms are improving the quality of education.

Higher Education Review

19. Sir Fergus Montgomery: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what progress has been made on her review of higher education. [40118]

Mr. Forth: We consulted earlier in the year on the purpose of higher education and its future shape and size. Around 100 responses were received: copies have been placed in the Library. As my right hon. Friend announced at the beginning of July, a further consultative paper will be issued around the turn of the year.

Work Experience

20. Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans she has to give pupils at secondary schools the opportunity for direct experience in the workplace. [40119]

Mr. Paice: We have asked training and enterprise councils and their local partners to encourage work experience for pupils and have made funds available specifically to support it for all in their last year of compulsory schooling. The need for further action is being kept under review.

School Discipline

21. Mr. Robathan: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what measures the Government have taken to promote good discipline in school classrooms. [40120]

Mr. Robin Squire: My right hon. Friend announced on 27 September a range of initiatives to help schools combat the problem of disruptive pupils. These initiatives build on guidance on pupil behaviour and discipline sent to all schools, as part of the "Pupils with Problems" pack in May last year. We have also asked the consultative group on school standards to advise the Department on what else can be done to help schools maintain and improve discipline.

Access to Work

22. Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what are her plans for the access to work programme once Royal Assent has been given to the Disability Discrimination Bill. [40121]

Mrs. Gillan : The access to work programme is being reviewed following its first year of operation, as we announced would happen when it was launched. We intend to continue providing help under the programme, and the review is therefore taking account of the experience of its operation so far, and of the implications of the Disability Discrimination Bill. We intend to announce details of any changes to the programme before the Act comes into force.

Remploy

23. Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will make a statement about the future of Remploy. [40122]

Mrs Gillan: I am not aware of any developments that would warrant a statement.

Unemployment (Teenagers)

24. Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what factors she has assessed as having the greatest impact on the levels of unemployment among (a) teenage women and (b) teenage men. [40123]

Mr. Forth: The acquisition of relevant qualifications and work-related skills, and the creation of a competitive, efficient and flexible labour market, are particularly important in keeping unemployment low among both teenage men and teenage women.

Whithinfields School

25. Mrs. Mahon: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will visit Halifax to inspect working conditions at Withinfields school, Southowram. [40124]

Mr. Robin Squire: My right hon. Friend has no plans to visit Withinfields school. I visited the school on 21 April 1995.

Further Education Colleges (Funding)

Mr. Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what recent representations she has received regarding the funding of further education colleges. [40125]

Mr. Paice: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has received some 20 representations regarding the funding of further education colleges since colleges' 1995–96 allocations were announced by the Further Education Funding Council at the end of May.

Class Sizes

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what is her policy on the optimum class size in primary and secondary schools. [40126]

Mr. Robin Squire: It is for the governors and headteachers of individual schools to decide how to organise their classes.

Jobfinder's Grant

Mr. Rooney: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many unemployed people in each region and in Great Britain as a whole have applied for a jobfinder's grant and (a) received a grant and (b) not received a grant since April; what is the means-tested savings limit in each region; 'what procedures are in place for appeals for people whose grant applications are turned down; if she will provide a breakdown of recipients of the jobfinder's grant by their gross weekly wage level; and if she will make a statement. [41918]

Mr. Forth: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Employment Service Agency under its chief executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from M. E. G. Fogden to Mr. Terry Rooney, dated 7 November 1995:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question about the Jobfinder's Grant.

The attached table (Annex 1) shows the number of Jobfinder's Grants applied for and awarded nationally and by region since the programme was introduced on 18 April (22 May in Yorkshire and Humberside region, where a more flexible variant to the programme is being piloted) up to 6 October, which is the latest date for which figures are available.

The table also shows the gross weekly wage level of grant recipients. To be eligible for the grant, applicants must take jobs paying £150 gross per week or less (£250 per week gross or less in Yorkshire and Humberside region).

The savings limit for the grant is £2,800 in all regions except Yorkshire and Humberside and the South West, where it is £2,600. (In these two regions, pilot variants to the programme allow grants of up to £400, which is double the £200 flat rate grant in the rest of the country.)

The grant has been made available to help jobseekers who have been unemployed for a very long time to overcome the barrier, perceived or otherwise, of the transitional phase from losing benefits to receiving their first wage. It is not a benefit and there is no statutory right to the grant. Therefore, there is no formal appeals procedure for applications which are turned down.

I hope this is helpful.

Annex 1: Jobfinder's grant

	Grants applied for (up to 6 October)	Grants awarded (up to 6 October)
National total	9,128	5,478
London and South East	1,289	745
South West	751	426
Wales	563	369
West Midlands	1,328	814
North West	1,252	826
Scotland	782	377
Northern	718	446

Gross weekly wage level	Number of grant recipients
£200+ gross per week	30
£150–£199 gross per week	320
£100–£149 gross per week	3,691
Less than £100 gross per week	794
Wage not known	18

Note:

This information is from a database held by the company contracted to evaluate the Jobfinder's Grant, on the basis of 4,853 grant recipients inputted to the database up to the end of October.

Nursery Voucher Scheme

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) what is the cash value of the contract awarded to Capita Managed Services Ltd. to administer the nursery voucher scheme in the financial years (a) 1995–96 and (b) 1996–97; [42034]

(2) what estimate was given by Capita Managed Services Ltd. for the cost of administering the nursery voucher scheme. [42035]

Mr. Robin Squire: The financial details of the Government's contract with Capita Managed Services Ltd. to administer the nursery voucher scheme are commercially confidential, but the contract was awarded by competitive tender from a short list of 10 companies.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what budget has been allocated for the nursery voucher information campaign in (a) Norfolk, (b) Kensington and Chelsea, (c) Wandsworth and (d) Westminster. [42033]

Mr. Robin Squire: The total budget allocated to inform parents and providers about the first phase of the nursery voucher scheme in voluntary local education authorities, is £750,000. It is not possible to break this down for individual voluntary areas.

European Funds

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what element of European social funds is restricted solely to objective 4; and when the Government intend to draw up an objective 4 programme. [41981]

Mr. Forth: The Government have not allocated any European social fund money to objective 4 and have no plans to draw up a programme for that objective.

Training and Employment, Sheffield

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will encourage the development of a local training and employment plan in the Darnall area of Sheffield following the publication of the Darnall review. [40037]

Mr. Paice: I know that the local training and enterprise council is taking a keen interest in the Darnall review. I fully support sensible initiatives to revitalise disadvantaged areas.

Nursery Education

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what action she is taking to safeguard existing nursery education places for three and four-year-olds under her proposed national voucher scheme for all four-year-olds; and if she will make a statement. [40298]

Mr. Robin Squire: The parents of every four-year-old will receive a nursery education voucher which they can redeem for three terms of good quality nursery education in the state, private or voluntary sector. In exercising the choice which the voucher scheme provides, parents are likely to continue to make use of places which meet the needs of them and their children.

The voucher scheme should not affect existing places for three-year-olds. The proposed funding mechanism will allow local authorities to continue to spend on such places as they judge appropriate.

Student Loans Company

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what discussions she has had with the Student Loans Company regarding levels of debt experienced by students. [40050]

Mr. Forth: I have had a number of discussions with senior executives at the Student Loans Company. It is entirely right that graduates should contribute towards the cost of their higher education. The loans scheme is fair and generous.

Skills Training Agency Sites

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment which of the former sites occupied by the Skills Training Agency have been disposed of and which remain for disposal; who have been appointed to advise on the disposal, what fees they have been paid to date; and what is the amount so far received from the sale of the sites. [40939]

Mr. Robin Squire: The following former Skills Training Agency sites have been disposed of:

Leicester; East Lancashire; Chelmsford; Leeds; Wakefield; Edinburgh; Southampton; Slough; Reading; Twickenham; Portsmouth; St. Helens; Cardiff and Deptford.

The sites remaining for disposal are as follows:

Letchworth; Swindon; Northampton; Ipswich and Skyline House.

Chartered surveyors King and Co—now Kings Sturge and Co—were appointed to advise on the disposal. Its fees are determined, under their contract with the Department, using different percentage figures according to the method of disposal—that is, sale of freehold or assignment of leasehold interest.

The net amount so far received from the sale of sites is £14,731,372.

Disability Discrimination

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if children with learning difficulties who have received a statement of special educational needs under the provisions of the 1981 and 1993 Education Acts will be automatically protected by the Disability Discrimination Bill. [41342]

Mr. Forth: Under the Education Act 1993 local education authorities have a statutory duty to arrange the provision specified in a statement of special educational needs. In view of the existing comprehensive protection under that Act, the House has agreed that education should be excluded from the scope of part III of the Bill. Subject to that, the other relevant provisions of the disability Discrimination Bill will apply equally to children with statements as to all other people.

Access to Work Scheme

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) if she will list the employers contacted by her Department during the last three months in respect of providing voluntary funding for adaptations for disabled employees under the access to work scheme; [41794]

(2) how many employers have been contacted by letter by her Department during the last three months concerning the voluntary payment of adaptations for disabled employees undertaken under the access to work scheme; and if she will indicate the number of employers who (a) offered to pay voluntary contribution in full, (b) offered to part-fund costs and (c) expressed objections to paying any costs in part or in full. [41793]

Mr. Forth: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Employment Service Agency under its chief executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from M. E. G. Fogden to Ms Liz Lynne, dated 7 November 1995:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your questions about employers contacted by letter concerning voluntary contributions towards adaptations for disabled people undertaken under the Access to Work programme.

The information you ask for is not kept centrally, but it is our policy to ask every employer to consider whether they are able to make a contribution.

The Government launched the Access to Work programme in June 1994 without a requirement by employers to contribute towards the cost of help. However, it has always been our practice to seek voluntary contributions from employers. There are also some cases where the help we provide for individual disabled people clearly gives additional benefits to the employer's business. In those cases, we negotiate what it is reasonable for the taxpayer to pay and we expect the employer to pay the rest.

The number of applications made under Access to Work and the scale and the costs of help are increasing. We therefore decided that all Placing, Assessment and Counselling Teams (PACTs) should adopt a common approach to employers to ensure that the approach was made at the appropriate level within companies. Local PACT managers are responsible for administering the Access to Work programme, including asking employers for contributions toward the cost of help.

I am sorry I cannot be more helpful.

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many payments of (a) £100 or less, (b) between £100 and £250, (c) between £250 and £500, (d) between £500 and £1,000 (e) between £1,000 and £5,000 and (f) over £5,000 have been made under the access to work scheme since June 1994. [41798]

Mr. Forth: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Employment Service Agency under its chief executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from M. E. G. Fogden to Ms Liz Lynne, dated 7 November 1995:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question about the distribution of payments made under the Access to Work programme since June 1994.

We do not regularly gather details of the distribution of the cost of help given under Access to Work and do not therefore have the information you ask for. However, we have recently received sample information of spend during the first 3 months of the current year, and I can say that the cost of providing special aids and equipment, which amounts to around 70% of the total cost of the programme, fell within the following bands:

Cost of providing special aids and equipment	Percentage of people assisted
Under £100	19
£101 to £259	14
£251 to £500	22
£501 to £1,000	20
£1,001 to £5,000	23
Over £5,000	4

In 1994/95, the first year of Access to Work, 10,349 people wer helped and so far this year about 6,000 new people have benefited.

I hope this is helpful.

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment when she expects to receive recommendations from her departmental review team regarding the future of the access to work scheme. [41797]

Mr. Forth: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Employment Service Agency under its chief executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from M. E. G. Fogden to Ms Liz Lynne, dated 7 November 1995:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question about the timing of the departmental review of Access to Work.

I expect the review to be completed and a report and recommendations presented to the Secretary of State by the end of December 1995.

I hope this is helpful.

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will indicate how many applications for assistance under the access to work scheme have exceeded the £21,000 ceiling since June 1994; and what proportion that represents of the total number of applications made for assistance under the scheme. [41791]

Mr. Forth: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Employment Service Agency under its chief executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from M. E. G. Fogden to Ms Liz Lynne, dated 7 November 1995:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question about the number of applications for help under the Access to Work programme since June 1994 that have exceeded £21,000. The information you have requested is not available.

While there is a ceiling of £21,000 on Access to Work help for an individual over a 5 year period, Regional Directors have authority to exceed this limit in exceptional circumstances. We do not maintain records on applications for help which exceed this ceiling but information gathered in June this year showed that we had agreed packages of help of over £21,000 for 70 people. This figure is included in the total of 10,023 people helped by Access to Work, in the period from 6 June 1994 to 31 May 1995.

I hope this is helpful.

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) if she will list the research commissioned by her Department during the last six months as part of her Department's review into the access to work scheme; [41795]

(2) if she will make it her policy to publish the results of all research undertaken or commissioned by her Department as part of the departmental review into access to work. [41796]

Mr. Forth: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Employment Service Agency under its chief executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from M. E. G. Fogden to Ms Liz Lynne, dated 7 November 1995:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question about the research undertaken and commissioned for the review of Access to Work.

We have commissioned Social and Community Planning Research to undertake research to feed into the Access to Work review. As an independent organisation they will be free to publish their research in due course. We expect that a report of the review will be published after it has been presented to the Secretary of State.

I hope this is helpful.

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will list by type of project (a) how many schemes have been approved to date under the private finance initiative, (b) what is the value of those schemes and (c) what public sector contribution will be required both initially and as revenue support during the lifetime of the schemes. [41738]

Mr. Forth: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has only a limited role in approving projects under the private finance initiative in the education sectors. Individual institutions, and local education authorities in the case of county and voluntary controlled schools, are free to enter into contracts with private sector bodies without recourse to her. She expects them to make full use of the freedoms and opportunities the private finance initiative offers to achieve best value for money.

The Employment Service has procured a personnel administration system under the private finance initiative. The value of the project, over seven years, is £3.2 million. This represents the contract costs over the life of the project which will be met by the Employment Service.

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans she has to consult with (a) disability organisations, (b) the Employers Forum on Disability, (c) the Confederation of British Industry, (d) the Institute of Directors and (e) the Federation of Small Businesses prior to the publication of recommendations concerning the departmental review of the access to work scheme. [41792]

Mr. Forth: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Employment Service Agency under its chief executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from M. E. G. Fogden to Ms Liz Lynne, dated 7 November 1995:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question about plans to consult certain organisations about the review of Access to Work.

The review is a Departmental study of the operation of Access to Work after its first year. We have no plans to request formal contributions from external bodies prior to publication although some organisations and individuals have given their views.

I hope this is helpful.

Pupil Costs

Sir John Stanley: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what is the percentage change in real terms in expenditure per child in (a) primary an (b) secondary education between 1979 and the current year. [41875]

Mr. Robin Squire: I will write my right hon. Friend as soon as possible and place a copy of the reply in the Library.

Employment Schemes

Mr. Rooney: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) how many unemployed people have been referred to restart courses by Employment Service counsellors since April in each region and in Great Britain as a whole; how many of them were unemployed for over two years; how many attended and completed the course; what were the outcomes of the participants; how many had their income support reduced for not attending or failing to complete their attendance at the restart course; if she will break down this information by (a) ethnicity, (b) disability and (c) gender; and if she will make a statement; [41912]

(2) how many unemployed people have been referred to jobplan workshops by Employment Service counsellors since April in each region and in Great Britain as a whole; how many of them were unemployed for over one year; how many attended and completed the workshop; what were the outcomes of the participants; how many had their income support reduced for not attending or failing to complete their attendance at the jobplan workshop; if she will break down this information by (a) ethnicity, (b) disability and (c) gender; and if she will make a statement; [41913]

(3) how many unemployed people have been referred to workwise and worklink by Employment Service counsellors since April in each region and in Great Britain as a whole; how many were referred direct from restart interviews and how many were referred from the 1-2-1 programme; how many attended and completed the courses; what were the outcomes of the participants; how many had their income support reduced for not attending or failing to complete their attendance at the workwise and worklink course; if she will break down this information by (a) ethnicity (b) disability and (c) gender; and if she will make a statement; [41914]

(4) how many people have joined (a) jobclubs, (b) jobsearch seminars and (c) job review workshops in each region and in Great Britain as a whole since April; how many have left each programme during this period; what were the outcomes of the participants; if she will break down this information by (i) ethnicity, (ii) disability and (iii) gender; and if she will make a statement. [41916]

Mr. Forth: Responsibility for the subject of the questions has been delegated to the Employment Service Agency under its chief executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from M. E. G. Fogden to Mr. Terry Rooney, dated 7 November 1995:

As the Employment Service is an Executive Agency, the Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your questions to him about Workwise/Worklink and 1-2-1, Jobclubs, job search seminars, Job Review Workshops, Restart Courses and Jobplan Workshops. This is something which falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as Chief Executive of the Agency.

The attached tables show for each region and nationally programme performance information and participant characteristics from April 1995 to September 1995 as follows:

Table 1 — Workwise and Worklink
Table 2 — Jobclubs
Table 3 — Job search seminars
Table 4 — Job Review Workshops
Table 5 — Restart Courses
Table 6 — Jobplan Workshops

Information is not routinely collected in respect of outcomes by individual characteristics of leavers. However information on characteristics is collected when participants join a programme, except for job search seminars, and this data has been included in the tables.

For job search seminars information about the numbers joining the programme is provided, but details about those not completing the programme are not routinely collected. In addition details about client characteristics and numbers entering non-job outcomes is not routinely collected.

Job Review Workshops are targeted mainly at unemployed professional and executive people and help individuals identify transferable skills so that they are able to consider a wider range of occupations. Information about outcomes which participants may enter during or following the two day workshop is not routinely collected.

Information about the number of attenders who have had their Income Support reduced for failing to attend or complete a programme is not routinely collected. The Benefits Agency (BA) provide the Employment Service with the number of decisions made on referrals to them for benefit sanctions. These decisions include both the numbers having their income support reduced and the numbers referred to them who do not have any sanction imposed. I have therefore provided information about the number of BA decisions made in respect of Workwise, Restart Courses and Jobplan Workshops.

The number of people helped by attending the programmes mentioned have been 318,737 so far this year. Over 116,000 people have taken up positive outcomes as a result of their attendance, including over 64,000 unemployed people who have entered jobs.

I hope this is helpful.

Mr. Rooney: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) if she will set out, according to the results from the youth training leavers survey, the number and level of NVQs or credits towards NVQs or other qualifications gained by people leaving YT in the period April 1994 to December 1994, for each region and for England and Wales as a whole, for all leavers and by ethnic group, disability and gender showing male, female and all; and if she will make a statement; [41922]

(2) if she will set out, according to the results from the training for work leavers survey, the number and level of NVQs or credits towards NVQs or other qualifications gained by people leaving training for work in the period April 1994 to December 1994, for each region and for England and Wales as a whole, for all leavers and by ethnic group, disability and gender showing male, female and all; and if she will make a statement; [41924]

(3) what are the results of the youth training leavers survey for the period April 1994 to December 1994, for each TEC area in England and Wales and for each region and for England and Wales as a whole, broken down to show the number and proportion of leavers who were (a) in full-time work with the same employer, (b) in full-time work with a different employer, (c) in part-time work, (d) on a full-time course at a college or training centre, (e) on another YT scheme, (f) doing something else, (g) unemployed and (h) had obtained a vocational qualification; what was (i) the number of questionnaires issued, (ii) the usable percentage response rate and (iii) the percentage of respondents who were early leavers and the reasons stated for leaving training early; and if she will make a statement. [41996]

Mr. Paice: As the information requested is contained in a large number of tables, I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my reply in the Library.

Travel-to-Interview Scheme

Mr. Rooney: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will place in the Library a copy of the report of the evaluation of the travel-to-interview scheme pilot in the north-west region; and if she will make a statement. [41917]

Mr. Forth: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Employment Service Agency under its chief executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from M. E. G. Fogden to Mr. Terry Rooney, dated 7 November 1995:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question about the evaluation report of the Travel to Interview Scheme.

The findings of the evaluation are still under discussion. I anticipate the report will be available in the next few weeks and a copy will be placed in the Library.

I hope this is helpful.

Consultancy Costs

Mr. Rooney: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what was the full cost to her Department of the evaluation carried out by Coopers and Lybrand of the training for work starts and outcomes funding pilots; and if she will make a statement. [41919]

Mr. Forth: The report provides a thorough analysis of the funding pilots. The findings were considered carefully when the funding arrangements for training for work in 1995–96 were decided. The covering note which accompanies the consultants' report explains the background to those decisions.

Long-Term Unemployment

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what new measures she will bring forth to counter long-term unemployment. [40138]

Mr. Forth: We have a very wide range of programmes which are bringing long-term unemployment down. Their success is demonstrated by the fact that it has been falling now for six quarters in a row.

Schools Budget

Mr. Streeter: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will show for each local education authority for the year 1995–96 the element of the potential schools budget which is not delegated to schools through the aggregated schools budget, expressed (a) as a percentage of the potential schools budget and (b) as a sum of money per pupil in schools covered by the LMS scheme. [25037]

Mr. Robin Squire [pursuant to his reply, 18 October 1995, c. 299-300]: The following revised and updated table, setting out the percentage of the potential schools budget not delegated by each LEA for 1995–96, should be substituted for the table contained in the answer given to the hon. member on 24 May 1995, Official Report, columns 614-15.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Government Centre for Information Systems

Mr. Patrick Thompson: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will outline his proposals for the future of the CCTA, the Government Centre for Information Systems. [42350]

Mr. Freeman: The CCTA offers an advisory service to Departments on the procurement of information technology and information systems, on which Government spend over £2 billion a year. But it does not have a sufficiently central place to influence and co-ordinate the strategy of Government in relation to information systems so as to ensure that the latest technology is harnessed to improve co-ordination across Government and the effective delivery of services to the public.

I therefore propose to establish a small central unit in the Office of Public Service designed to secure a strategic approach to IT across Government. It will be known as the central IT unit, and will work in close co-operation with the DTI, which is the sponsoring Department for the industry. It is expected to comprise no more than eight to 10 people drawn from the private and public sector. The unit will report through me to the Deputy Prime Minister.

At the same time, the existing CCTA will concentrate on providing intelligent customer support on IT issues to Departments and agencies which so wish to be advised and on a full repayment basis. We shall be consulting customers and staff about the appropriate status and role for CCTA and considering whether there is scope for more private sector involvement in its ownership and management. I intend to make a more detailed announcement in due course.

Executive Agencies

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister, pursuant to his answer of 30 October, Official Report, columns 7-10, on next steps agencies what estimates he has made of the proportion of civil servants working in next steps agencies in (a) April 1996 and (b) April 1997.

The Deputy Prime Minister: The next steps programme is on course towards the Government's expectation that it will cover about three quarters of the civil service as a whole. Projecting proportionate coverage is uncertain because decisions on whether to establish candidate functions as agencies and the exact timing of the launch have yet to be made and will depend on a variety of considerations—and because the overall numbers of civil servants continue to fall.

However, taking our current indications of potential launches in April 1996 and adding their current staffing into the proportions I gave for 1 April 1995 in my report of 30 October would produce the following figures:

1995 including possible April 1996 launches

	Per cent.
Indicative projection of Home civil servants working on Next Steps lines on 1 April	70
Indicative projection of civil servants in Northern Ireland working on Next Steps lines on 1 April	72

Thereafter and on the same basis, I estimate that these proportions would rise to 75 per cent. and 78 per cent. respectively on the assumption that all functions currently under consideration were launched as agencies, mostly by April 1997.

Civil Service

Ms Jowell: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will update table 8 of the Cabinet Office publication "10 Years Progress Report" on promotion rates in the administration group to include 1994–95 and extend the table to take in the higher executive grades of the service to grade 2 for the years 1991–92, 1992–93, 1993–94 and 1994–95 for men and women. [41749]

Mr. Horam: An up-dated table will appear in the data summary on equal opportunities in the civil service in 1994–5. This will be produced early in the new year, and copies will be laid in both Libraries of the House. There are no plans, however, to extend the table to the highest grades, as the numbers involved are too small to show meaningful trends.

Ms Jowell: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will update table 1 of the Cabinet Office publication "10 Years Progress Report" on women's grade levels in the non-industrial home civil service at 1 April to include 1994–95. [41750]

Mr. Horam: An updated table will appear in the data summary on equal opportunities in the civil service in 1994–95. This will be produced early in the new year, and copies will be laid in both Libraries of the House. I also refer the hon. Member to figure 18 and table 4a in "Civil Service Statistics 1995"—placed in the House of Commons Library on 31 October 1995—about the proportion of women at key grade levels and occupational groups.

Outside Consultants

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will list the projects undertaken since 1992 by the Office of Public Service where outside consultants have been employed; and if he will list the contract fee and consultant in each case. [39831]

Mr. Freeman: The details of individual consultancy contracts let by the Office of Public Service and its agencies where outside consultants may have been used in some part of the contract are not held centrally in the form requested. The full information can be provided only at disproportionate cost.

However, the costs of external consultancy contracts let by the Office of Public Service and its agencies in the last two completed financial years are as follows:

Year	£
1993–94	5,697,880
1994–95	5,832,044

The greater part of these totals was consultancy to CCTA, the Government Centre for Information Systems, mainly for the benefit of other Departments.

Charter Mark

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will list those organisations which have unsuccessfully applied for a charter mark. [42169]

Mr. Horam: Applications for a charter mark are confidential. We publicise only the names of the winners and those who are highly commended. These we will announce at the charter mark awards ceremony on 4 December.

We do not disclose the names of unsuccessful applicants. It is for those organisations to decide for themselves whether to publicise the fact that they have applied.

Scott Inquiry

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many persons in the Deputy Prime Minister's office and in the Office of Public Service are on the public payroll or employed as consultants or advisers and work on a part-time or full-time basis in relation to the Scott inquiry; if he will list their names; and how much each is paid. [42055]

The Deputy Prime Minister: There are no staff within my private office and the Office of Public Service employed on matters relating to the Scott inquiry on a full-time or part-time basis, although some will inevitably be involved from time to time. There are also no external consultants or advisers employed on such matters by my private office or the Office of Public Service. It is not the practice to name staff or external advisers.

Parliamentary Candidates

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what rules govern parliamentary candidatures for senior Crown servants. [40900]

Mr. Freeman: Section 1 of the House of Commons Disqualification Act 1975 disqualifies for membership of the House of Commons any person employed in the civil service of the Crown, or any member of the regular armed forces of the Crown. Civil servants, except those in industrial and non-office grades, must resign from the civil service on their formal adoption as a parliamentary candidate. Industrial and non-office grade civil servants must resign before they give their consent to nomination in accordance with the parliamentary election rules.

Deregulation Task Force

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many staff have been employed on the deregulation task force; and what is the total estimated cost of its operations since it was established. [42031]

Mr. Freeman: The deregulation task force is assisted by three staff in the deregulation unit of the Cabinet Office, who provide administrative support. Its members are not paid, but they receive travel and subsistence expenses.

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many committees and sub-committees of the deregulation task force have been established since its inception; and how many reports have been produced by them. [42030]

Mr. Freeman: There have been 10 ad hoc working groups since the inception of the deregulation task force, of which some have included non-task force members. The task force has produced two reports: "The Charities and Voluntary Organisations Report", which was published in July; and the task force's first annual report, which was published in September. Copies of both reports have been placed in the Library of the House.

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many of the 870 regulations identified by the deregulation task force were introduced since 1979. [42029]

Mr. Freeman: The 870 recommendations were made by Lord Sainsbury's eight deregulation task forces and published in 1994. The recommendations did not just identify regulations but covered other areas, such as enforcement. It would involve disproportionate cost to identify how many of the regulations on which the task force made recommendations were introduced since 1979. The text of the recommendations and the commentary on the progress made in implementing them has been placed in the Library of the House.

Specialist Advisers

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many (a) specialist advisers and (b) press or public relations officers are employed by his office; and what is the total annual salary bill for (a) and (b) above. [42310]

The Deputy Prime Minister: I shall write to the hon. Member as soon as possible and place a copy of the letter in the Libraries of the House.

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how many (a) specialist advisers and (b) press or public relations officers are employed by his Department; and what is the total annual salary bill for (a) and (b) above. [42311]

Mr. Freeman: I shall write to the hon. Member as soon as possible and place a copy of the letter in the Libraries of the House.

Information and Planning Systems

Mr. Allen: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister (1) what consideration the Prime Minister's advisor on efficiency has given to the management of information and planning systems report of May 1995; [42335]

(2) if he will list all Government Departments and agencies, specifying the precise steps being taken to ensure that their information and planning systems are up to the level of the best. [42334]

Mr. Horam: I shall write to the hon. Member as soon as possible and place a copy of the letter in the Libraries of the House.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Ministerial Transport

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what has been the cost of ministerial transport in each of the past five years; what allowance has been paid to ministers who use their own vehicles; and what has been the cost in each of the past five years. [40740]

Mr. Hanley: Transport for FCO Ministers is provided by the Government car service. Payments over the last five years were as follows:

Year	£
1990–91	220,688
1991–92	238,343
1992–93	330,096
1993–94	342,732
1994–95	342,732

The figures above represent the cost of the agreed options and do not include VAT. The Government car service says that it has not been possible to calculate the outside option charges or the despatch charges in the time given.

Ministers who use their own vehicles on official business may claim a private car allowance, now 37p per mile.

Details of claims are as follows:

Year	£
1990–91	No information available
1991–92	No claims received
1992–93	364
1993–94	2,762
1994–95	No claims received

Specialist Advisers

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many (a) specialist advisers and (b) press or public relations officers are employed by his Department; and what is the total annual salary bill for (a) and (b) above. [42315]

Mr. Hanley: I shall write to the hon. Gentleman shortly.

Fraud

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what was the total number of cases of all forms of fraud committed by employees of his (a) Department, (b) agencies and (c) non-departmental public bodies for each year from 1991–92 to 1994–95; and for each of these years, what was the total monetary sum (1) misappropriated in such frauds and (2) subsequently recovered. [39128]

Mr. Hanley [holding answer 24 October 1995]: The answer is as follows:

1991–1992:

Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO): One fraud valued at £19,206. No recoveries.

Overseas Development Administration (ODA): Two frauds valued at £2,400. No recoveries.

Commonwealth Development Corporation (CDC): One fraud valued at £17,100. No recoveries.

British Council: Eight frauds valued at £26,881. £2,957 recovered.

1992–93

FCO: Nil

ODA: Nil

British Council: Eight frauds valued at £585,377. £30,100 recovered.

CDC: One fraud valued at £58,000. No recoveries.

1993–94

FCO: Four frauds valued at £13,479. £4,000 recovered.

ODA: Nil

British Council: Nine frauds valued at £168,718. £99,994 recovered.

1994–95

FCO: Five frauds valued at £79,283. £6,338 recovered to date.

ODA: One fraud valued at £5,000. No recoveries.

National Resources Institute (NRI): One fraud valued at £4,200. No recoveries.

British Council: Seven frauds valued at £68,246. £2,052 recovered.

Vigorous action for recovery and restitution continues.

European Parliament (Subsidised Visits)

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how much the European Parliament spent on subsidising the visit of parties of visitors organised by Members of the European Parliament to it for each financial year since 1983–84; how many visits were subsidised; how many visitors were covered by these payments; and what representations the British Government has made to the European Union about these arrangements. [39407]

Mr. David Davis [holding answer 26 October 1995]: The European Parliament annual budget for inward visits was 7.82 million ecu from 1992 to 1994, and 7.88 million ecu in 1995. The EP advises that it subsidised 3,218 and 3,463 group visits to EP sites in 1992 and 1993 respectively, and 1,223 visits to the EP in Brussels in 1994—figures for 1994 are not available for visits to EP sites in Luxembourg and Strasbourg. Corresponding figures for 1983 to 1991, and for the total number of visitors subsidised, are not available. The EP sets its own administrative budget, within the limits agreed by the Council. The European Court of Auditors examines the expenditure of the EP and publishes its findings in its annual report.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Work-related Death and Illness

Mr. Robert McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what published statistics underlie the Northern Ireland Information Service press statement of 29 September on work-related deaths and illness. [40888]

Mr. Moss: I shall write to the hon. Gentleman as soon as possible.

Deregulation

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) what regulations his Department proposes to repeal by the end of 1995; if he proposes to conduct a compliance cost assessment on each regulation repealed; and what is the estimated cost of undertaking a compliance cost assessment to assess the advantages or disadvantages of such a repeal; [41551]

(2) if he will list the rules and regulations he proposes to repeal or amend by means of a reference to the Deregulation Committee before the end of 1995; and if he will make a statement. [41525]

(3) what is the estimated saving to the Exchequer by the repeal of each rule and regulation which has been the subject of a reference to the Deregulation Committee from his Department; and on how many cases a compliance cost assessment has been carried out. [41526]

Mr. Ancram: I shall write to my hon. Friend as soon as possible.

Export Marketing Research Scheme

Ms Mowlam: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many businesses in Northern Ireland will now be eligible for help from the export marketing research scheme. [41910]

Sir John Wheeler: Over 4,300 manufacturing businesses in Northern Ireland are eligible for assistance under the export marketing research scheme. Information on the number of tradeable services companies which would be eligible for the scheme is not available.

Making It Back Home Scheme

Ms Mowlam: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many applications are currently under consideration for the making it back home scheme. [41897]

Sir John Wheeler: To date, the Local Enterprise Development Unit has received approximately 1,000 expressions of interest and is currently processing 40 live applications.

It is estimated that approximately 10 per cent, of the expressions of interest and approximately 66 per cent. of applications currently being processed will become firm projects.

New Jobs

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many new jobs, created in each of the past 10 years with the assistance of LEDU, were located in (a) the borough of Ards, (b) the borough the Castlereagh and (c) district of Down. [41907]

Mr. Ancram: My noble Friend will write to the right hon.Gentleman as possible.

Newcastle Orange Hall (Attack)

Mr. Robert McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what was the reason for the delay in the issue of the Chief Constable's certificate, relating to the attack on Newcastle Orange hall. [42086]

Sir John Wheeler: The Chief Constable's certificate in respect of the attack on Newcastle Orange hall was issued as soon as the Chief Constable was able to form the opinion that the act was committed maliciously by a person acting on behalf of, or in connection with, an unlawful association.

Terrorist Campaigns (Unsolved Deaths)

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many deaths, arising from the terrorist campaigns by Republicans and Loyalists, remain unsolved; and if he will make a statement. [42139]

Sir John Wheeler: I will write to the right hon. Gentleman as soon as possible.

Specialist Advisers

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many (a) specialist advisers and (b) press or public relations officers are employed by his Department; and what is the total annual salary bill for (a) and (b) above. [42321]

Sir John Wheeler: I will write to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Specialist Advisers

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many (a) specialist advisers and (b) press or public relations officers are employed by his Department; and what is the total annual salary bill for (a) and (b) above. [42319]

Mr. John M. Taylor: Unfortunately, in the time available, it is not possible to answer this question. I shall write to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Divorce

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will list the timetable for divorce (a) proposed for the United Kingdom and (b) currently applicable in other EU countries. [42159]

Mr. John M. Taylor: The White Paper proposal is that the minimum waiting period before a divorce decree can be applied for should be 12 months, provided arrangements for children, and financial and property matters have been decided.

The information requested about other European Union member states is currently being updated. I shall write to the hon. Member.

Kidderminster Court

Mr. Anthony Coombs: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department when the Government expect a start date for work to start on the new Kidderminster court complex. [42330]

Mr. John M. Taylor: Unfortunately, in the time available, it is not possible to answer this question. I shall write to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Law Commission

Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will list the current payments which are being made to each member of the Law Commission; if he will list for each member additional sums which they receive from the public purse for other services, including service as judges; and what additional sums are derived from private work. [42106]

Mr. John M. Taylor: The salaries paid to each of the members of the Law Commission are as set out in the answer to parliamentary question No. 42111. Other public services undertaken by members are set out in the table, together with the fees payable, were these to be claimed. Sums derived from private work, if any, are a matter for the individuals concerned.

Name	Service undertaken	Fee per sitting day
Mr. Justice Brooke	High Court judge	Salaried as High Court Judge—no additional remuneration as Chairman of the Law Commission
Charles Harpum	Rent Assessment Panel	£191
Diana Faber	Assistant Recorder (in training)	£135 (per specified training day)
Stephen Silber QC	Deputy High Court judge (Queen's Bench Division) Recorder	£2,250 per week or part week/or £450 per day £346
Andrew Burrows	None

In all cases, travel and subsistence expenses are also payable.

DEFENCE

Ammunition Dumps, Solway Firth

Mr. Martlew: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is his estimate of the quantity of bombs or ammunition remaining in the Solway firth as a result of dumping following the end of the second world war; and if he will make a statement. [42161]

Mr. Soames: No munition dumping operations were conducted in the Solway firth.

Swan Hunter Shipyard

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) if a figure has been agreed with the receivers of Swan Hunter shipyard in respect of claims made against his Department for additional costs arising from work on the auxiliary order replenishment vessel—AOR2; [42255]

(2) if a claim has been made by his Department against the receivers of Swan Hunter shipyard in respect of additional costs arising from the contract for three type 23 frigates; when potential liability first arose; and what additional costs arose directly from the company being in receivership. [42256]

Mr. Arbuthnot: I will write to the hon. Member.

Joint Rapid Deployment Force

Mr. Trotter: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence where the headquarters of the joint rapid deployment force is to be located; what decisions have been taken on the level of commands; what will be the size of the headquarters; to what extent the staff will be dual-hatted; and if he will make a statement. [42259]

Mr. Soames: Headquarters and command arrangements for the JRDF have not been finalised. The JRDF implementation team will make recommendations on where the JRDF headquarters should be sited, the detailed command and control requirements of the force, the levels of command and the size of the headquarters.

Mr. Legg: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has to contribute to a NATO-led implementation force in the event of an overall peace agreement in the former Yugoslavia.

Mr. Soames: Contingency planning for a NATO-led implementation force in the event of an overall peace agreement in the former Yugoslavia is continuing in parallel with the current peace talks in Dayton, Ohio. We would expect to make a substantial contribution.

As part of this contribution, we envisage a need to make use of a number of members of the Territorial Army and the Regular Army reserve. On present estimates, the number would not exceed 350 personnel, who would, as far as possible, be sought on a voluntary basis. My Department will shortly be setting in hand the necessary arrangements.

Radioactive Waste, Carlisle

Mr. Martlew: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much radioactive material remains in the Carlisle area as a result of dumping following the British nuclear tests in the Pacific; and if he will make a statement. [42162]

Mr. Soames: No such material was ever sent to the Carlisle area.

Specialist Advisers

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many (a) specialist advisers and (b) press or public relations officers are employed by his Department; and what is the total annual salary bill for (a) and (b) above. [42312]

Mr. Arbuthnot: I will write to the hon. Member.

PRIME MINISTER

Specialist Advisers

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Prime Minister how many (a) specialist advisers and (b) press or public relations officers are employed by his Department; and what is the total annual salary bill for (a) and (b). [42309]

The Prime Minister: I will write to the hon. Member in due course.

Scott Inquiry

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Prime Minister how many persons in (a) the Prime Minister's Office or (b) the Cabinet Office are on the public payroll or employed as consultants or advisers and work on a part-time or full-time basis in relation to the Scott inquiry; if he will list their names; and how much each is paid. [42068]

The Deputy Prime Minister [holding answer 8 November 1995]: I have been asked to reply.

The number of officials within the Cabinet Office wholly employed on matters relating to the Scott inquiry is five and their direct annual salary cost is approximately £140,000. There are no officials employed on Scott inquiry-related matters within my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister's Office on a full-time or part-time basis, although some will inevitably be involved from time to time. There are also no external consultants or advisers employed on such matters by the Prime Minister's Office or the Cabinet Office. It is not the practice to name staff or external advisers.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Prime Minister how many persons have been authorised to have access to documents held by the Cabinet Office or the Prime Minister's Office relating to the Scott Inquiry; and if he will list such persons. [42069]

The Deputy Prime Minister [holding answer 7 November 1995]: I have been asked to reply.

Ministers, former Ministers, officials and other advisers have access to material relating to the inquiry as necessary in order to carry out their responsibilities.

Committee on Standards in Public Life

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list where appropriate for each Nolan commissioner his or her most recent public salary. [41165]

The Deputy Prime Minister: I have been asked to reply.

Lord Nolan receives his judicial salary. My right hon. Friend the Member for Bridgwater (Mr. King) and the right hon. Member for Bethnal Green and Stepney (Mr. Shore) receive their parliamentary salaries. They receive no emoluments as members of the Committee on Standards in Public Life. Of the remaining seven members of the committee, six were paid an honorarium of £1,000 per month from November 1994 to April 1995 and subsequently an attendance fee of £155 per day and one, who was then in receipt of a salary from public funds, was not. All seven are now entitled to the daily attendance fee.

Five of the seven have previously held full-time positions paid at public expense. Two members of the committee hold other current part-time appointments paid from public funds. Sir Martin Jacomb is chairman of the British Council, for which he receives an honorarium of £10,250 per year, and Diana Warwick is a lay member of the Employment Appeals Tribunal, for which she is paid an attendance fee of £186 per day.

Sir Gerald Warner

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Prime Minister what are the specific functions in the Cabinet Office of Sir Gerald Warner; and what are the terms on which he is remunerated. [42067]

The Deputy Prime Minister [holding answer 7 November 1995]: I have been asked to reply.

Sir Gerald Warner is employed in the Cabinet Office at grade 2 level as the intelligence co-ordinator. As such, he advises the Secretary of the Cabinet on the co-ordination of the intelligence machinery and its resources and programmes. He chairs various formal and informal groups charged with intelligence management. He has particular responsibility for reviewing the United Kingdom's intelligence requirements and for advising on the allocation of the resources to enable the intelligence agencies to meet them. He is remunerated within the civil service grade 2 range.

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Betts: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list by type of project (a) how many schemes have been approved to date under the private finance initiative, (b) what is the value of those schemes and (c) what public sector contribution will be required both initially and as revenue support during the lifetime of the schemes. [41745]

The Deputy Prime Minister [holding answer 7 November 1995]: I have been asked to reply.

I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to him today by my hon. Friend the Financial Secretary to the Treasury.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Public Appointments

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the public appointments for which his Department is responsible in the county of south Yorkshire, indicating in each case the duration of the appointment, the date when a new appointment is due, and the salary. [39427]

Mr. Douglas Hogg: I was responsible for the appointment of a chairman and three members to the Yorkshire Regional Flood Defence Committee of the National Rivers Authority, a committee which covers a large proportion of south Yorkshire. These appointments are for three years and new ministerial appointments will be made on 1 July 1997. Other members are appointed by local authorities and the National Rivers Authority. Existing appointments will continue when the Environment Agency subsumes the National Rivers Authority next year. The chairman receives a salary of £9,715 per annum. Members receive expenses.

European Court Decisions

Sir Teddy Taylor: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, pursuant to the answer of the Attorney-General of 30 October, Official Report, column 12, relating to decisions of the European Court of Justice and the European Court of Human Rights, if he will list those European Court decisions relating to responsibilities of his Department over the past two years; and what was the estimated annual cost to public funds of each decision. [41218]

Mr. Boswell: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to him on Tuesday 7 November 1995, Official Report, column 697, by my hon. Friend, the Member for Boothferry (Mr. Davis).

Meetings

Dr. Strang: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) on how many occasions in the last year his senior civil servants, at or above the grade of assistant secretary in the Ministry, have met representatives of (a) the Consumers Association, (b) the National Consumer Council, (c) the Consumers in Europe Group, (d) the Vegetarian Society, (e) the Food Commission, (f) the National Food Alliance, (g) the National Federation of Women's Institutes, (h) the British Medical Association, (i) the National Federation for Coronary Heart Disease Prevention, (j) the British Heart Foundation, (k) the National Farmers Union, (l) the Food and Drink Federation, (m) the National Dairy Council, (n) the Retail Consortium, (o) the Confederation of British Industry, (p) the Institute of Grocery Distribution, (q) the Country Landowners Association, (r) the Advertising Association, (s) the Chemical Industry Association, (t) the British Agrochemical Association, (u) the Infant and Dietetic Foods Association, (v) the British Cake, Chocolate, Biscuit and Confectionary Alliance and (w) the British Soft Drinks Association; [42136]

(2) on how many occasions in the last year ministerial colleagues in the Ministry have met with representatives of (a) the Consumers Association, (b) the National Consumer Council, (c) the Consumers in Europe Group, (d) the Vegetarian Society, (e) the Food Commission, (f) the National Food Alliance, (g) the National Federation of Women's Institutes, (h) the British Medical Association, (i) the National Federation for Coronary Heart Disease Prevention, (j) the British Heart Foundation, (k) the National Farmers Union, (l) the Food and Drink Federation, (m) the National Dairy Council, (n) the Retail Consortium, (o) the Confederation of British Industry, (p) the Institute of Grocery Distribution, (q) the Country Landowners Association, (r) the Advertising Association, (s) the Chemical Industry Association, (t) the British Agrochemical Association, (u) the Infant and Dietetic Foods Association, (v) the British Cake, Chocolate, Biscuit and Confectionary Alliance and (w) the British Soft Drinks Association; [42122]

(3) on how many occasions in the last year he or his predecessor have met with representatives of (a) the Consumers Association, (b) the National Consumer Council, (c) Consumers in Europe Group, (d) the Vegetarian Society, (e) the Food Commission, (f) the National Food Alliance, (g) the National Federation of Women's Institutes, (h) the British Medical Association, (i) the National Federation for Coronary Heart Disease Prevention, (j) the British Heart Foundation, (k) the National Farmers Union, (l) the Food and Drink Federation, (m) the National Dairy Council, (n) the Retail Consortium, (o) the Confederation of British Industry, (p) the Institute of Grocery Distribution, (q) the Country Landowners' Association, (r) the Advertising Association, (s) the Chemical Industry Association, (t) the British Agrochemical Association, (u) the Infant and Dietetic Foods Association, (v) the British Cake, Chocolate, Biscuit and Confectionary Alliance and (w) the British Soft Drinks Association; [42123]

(4) on how many occasions in the last 12 months (a) the Minister or his predecessor, (b) his junior ministerial colleagues in the Ministry and (c) senior civil servants, at or above the grade of assistant secretary in the Ministry, met representatives of interest parties in the dairy fats and margarine industries; and if he will list these and the companies they represented; [42126]

(5) how many times (a) the Minister of his predecessor, (b) his junior ministerial colleagues in the Ministry and (c) senior civil servants at or above the grade of Assistant Secretary in the Ministry, have met food and drink manufactures, retailers and other food industry trade associations in the last 12 months; and if he will list these meetings and the business they represented. [42127]

Mr. Douglas Hogg: I and my ministerial colleagues, and senior officials in my department, meet regularly with most of the trade, industry and consumers organisations referred to, though contacts with health interests are primarily a matter for colleagues in the Department of Health. Details on all the meetings and the interests represented could only be provided at disproportionate cost.

National Nutritional Databank

Dr. Strang: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the Royal Society of Chemistry's marketing and distribution management of the national nutritional databank; and when this service and the data collected from it will be opened and made available for public consideration. [42129]

Mr. Douglas Hogg: I shall write to the hon. Member.

Government Food Advisory Committees

Dr. Strang: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) what is the process by which appointments of consumer representatives to Government food committees are made; [42130]

(2) which commercial head-hunting firms have been used in the process of appointing consumer representatives to Government food advisory committees (a) currently and (b) in previous years; what has been the cost to the public purse; and if he will make a statement; [42131]

(3) on what grounds the steering group on chemical aspects of food surveillance is being closed down; and if he will make a statement. [42132]

Mr. Douglas Hogg: I shall write to the hon. Member.

Dr. Strang: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food on how many occasions in the last three years individuals on MAFF and Department of Health advisory committees and working parties on food and health-related committees have declined to declare vested interests when asked to do so, whether on a voluntary basis or a compulsory basis. [42128]

Mr. Hogg: No member of a food-related advisory committee for which declaration of interest is required has declined to make such a declaration in the last three years. This policy is now being extended on a voluntary basis to all working parties on surveillance; a query in one of the working parties has now been resolved and all interests will be declared.

Food Surveillance Programme

Dr. Strang: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) what plans he has for his Department to publish all the data generated by the food surveillance programme in the public domain; [42133]

(2) what programmes will be affected by charges in funding as a result of the priority-setting exercise for chemical food surveillance in 1996–97. [42134]

Mr. Douglas Hogg: I shall write to the hon. Member.

Cheese Production

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the changes proposed in regulations concerning cheese production; if these are required by European Union regulations; if they will be broadly applicable throughout the European Union; and what representations he has received regarding the regulations. [41461]

Mrs. Browning: As part of our deregulation plan, proposed changes to the Cheese Regulations 1970 were published earlier this year. These regulations are not based on EC legislation. Under single market rules, national compositional and labelling legislation cannot be applied to products imported from another member state in which they are lawfully produced and marketed.

We have taken careful note of the comments made during the consultation period and, as a result, have decided to amend the proposed changes to these regulations. We will not now be revolving the compositional standards for 12 named British cheeses. Nor will we be introducing a new requirement for cheese, and cream, to bear a separate declaration of their fat content. It is intended that the new regulations will come into force on 1 January 1996.

Environmentally Sensitive Areas

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many units in each environmentally sensitive area were entered under tier 1 only for England and Wales. [41700]

Mr. Boswell: The following numbers of ESA agreements have been entered under the "basic" tier in each of the ESAs in England and Wales:

English ESAs	Number of agreements with land in basic[1] tier
Pennine Dales	668
South Downs	165
Somerset Levels and Moors	730

Ynys Mon	219
Radnor	244
Lleyn Peninsula (Original)	272
Lleyn Peninsula (Revised)	76

[1] The "basic" tier requires agreement holders to maintain the existing landscape and conservation interests in the ESA.

Mrs. Michie: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the mean (a) tier 1 payment and (b) tier 2 payment for each of the English and Welsh environmentally sensitive areas. [41699]

Mr. Boswell: During the period 16 October 1994 to 15 October 1995, the mean payments made to ESA agreement holders in the "basic" and "enhancement" tiers in each of the ESAs in England and Wales were as follows:

	Basic tier mean payment £	Enhancement tier mean payment £
English ESAs
Pennine Dales	3,647.61	1,135.25

Lleyn Peninsula (revised)	433.39	1,385.15

Notes:

1. The "basic" tier requires agreement holders to maintain the existing landscape and conservation interests in the ESA.
2. "Enhancement" tiers seek to make radical improvements in the wildlife and landscape interests of each ESA.

Broiler Chickens

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many broiler chickens died from heat stress on United Kingdom broiling farms in the period May to September; and if he will make a statement. [41807]

Mrs. Browning: Figures on the number of broiler chickens which have died from heat stress are not available.

The Agriculture (Miscellaneous Provisions) Act 1968 makes it an offence to cause unnecessary pain or distress to livestock. It is a provision of the code of recommendations for the welfare of domestic fowl made under the Act that accommodation should be so designed that its ventilation is adequate to protect birds from overheating under any weather conditions that can reasonably be foreseen. MAFF has funded an advisory booklet, video and a series of countryside meetings to help farmers prevent heat stress in poultry.

Deep-sea Fish

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the international efforts in which he is participating to form an intergovernmental regime to do research on and control fishing of, deep-sea fish, where habits are relatively unknown. [39289]

Mr. Baldry [holding reply 2 November 1995]: The UK participates in a range of intergovernmental bodies which promote research in, or control fishing for, deep sea fish. These bodies include the International Council for the Exploration of the Sea, the Northwest Atlantic Fisheries Organization and the Northeast Atlantic Fisheries Commission. This summer the UK played an active role in the UN conference on straddling stocks and highly migratory fish stocks. At the end of November, the Ministry will participate in an international workshop considering the comprehensiveness and consistency of global arrangements for management of the oceans.

Alport Dale, Derbyshire

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what conclusions the regional advisory committee of the Forestry Commission, eastern region, came to at its meeting of 4 October concerning Food Enterprise's proposals for Alport dale in Derbyshire; if he will outline English Nature's official response as a statutory consultee to Forest Enterprise's proposals for Alport dale, Derbyshire; how many (i) letters and (ii) signatures on petitions he has received opposing the Forest Enterprise proposals for Alport dale, Derbyshire; and if Forest Enterprise has undertaken an environmental impact assessment of its proposals for Alport dale, Derbyshire. [42039]

Mr. Boswell [holding answer 7 November 1995]: The regional advisory committee has not been asked to consider Forest Enterprise's plans for felling and replanting the maturing woodlands in Alport dale at this stage. Forest Enterprise is reviewing its proposals.

English Nature has expressed concern about the possible impact of the original proposals on landscape and conservation, especially in the area of land designated as a site of special scientific interest. Forest Enterprise will be discussing the terms of a management plan for the area within English Nature.

My right hon. and learned Friend the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food has received one letter about the proposals; I have received one and the Forestry Commission has received 10.

Forest Enterprise carefully considered the environmental impact of its proposals in preparing its design plan for the woodlands and will continue to do so in revising the plan.

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the ways in which (a) harvesting Forest Enterprise's plantations in Alport dale will affect the rural economy and (b) Forest Enterprise's proposals for Alport dale will affect the (i) recreational and (ii) conservation potential of the Peak national park. [42037]

Mr. Boswell [holding answer 7 November 1995]: Harvesting the maturing woodlands at Alport Dale will contribute to the rural economy by generating employment in felling and replanting operations. Forest Enterprise aims to improve the potential of the area by phasing the felling of tress to increase the diversity of the woodlands and replanting in such a way to enhance the landscape.

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what will be the cost of burying the overhead electricity line that supplies Alport hamlet and at present interferes with cable crane extraction from one of the Forest Enterprise's plantations at Alport dale, Derbyshire; and who will bear the cost. [42036]

Mr. Boswell [holding answer 7 November 1995]: Forest Enterprise has asked Yorkshire Electricity to consider the options for moving the overhead electricity line and for meeting the cost. Putting the line underground is one of the options.

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what provisions have been made by Forest Enterprise against the risk of landslips and erosion during and after the harvesting of its plantations in Alport dale, Derbyshire; what is the expected yield of timber from Forest Enterprise's plantations in Alport dale, Derbyshire; what would be the net return to Forest Enterprise on the entire timber crop in its plantations in Alport dale, Derbyshire, at 1995 prices; and what are the costs of Forest Enterprise of gaining access to all the timber in its plantation in Alport dale, Derbyshire. [42038]

Mr. Boswell [holding answer 7 November 1995]: To minimise the risk of erosion, Forest Enterprise would use a cable crane to harvest timber from the steep slopes of the Dale. After harvesting, the roots of the trees felled are expect to stabilise the soil until the new trees are well established.

Forest Enterprise estimates that the woodlands will produce about 25,000 cu m of timber and that the net return on harvesting the crop could be £10,000 to £20,000 over the first five years, depending on conditions in the wood market.

Forest Enterprise expects to spend about £10,000 on access improvements.

Dairy Fats and Margarine Industries

Dr. Strang: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will itemise the financial support given to the dairy fats and margarine industries (a) from national Government spending and (b) from the European Union. [42125]

Mr. Douglas Hogg: I shall write to the hon. Member.

EC Live Transport Directive

Mr. Cann: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what organisations he plans to consult with regard to the draft EC live transport directive. [42089]

Mrs. Browning: The consultation package on the new EU rules, which we issued on 23 October includes a list of the organisations to which it was sent. A copy has been placed in the Library of the House.

Common Fisheries Policy

Mr. Gill: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) if the percentage share-out allocated to each member state of the EU for each of the fish stocks concerned varies when a new member state is fully integrated into the common fisheries policy; [42272]

(2) if the 1983 percentage share out of the total allowable catch is permanent. [42271]

Mr. Baldry: I shall write to the hon. Member.

Hill Livestock Compensatory Allowances

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what recent representations he has received concerning the level of hill livestock compensatory allowances; what action he is taking as a result; and if he will make a statement. [42180]

Mr. Boswell: On 2 November, my right hon. and learned Friend the Minister met representatives from the National Farmers Union for England and Wales, the Scottish National Farmers Union and the Ulster Farmers Union to discuss hill livestock compensatory allowances in the context of the annual review of economic conditions in the hills and uplands. He was accompanied on that occasion by Ministers from both the Scottish Office and the Welsh Office, and by myself.

Sheep Annual Premium Scheme

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what representations he has received concerning the change in sheep retention periods; and what action he is taking as a result; and if he will make a statement. [42178]

Mr. Boswell: The Department received numerous representations on the move to a single application and retention period for the sheep annual premium scheme, which had been recommended by EU auditors. Most were concerned that this would reduce marketing options, but the National Sheep Association felt that it might help breeders. We investigated the feasibility of tighter controls to enable the continuation of two retention periods but decided these would be too onerous for producers and too costly to administer.

Accordingly, my right hon. Friend announced on 18 October a single application and retention period which will protect the interests of the majority of sheep farmers.

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans he has to increase sheep annual premiums to compensate for any losses resulting from the change in the sheep retention period. [42179]

Mr. Boswell: The sheep annual premium is fixed by the European Commission, taking into account the difference between the basic Community price for sheepmeat and the average price prevailing on the Community market throughout the year. The final rate of premium for the 1995 scheme will not be determined until February 1996. A first estimate of the rate of premium for 1996 will be made by the Commission in the spring of 1996. It is not open to member states to fix the rate of premium themselves.

Specialist Advisers

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Minster of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many (a) specialist advisers and (b) press or public relations officers are employed by his Department; and what is the total annual salary bill for (a) and (b) above. [42309]

Mr. Boswell: I shall write to the hon. Member.

NATIONAL HERITAGE

National Lottery

Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if she will make it her policy to make available figures on (a) the sale of national lottery tickets by region and (b) the distribution of national lottery proceeds by region. [41238]

Mr. Sproat: My Department produces a monthly report of the distribution of lottery proceeds. Included in this report are details of the awards made each month and the total since the lottery began, for each region of the United Kingdom. Copies of this report are placed in the Libraries of the House. Figures on the sale of lottery tickets by region, are an operational matter for Camelot Group plc. I have therefore asked the Director General of the National Lottery, who is responsible for regulating the operation of the lottery, to write to the hon. Member, placing copies of his response in the Libraries of the House.

Mr. Jon Owen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if she will list the total lottery moneys to date collected from each of the English regions, Wales, Scotland and Northern Ireland. [41233]

Mr. Sproat [holding answer 6 November 1995]: This is an operational matter for Camelot Group plc. I have therefore asked the Director General of the National Lottery, who is responsible for regulating the operation of the Lottery, to write to the hon. Member, placing copies of his response in the Libraries of the House.

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage how much money has been allocated under the national lottery to applicants in the New Forest district council and Test Valley district council areas. [41847]

Mr. Sproat: Figures for national lottery funds broken down by district council areas are not currently available.

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what are the emoluments or salaries of members and senior officials of the lottery distributary bodies. [38747]

Mr. Sproat: I have set out as follows, in bands of £5,000, the salaries of all senior officials where these are £40,000 and above and all chairmen and board members.

Salaries in brackets are not met from National Lottery funds.

With the exception of the senior officials and members of the National Lottery Charities Board and the Millennium Commission and the Arts Council of England Lottery Director, the salaries set out above are not fully charged to lottery funds. Salaries are met from grant in aid and lottery funds in proportion with the duties carried out by the officers or members concerned. Charges in respect of these salaries will therefore vary from year to year and specific details will be included in the annual accounts for each body prepared at the end of each financial year.

[1] The Secretary of State for National Heritage (Chairman of the Millennium Commission) and the Deputy Prime Minister (a member of the Millennium Commission) receive salaries in respect of their duties as a Cabinet Ministers.

[2] The new Director of the National Heritage Memorial Fund is due to take up the post in December 1995. The vacancy was advertised with a salary of £70,000.

[3] Only a very small proportion of the salaries of these officials is charged to the Lottery.

Dr. Moonie: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage (1) if, as at 31 August, Camelot plc had reached its 12-month national lottery revenue target as projected in its tender to the Office of the National Lottery; and by how many months it is ahead of its target as at 7 November; [42331]

(2) by what percentage Camelot plc's national lottery revenues had, for the period from commencement of the national lottery to the latest date for which information is available, exceeded those projected in its tender to Oflot. [42332]

Mr. Sproat: I regret that it has not been possible to provide an answer before prorogation. I shall therefore write to the hon. Member and place a copy of the letter in the Libraries of the House.

Millennium Commission

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if she will give the number of projects by each English county which are bidding for support from the Millennium Commission. [41274]

Ms Mowlam: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage how many projects from Northern Ireland are currently under consideration by the Millennium Commission. [41909]

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage, further to her letter dated 3 November and placed in the Library, what is the earliest date for commencement of the second round of applications for financial support to the Millennium Commission. [42214]

Dr. John Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage (1) what regional criteria are used for deciding the distribution of Millennium Commission grants; [41227]

(2) what regional criteria will be used to decide on the allocation of Millennium Commission bursaries to individuals. [41225]

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: This is a matter for the Millennium Commission. I shall reply to the right hon. and hon. Members in my capacity as chairman of the commission and place copies of my reply in the Libraries of the House.

National Heritage Memorial Fund

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if she will make a statement on the application of the negative leverage principle with respect to applications for assistance from the national lottery millennium fund. [38760]

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley [holding answer 23 October 1995]: I regret that it has not been possible to provide an answer before prorogation. I shall therefore write to the hon. Member and place a copy of the letter in the Libraries of the House.

European Court Decisions

Sir Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage, pursuant to the oral answer of the Attorney-General of 30 October, Official Report, column 12, relating to decisions of the European Court of Justice and the European Court of Human Rights, if she will list those European Court decisions relating to responsibilities of her Department over the past two years; and if she will further indicate the estimated annual cost to public funds of each decision. [41209]

Mr. Sproat [holding answer 2 November 1995]: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply given by the Minister of State, Foreign and Commonwealth Office, my hon. Friend the Member for Boothferry (Mr. Davis) on 7 November, Official Report, columns 698-702.

Brynmawr Rubber Factory

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what action she has taken to date in conjunction with the Welsh Office, to preserve the Brynmawr rubber factory; and if she will make a statement. [40949]

Mr. Sproat: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by the Under-Secretary of State for Wales, my right hon. Friend the Member for Cardiff, North (Mr. Jones), on 7 November, Official Report, column 798.

English Heritage

Mr. Robathan: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if she will make a statement on the implementation of English Heritage's policy for the local management of the historic properties she has placed in its care. [42364]

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Since the launch of its forward strategy at the end of 1992, English Heritage has established agreements with partners who can bring local commitment and resources, in conjunction with English Heritage funding, towards improving the presentation and preservation of historic sites. Agreements have now been established in respect of nearly 80 of the 406 properties in English Heritage's care, with partners such as the National Trust, local authorities and local community groups. The agreements include clear safeguards for the care of the property. Given the success of its approach, I have agreed with English Heritage that it may enter into new management agreements, within agreed framework, but without in future seeking my specific approval. My Department will continue to monitor the implementation of this policy and I look forward to its successful extension to further appropriate sites.

Specialist Advisers

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage how many (a) specialist advisers and (b) press or public relations officers are employed by her Department; and what is the total annual salary bill for (a) and (b) above. [42320]

Mr. Sproat: I regret that it has not been possible to provide an answer before prorogation. I shall therefore write to the hon. Member and place a copy of the letter in the Libraries of the House.

LORD PRESIDENT OF THE COUNCIL

Scott Inquiry

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Lord President of the Council how many persons in his office are on the public payroll or employed as consultants or advisers and work on a part time or a full time basis in relation to the Scott inquiry; if he will list the names and how much each is paid.

Mr. Newton: No one in my Department is wholly employed on matters relating to the Scott inquiry, and it would not be possible to specify the number involved on an occasional basis. No payments have yet been made for external advice.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Lord President of the Council how many persons have been authorised to have access to documents held by his office relating to the Scott inquiry; and if he will list such persons.

Mr. Newton: Ministers, officials and other advisers have access to material relating to the inquiry as necessary in order to carry out their responsibilities.

Specialist Advisers

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Lord President of the Council how many (a) specialist advisers and (b) press or public relations officers are employed by his Department; and what is the total annual salary bill for (a) and (b) above.

Mr. Newton: I shall write to the hon. Member.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Members (Ethnic Minorities)

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Lord President of the Council what percentage of hon. Members are of ethnic minority background.

Mr. Newton: There is no monitoring of the ethnic background of hon. Members.

Written Answers

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Lord President of the Council what is the current disproportionate cost threshold for written parliamentary questions; and if he will publish a table showing the amount of such questions unanswered for that reason expressed as (a) a total number and (b) a percentage of those submitted to each Government Department or office by right hon. Members during the last and current parliamentary sessions. [39292]

Mr. Newton: The current disproportionate cost threshold for written parliamentary questions is £450.

It would not be possible, except at disproportionate cost, to supply the further information requested.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Prosecution Files

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Attorney-General what is the recommended retention period for prosecution papers by the Crown Prosecution Service. [40788]

The Attorney-General: Area offices of the Crown Prosecution Service retain files relating to cases finalised in the magistrates' courts for a minimum of 12 months after the final court date and those finalised in the Crown court for a minimum of three years. Cases handled in CPS headquarters are retained for a minimum of five years. Where there is a conviction, all case files are retained until the expiry of the sentence if it exceeds the usual retention period. Arrangements also exist to identify those prosecution files worthy of permanent preservation and to transfer them to the Public Record Office.

Advisers and Press Officers

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Attornery-General how many (a) specialist advisers and (b) press or public relations officers are employed by the Law Officers Departments; and what is the total annual salary bill for (a) and (b) above. [42318]

The Attorney-General: No special advisers are employed by the Law Officers Departments. A total of nine press officers are employed, seven by the Crown Prosecution Service and two by the Serious Fraud Office. I shall write to the hon. Member with details of salary costs.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Specialist Advisers

Mr. Bayley: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many (a) specialist advisers and (b) press or public relations officers are employed by his Department; and what is the total salary bill for (a) and (b) above. [42326]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: At 1 November, the Department employed 19 press officers, at an estimated annual salary bill of £637,000.

It is unclear to whom the hon. Member refers in his reference to "specialist advisers".

Scott Inquiry

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many persons in his Department and in the Export Credits Guarantee Department are on the public payroll or employed as consultants or advisers and work on a part-time or full-time basis in relation to the Scott inquiry; if he will list their names; and how much each is paid. [42053]

Mr. Nelson [holding answer 7 November 1995]: The number of staff in my Department wholly employed on matters relating to the Scott inquiry is five, and their direct annual salary cost is £133,065. It is not possible to identify the number of people involved on a part-time or occasional basis within the Department or as external consultants or advisers. It is not the practice to name staff or external advisers. The amount spent by my Department on external advice, principally on the provision of legal advice to DTI witnesses to the inquiry, is £294,000 since the inquiry began in 1992.

This information does not include the members of Sir Richard Scott's inquiry team.

Citizens Advice Bureau

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what is the ratio of the Department of Trade and Industry's funding of the National Association of Citizens Advice Bureaux to the funding of citizens advice bureau by local authorities over the last five years. [42231]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: In each of the last five years funding by my Department of NACAB has been:

Year	£ million
1991–92	11.032
1992–93	11.699
1993–94	12.252
1994–95	12.353
1995–96	[1]11.916

[1] Agreed to date but may change by the end of the financial year.

Individual citizens-advice bureaux are funded by individual local authorities. My Department does not hold information about the level of that funding.

European Framework Programme IV

Mrs. Anne Campbell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will set out how the allocation of the additional costs of the European framework programme IV was divided between Government Departments in 1994–95. [41884]

Mr. Ian Taylor: No allocation of the costs of European framework programme IV were made in the UK financial year 1994–95, since this programme was first implemented in the Community's financial year 1995.

Companies House, Edinburgh

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list the retained functions of Companies house, Edinburgh, after contracting out. [42238]

Mr. Oppenheim: The functions to be retained are:

the granting of extensions of filing dates for annual returns, the striking off, dissolution and restoration of companies in accordance with the Companies Acts, processing cases passed by the contractor where there has been an objection to the use of a company name, processing cases passed by the contractor which may lead to prosecution, pursuing possible breaches of the Companies Acts.

Mr. Griffiths: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list the number of staff necessary to carry out the retained functions of Companies house, Edinburgh. [42237]

Mr. Oppenheim : It is envisaged that five staff will be retained to carry out retained functions.

Mr. Griffiths: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list the terms of confidentiality which will apply to contractors seeking to bid for the contract to run Companies house, Edinburgh. [42236]

Mr. Oppenheim: All persons invited to tender are subject to confidentiality obligations as part of the tender documentation. The Deregulation and Contracting Out Act 1994—under which an order was made to permit statutory functions to be carried out by a contractor—ensures that the same requirements as regards confidentiality will apply to contractor and his staff as apply at present to Companies house. In addition, confidentiality requirements will form part of any contract.

Wincanton Co., Clwyd

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what intervention he will make according to the Transfer of Undertakings (Protection of Employment) Regulations 1981, on behalf of the Wincanton Co. milk lorry drivers based at Pentre, Queensferry, Clwyd, who have lost their jobs consequent upon Wincanton failing to keep their contract; and if he will make a statement. [42208]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: Questions concerning the dismissal of employees in connection with the transfer of an undertaking, or part of one, to which the Transfer of Undertakings (Protection of Employment) Regulations 1981 apply, are matters for an industrial tribunal to determine.

Pay Increases

Mr. Meacher: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many employees he estimates have had pay increases below the rate of inflation in each of the last 10 years. [41581]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: The information requested is not available.

However, the new earnings survey shows that, since 1985, there have been significant increases in employees' real earnings at all levels of the earnings distribution.

Small Businesses

Sir Irvine Patnick: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list the type and the number of grants made by his Department to small businesses in the Sheffield area for each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [42160]

Mr. Page: Information in respect of DTI grants currently available in the Sheffield travel-to-work area, which covers part of north Derbyshire, is given on the attached table.

If any small firms wish to know whether they are eligible for grants, they should contact Business Link, Sheffield on 0114 281 3813.

1. Regional Investment Grants ceased to be available in Sheffield TTWA on 1 August 1993, but were re-introduced in certain wards in the TTWA, w.e.f 1 April 1995, as part of the coalfield regeneration measures.
2. SPUR was introduced in February 1991.

America (Investment)

Sir Irvine Patnick: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what was the total number of (a) Sheffield and (b) United Kingdom firms investing in the United States of America in each of the last three years; and if he will make a statement. [42163]

Mr. Nelson: There is no central register of investments in the USA by Sheffield or other UK companies. To attempt to obtain this information could be done only at disproportionate cost to the Department.

North West Water/Norweb Merger

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) how many hon. Members sought a meeting with him to discuss the merger of North West Water and Norweb; [42181]

(2) when the hon. Member for Corby (Mr. Powell) last met him to discuss the merger with Norweb; [42307]

(3) how many representations he received from (a) hon. Members and (b) others urging him (i) to refer and (ii) not to refer the proposed merger between North West Water and Norweb to the Monopolies and Merger Commission. [42182]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: Around 30 representations were received by this Department concerning the proposed merger between North West Water and Norweb; about a third of these were from hon. Members. Most of the correspondents were opposed to the merger or wished to see it referred to the Monopolies and Merger Commission. The correspondence was copied to the Office of Fair Trading so that the Director General of Fair Trading could take account of it in formulating his advice to my right hon. Friend, the President of the Board of Trade.

My right hon. Friend held no meetings with hon. Members to discuss the merger. He received one request for a meeting, from the all-party parliamentary water group.

Burnley and Pendle Buses

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what guidance the Office of Fair Trading has given to Pendle council concerning the proposed sale of the council's stake in Burnley and Pendle Buses. [42201]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: As a general principle, my right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade and the Office of Fair Trading never disclose whether confidential guidance has been sought or the nature of any guidance given.

Business Links

Mrs. Roche: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what has been the cost to public funds of business links in each year since they came into being. [42262]

Mr. Page: Public expenditure on the development of business links is mainly from the DTI's business link pump-priming budget. Expenditure from that budget in 1993–94 and 1994–95 was £1.14 million and £13.1 million respectively. The pump-priming budget for 1995–96 is £38.5 million.

The Department also contributes to the cost of local business support services which are being delivered through business links as they are set up. The budget for these services in 1995–96 is £63.9 million.

Mrs. Roche: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list for each business links office (a) when it opened, (b) how many small businesses with (i) 0 to nine employees, (ii) 10 to 49 employees, (iii) 50 to 99 employees and (iv) 100 to 499 employees it assisted in the last year, (c) what its cost was in the last year to the public purse and (d) what percentage of businesses which used the service were charged for it. [42261]

Mr. Page: The list of business links and their opening dates is shown. Individual business link information relating to the size banding of company, cost to the public purse and percentage of businesses charged for services is not available. This information can be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Mrs. Roche: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what advice is given by his Department to (a) the business links chief executive and (b) local business links offices about fee rates for business links services. [42268]

Mr. Page: Business links are advised, in the business link service guide, to charge for services where it is reasonable to do so. The guide also sets out the requirements of the European Community state aid rules—which set a 50 per cent. limit on public funding of consultancy and training provision for small and medium-sized enterprises—competition policy and value for money. The guide was issued to business link chief executives in October 1995 and is available to business link staff. I have arranged for a copy of the guide to be placed in the Library of the House.

Business Statistics

Mrs. Roche: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list for each parliamentary constituency (a) how many businesses there are employing (i) between 0 to nine people, (ii) between 10 to 49 people, (iii) between 50 to 99 people and (iv) between 100 to 499, (b) how many business start-ups there have been in each of the last 16 years and (c) how many deregistrations there have been in each of the last 16 years. [42267]

Mr. Page: Figures for parliamentary constituencies are not available.

Numbers of VAT-registered businesses, new registrations and deregistrations by local authority district are published in "VAT County and District Estimates 1980–91" and "VAT County and District estimates 1992–93", copies of which are available in the Library of the House.

Mrs. Roche: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what is the total number of business start-ups in each of the last 12 months. [42006]

Mr. Page [holding answer 7 November 1995]: There are no official figures on the number of business start-ups each month. Estimates from Barclays and NatWest suggest around 400,000 businesses started up in the 12 months ending June 1995.

Small Business Ministers (Meeting)

Mrs. Roche: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what was the outcome of the meeting of small business Ministers on 30 October. [42269]

Mr. Page: The group agreed to meet twice yearly—in January to provide input into the competitiveness White Paper and July to provide input into the Budget. Other meetings will take place on a bilateral basis to discuss issues specific to individual departments.

It was also agreed that each Department would provide a contribution to the annual small firms in Britain report, showing the progress it had made helping small businesses.

Meetings

Dr. Strang: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many times (a) he or his predecessor, (b) his junior ministerial colleagues in his Department and (c) senior civil servants at or above the grade of assistant secretary in his Department, have met food and drink manufacturers, retailers and other food industry trade associations in the last year; and if he will list these meetings and the businesses they represented. [42124]

Mr. Eggar: There is a wide range of DTI Ministers and senior civil servants who may have had such contracts. However, the information is not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Asthma Research

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how much money the Medical Research Council spent in 1994–95 on (a) research into asthma and (b) research which may be relevant to the condition. [41160]

Mr. Ian Taylor: In 1994–95, the MRC spent (a) £873,400 on research directly relevant to asthma, and (b) £718,254 on research related to the condition.

Gas Industry

Mr. Wigley: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will take steps to ensure that measures to increase competition in the gas industry are not at the expense of people living in rural areas a long way from North sea sources of supply; and if he will make a statement. [41769]

Mr. Page: No such measures are necessary. Competitors are already promising to offer domestic customers in the south-west—the first region which is to be opened up to competition in April 1996—lower prices. In fact, one company has already made public its intention to offer prices that are 15 per cent. or more below British Gas's current standard tariffs. This is despite the fact that the region includes large rural areas and is a long way from the North sea.

British Association (Annual Science Meeting)

Mr. Redmond: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what considerations made him unable to accept an invitation to visit the British Association's annual science meeting held in Newcastle during September. [39041]

Mr. Lang: I will write to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Deregulation

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many occasions in the past 12 months he has agreed to meet individuals and organisations interested in (a) deregulation proposals and (b) telecommunications policy where the introduction was initially sought by (i) a Minister and (ii) another hon. Member. [42175]

Mr. Lang: I will write to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Digital Terrestrial Television

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage when she expects the frequency planning work for the introduction of digital terrestrial television to be completed. [41678]

Mr. Ian Taylor: I have been asked to reply.

I shall write to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Internet

Mr. French: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) what representations he has received about the possible regulation of material available on the Internet; [41815]

(2) what investigations his Department has made in the practicality of the regulation of material available on the Internet. [41816]

Mr. Ian Taylor [holding answer 6 November 1995]: Over the last few months, I have received a number of representations about the nature of material on the Internet. These have involved indecent, obscene and racially inflammatory material and that which could lead to terrorist activity. In addition, there have also been representations about the possible access of young children to some of this material.

In general, the Internet is already subject to the same laws as apply to other media. However my officials, along with those of other Departments, are considering the practicality of, and the case for, any more specific regulation. We have also been interested in the proposals from the US for specific self-regulation in relation to the Internet, both by providers of Internet services and by schools and parents. On obscenity, my Department is participating in the interdepartmental group on the subject which is chaired by the Home Office.

Increasingly, servers such as BT are offering to filter out material supplied to schools and other similar users. We are co-operating in evaluating such action.

Ultimately, the enormous benefits of Internet and its international character make legal remedies against abuse by a minority difficult.

TRANSPORT

Train Safety (Women)

Ms Jowell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what was the number of reported assaults on women travelling on trains each year since 1990. [41751]

Mr. Watts: The table shows the number of recorded assaults against women travelling on trains from 1 September 1993 to 30 September 1995. Separate figures by gender for periods before 1 September 1993 are not readily available and could be produced only at disproportionate cost.

Period	Total
1 September 1993 to 31 December 1993	113
1 January 1994 to 31 December 1994	494
1 January 1995 to 30 September 1995	395

Ms Jowell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what recent representations he has received about women-only train carriages; and if he will make a statement. [41752]

Mr. Watts: None.

Eurostar

Sir Keith Speed: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much his Department has paid in (a) grant, (b) loan and (c) otherwise during the current year to European Passenger Services or British Rail to assist the operation of the Eurostar service. [41641]

Mr. Watts: To date no grant has been paid to European Passenger Services. EPS has an external financing requirement of about £143 million in the current year to date. This is funded by borrowing from the national loans fund. EPS was separated from British Rail on 9 May 1994 and has been funded separately from BR since that date.

Railway Timetable

Mr. Heppell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport on what date he expects the May 1996 railway timetable to be published. [42283]

Mr. Watts: Railtrack informs me that next year's summer timetable will come into effect in June 1996 and will be published at the end of April 1996.

Municipal Bus Companies

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) if he will list those former municipal bus companies whose sale to the private sector was allowed only under covenants (a) preventing asset stripping, (b) protecting the work force's employment terms and conditions and (c) preserving minimum service levels; [42170]

(2) what factors he considers in deciding whether or not to give consent to the sale of a 50 per cent. stake in a jointly owned municipal bus company where one local authority wants to sell and the other does not; [42168]

(3) what is his policy in respect of sales of a municipal bus company where the sale offer is made to a restricted number of carefully selected potential purchasers; [42172]

(4) to what extent the pension rights of persons formerly employed by municipal bus companies have been affected following the purchase of the company by (a) a private operator and (b) the management and employees themselves; [42171]

(5) what discussions, meetings or contact he has had with Price Waterhouse Corporate Finance concerning the proposed sale by Pendle council of its stake in Burnley and Pendle Buses. [42173]

Mr. Norris: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Rail Privatisation

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport on how many occasions in the past 12 months he has agreed to meet individuals and organisations interested in rail privatisation where the introduction was initially sought by (a) a Minister and (b) another hon. Member. [42174]

Sir George Young: The information is not kept in this form and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

M62

Mr. Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what has been the expenditure to date on the two-year further investigation into the M62 relief road project which was announced in 1983; [42165]

(2) how many houses affected by the M62 relief road proposal have been purchased by his Department to date; [42167]

(3) what has been the expenditure to date on acquiring properties affected by the M62 relief road. [42166]

Mr. Watts: I will write to the hon. Member.

Road and Motorway Maintenance

Mr. Rooker: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many cyclical and routine maintenance contracts let by the Highways Agency for roads and motorways are (a) carried out directly or indirectly by local authorities as designated agents and (b) supervised by (i) consulting engineers and (ii) others working directly or indirectly for the Highways Agency. [42156]

Mr. Watts: I will write to the hon. Member.

Ferrybridge-Hook Moor Inquiry

Mr. William O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will give a breakdown of costs of the public inquiry into the A1 Ferrybridge to Hook Moor proposed development. [42157]

Mr. Watts: The final cost of the inquiry is not yet known but is likely to be of the order of £68,000. Of this amount, some £15,000 relates to accommodation.

Mr. O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) if he will make a statement on the procedure for (a) collecting and recording statements, (b) answers to questions and (c) other matters at the public inquiry held at the Parkside hotel, Pontefract by (i) the Highways Agency and (ii) the independent inspector, (1) in the room where the inquiry was held and (2) in the room occupied by the Highways Agency; [42154]

(2) what procedure in respect of recording of statements, questions and answers was applied during the public inquiry held recently into the A1 Ferrybridge to Hook Moor proposals by the Highways Agency. [42148]

Mr. Watts: The current rules of procedure for inquiries concerned with Highways Act Orders are contained in the Highways (Inquiries Procedure) Rules 1994, SI 3263, which came into force on 10 January. All inquiries are subject to the rules of natural justice and are conducted by the appointed inspector on the basis of openness, fairness and impartiality. It is for the inspector to decide the order in which witnesses will be heard, statements recorded and the pattern of examination and cross-examination. Since the purpose of the inquiry is to appraise the inspector of the facts of the matter before him, the most important record is the set of notes the inspector takes himself. These notes provide the inspector with the basis for his report.

All written evidence to the inquiry became inquiry documents which were deposited in the inquiry library.

No record is kept of the proceedings in the private workrooms of the Highways Agency and its advisers.

Motorways Inquiries

Mr. William O' Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many public inquiries dealing with major motorway developments have been initiated by the Highways Agency on behalf of his Department; and if he will list the titles of the public inquiries. [42150]

Mr. Watts: This is an operational matter for the Highways Agency. I have asked the chief executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Laurie Haynes to Mr. William O' Brien, dated 8 November 1995:

As you know, the Minister for Railways and Roads, Mr John Watts, has asked me to reply to your Parliamentary Question asking the Secretary of State for Transport, how many public inquiries dealing with major motorways developments have been initiated by the Highways Agency on behalf of his Department, and if he will list the titles of the public inquiries.

Public inquiries into objections to motorway and trunk road schemes are set up jointly by the Secretaries of State for Transport and for the Environment.

Since our formation on 1 April 1994 Public Inquiries into the following major motorway development have been initiated:-

M1 Junctions 6A–10 Widening
M4 Junctions 3–4b Widening
M11 Junctions 5 North Facing slip roads Improvements
M20 Junctions 3–5 Widening
M23 Junctions 8–9 Widening
M25 Terminal 5 Spur (Heathrow)
M63 Junctions 6–9 Widening
A1(M) Ferrybridge to Hook Moor
A1(M) Leeming to Scotch Corner
A556(M) M6 to M56
Birmingham Northern Relief Road

Mr. O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what advice is given to independent inspectors hearing a public inquiry into motorway developments to ensure all witnesses' statements are recorded and available for public inspection. [42151]

Mr. Watts: The planning inspectorate of the Department of the Environment has issued "Notes for the Guidance of Independent Inspectors Holding Inquiries Into Orders and Special Road Schemes Made Under the Highways Act 1980". These notes make it clear that documentary evidence, like oral evidence, can be taken into account only if it is fully disclosed at the inquiry. The notes advise the inspector to list inquiry documents, plans and photographs, giving them unique numbers, in an appendix to the report on the inquiry. A transcript service is normally provided by the Department of Transport, for trunk road inquiries which are expected to last more than 16 sitting days.

Mr. O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what legislation applies to the terms and conditions of a public inquiry into a major motorway development. [42153]

Mr. Watts: The conduct of inquiries for which notice was given on or after 10 January 1995 is governed by the Highways (Inquiries Procedure) Rules 1994, SI 1994 No. 3263, and the Compulsory Purchase by Ministers (Inquiries Procedure) Rules 1994, SI 1994 No. 3264. Inquiries for which notice was given before 10 January 1994 are governed by the Highways (Inquiries Procedure) Rules 1976, SI 1976 No. 721, and the Compulsory Purchase by Ministers (Inquiries Procedure) Rules 1967, SI 1967 No. 720.

Mr. O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport at what stage in a public inquiry into a major motorway development the independent inspector appointed by him takes on responsibilities; and if he will make a statement. [42152]

Mr. Watts: The independent inspector for a trunk road motorway inquiry is nominated by the Lord Chancellor and appointed by the Secretaries of State for the Environment and for Transport. The inspector is fully responsible for the conduct of the inquiry from its opening and for any pre-inquiry meeting.

Highways Agency

Mr. William O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what responsibilities, other than operational, are allocated by his Department to the Highways Agency. [42149]

Mr. Watts: In addition to being responsible for the day-to-day management and the performance of the Highways Agency, the chief executive advises my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State on operational policy affecting the agency's work and has the lead role in making recommendations to him about the future development of the network.

M1–A1 Link Road

Mr. William O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is the estimated number of vehicles that will use the Leeds M1 to A1 link road when it is complete. [42158]

Mr. Watts: I will write to the hon. Member.

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list all the projects considered for the private finance initiative since it began in his Department, indicating in each case whether or not it has proceeded and the public and private financial input in each case. [41328]

Mr. Watts: All projects for which the Department is responsible are considered for procurement through the private finance initiative. Information on those that have proceeded to date is included in the Department's publication "Building Tomorrow's Transport Network", copies of which are in the Library, and in my answer to the hon. Member for Sheffield, Attercliffe (Mr. Betts) on 28 June 1995, Official Report, column 672–73. Funding for line 1 of Midland Metro has since been approved: the total value of the project is estimated to be £145 million of which the private sector is contributing £11.5 million. Bids for the WCML modernisation signalling programme are being evaluated by Railtrack and the contract will be let before the end of the financial year.

Road Building Programme

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what has been the spending in constant terms of the road building programme in each year since 1979. [41765]

Mr. Watts: The information requested regarding spending in constant terms in the road building programme since 1979—calculated using 1993–94 as the baseline—is set out in million pounds sterling. The figures apply only to roads in England as the Secretaries of State for Scotland and for Wales have responsibility for this expenditure in those countries. Expenditure on local roads is not available at constant prices and is therefore excluded.

Year	£ million
1979–90	1094.0
1980–81	1083.8
1981–82	1184.2
1982–83	1292.7
1983–84	1190.0
1984–85	1279.1
1985–86	1235.5
1986–87	1270.2
1987–88	1341.5
1988–89	1315.1
1989–90	1656.5
1990–91	2052.4
1991–92	1988.6
1992–93	2018.9
1993–94	2041.9
1994–95	1991.7

Car Windscreen Cleaners

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what plans he has to reduce nuisance to the public by people offering to clean car windows; [42336]

(2) how many people cleaning car windscreens without legal authority or excuse have been prosecuted for wilfully obstructing the free passage along a highway in 1994–95. [42337]

(3) what consultations he has had with the police about the extent of people cleaning car windscreens, with particular reference to the dangers of vulnerable drivers. [42338]

Mr. Norris: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Specialist Advisers

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many (a) specialist advisers and (b) press or public relations officers are employed by his Department; and what is the total annual salary bill for (a) and (b) above. [42327]

Mr. Norris: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Trans-European Transport Networks

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on the decision by the EU Council of Transport Ministers in respect of the amendments Nos. 12, 162, 163 and 166, concerning environmental standards, from the European Parliament to the European Community proposal on trans-European transport networks. [41763]

Mr. Watts: A common position on the draft guidelines for the development of the trans-European transport network was adopted by the Transport Council on 28 September. In reaching this common position, the Council considered amendments Nos. 12, 162, 163 and 166 and agreed to an amendment to article 5 of the draft guidelines. This provides for environmental concerns to be integrated into the design and development of the network. The Council agreed that there was no need to include an article devoted specifically to environmental protection since this was already dealt with adequately in the draft proposals.

Stranraer Rail Services

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what are his intentions with regard to the franchising of passenger rail services serving Stranraer. [42377]

Mr. Watts: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Air Pollution

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what support or promotion his Department is giving to installing public displays of traffic pollution levels in streets. [40915]

Mr. Clappison: I have been asked to reply.

My Department makes information available to the public from its automatic air quality monitoring sites, which in city centres are mainly influenced by road traffic emissions. Daily information is provided on air pollution in both urban and rural areas across the United Kingdom via a Freephone helpline, Ceefax, Teletext, the Internet and a variety of other news media. Bulletins include information on levels of nitrogen dioxide, sulphur dioxide and ozone together with a forecast for the following day. The information is available to local authorities and it is for them to decide what use should be made of it in their local circumstances.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT ADMINISTRATION

Micro-credit Programmes

Mr. Keith Hill: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the amount of bilateral British aid in 1994 given to micro-credit programmes making small business loans to poor women. [41587]

Mr. Hanley: British aid, in 1994, funded a number of programmes with micro-credit components including large programmes in Bangladesh, through the Bangladesh Rural Advancement Committee, and in Kenya, through the Kenya rural enterprise programme. Neither the total of these micro-credit programmes nor the proportion made to poor women are readily identifiable, but women are the main beneficiaries in the programmes specified and we believe that total expenditure on micro-credit was approximately £3 million in 1994.

Miss Lestor: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans he has to contribute funds for the World Bank plan announced last July to assist micro-level credit schemes. [42195]

Mr. Hanley: The consultative group to assist the poorest, launched by the World Bank in June, aims to pool experience on the delivery of financial services to the very poor; to support institutions which provide such services on a financially sustainable basis; to strengthen donor co-ordination and increase awareness of microcredit schemes within the bank. The bank is contributing $30 million towards this pilot programme. Other donors may contribute in cash or in kind, by nominating directly administered projects and programmes for joint review of experience and dissemination of best practice. The UK is participating in the group on the latter basis.

Bilateral Aid

Mr. Gapes: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs by how much the Overseas Development Administration budget would need to rise, in percentage and money terms, to maintain the value of the bilateral programme during the period 1996–97 to 1998–99. [41621]

Mr. Hanley: It is not possible to answer this question precisely, since there is scope to modify certain limited categories of multilateral spending such as contributions to new multilateral replenishments, or voluntary contributions to UN or Commonwealth bodies.

The latest relevant forecast, published in the 1995 departmental report, suggests that the increase required to maintain the value, in cash and real terms, of the bilateral programmes at the levels planned for 1995–96 in 1996–97 and 1997–98 is as follows:

	£ millions	Percentage
1996–97
Cash	81.0	3.6
Real	114.0	5.1
1997–98
Cash	155.0	7.0
Real	216.0	9.7

Departmental Budget

Mr. Gapes: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs by how much the Overseas Development Administration budget would need to increase, in percentage and money terms, to maintain its value, in cash and real terms, during the period 1996–97 to 1998–99. [41620]

Mr. Hanley: The level of the Overseas Development Administration budget for 1995–96 is planned to be £2,230 million excluding overseas superannuation and global environment assistance. The increase on the planned level for 1995–96, in percentage and money terms, required to maintain its value, in cash and real terms, during the period 1996–97 to 1998–99, is as follows:

	£ millions	Percentage
1996–97
Cash	0.0	0
Real	67.0	3
1997–98
Cash	0.0	0
Real	124.0	5.6
1998–99
Cash	0.0	0
Real	177.0	8

Debt Relief

Miss Lestor: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) how much debt service on Overseas Development Administration debt was received in 1993 and 1994; and how much is due in 1995 and 1996; [42343]

(2) to which countries the United Kingdom has provided Overseas Development Administration debt relief in 1995. [42344]

Mr. Hanley: My right hon. and noble Friend the Minister for Overseas Development will write to the hon. Lady.

Nigeria (Oil Industry)

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) what projects his Department is funding (a) alone and (b) in partnership, in Nigeria; and if he will list (i) the amount of funding and (ii) the organisations involved; [42374]

(2) if he will provide a full list of all projects and Overseas Development Administration is funding in partnership with Shell and give the amount of funding involved; [42375]

(3) if he will list all projects his Department is funding (a) alone and (b) in partnership with other organisations linked to the oil industry in Nigeria; and if he will list the amount of funding involved; [42376]

(4) if he will list all projects his Department is funding (a) alone and (b) in partnership in or to do with Ogoniland, Nigeria; and if he will list the amount of funding involved; [42369]

(5) if he will list all projects that his Department is planning to take part in which includes co-operation with oil industry companies; [42370]

(6) if he will list all the projects his Department his taken part in which have involved Shell in each year for the last 10 years; [42371]

(7) if he will list all projects his Department is planning to take part or fund in Nigeria; [42372]

(8) if he will list all the projects his Department has funded in Nigeria in each year for the last 10 years. [42373]

Mr. Hanley: My right hon. and noble Friend the Minister for Overseas Development will write to the hon. Member.

TREASURY

Income Tax

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will provide updated figures using the September retail prices index for tables 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8 and 9 of the tax ready reckoner and tax reliefs giving for each table the effect in 1996–97 and a full year. [40774]

Mr. Jack [holding answer 31 October 1995]: Revised figures are in the tables.

Table 2
Income tax

	1995–96 £	1996–97 £
Personal allowance	3,525	3,665
Personal allowance (age 65–74)	4,630	4,810
Personal allowance (age 75 and over)	4,800	4,990
Married couple's allowance[1]	1,720	1,790
Married couple's allowance (age 65–75)[1]	2,995	3,115
Married couple's allowance (age 75 and over)[1]	3,035	3,155
Additional personal[1,2] and widow's bereavement allowance[1]	1,720	1,790
Aged income limit[3]	14,600	15,200
Lower rate band	3,200	3,400
Basic rate limit[4]	24,300	25,300

[1] Allowance available at a flat rate of 15 per cent.

[2] Primarily for single parents.

[3] If the total income, less allowable deductions, of a taxpayer aged 65 or over exceeds this limit, the age-related allowances are reduced by £1 for each £2 of income over the limit until the basic levels of the personal and married couple's allowances are reached.

[4] Higher rate income tax is payable on income (less those allowances and reliefs that are allowed at the higher rate) in excess of the basic rate limit.

[1] The estimated revenue effects of changes on receipts are rounded. The extent of rounding reflects the desire to avoid undue compounding of its effects when numbers are pro-rated, rather than the accuracy of the estimates.

[2] The figures for income tax changes include consequential effects on the yield of capital gains tax. Changes are assumed to take effect from April 1996.

[3] Including the effects of the change on receipts of advance corporation tax and on consequent liability to mainstream corporation tax.

[4] Allowances for those aged 65–74 and aged 75 and over.

[5] The figures include the revenue effects of changing the additional personal allowance and the widow's bereavement allowance by £100.

[6] Percentage changes are calculated with reference to 1995–96 levels.

[1] The estimated revenue effects of changes on receipts are rounded. The extent of rounding reflects the desire to avoid undue compounding of its effects when numbers are pro-rated, rather than the accuracy of the estimates.

[2] Assessment to corporation tax normally relates to the preceding year. These estimates are the changes to revenue that would occur if the changed rates were applied to profits from 1 April 1995.

[3] These figures ignore effects arising from the imputation system.

[4] These changes are assumed to take effect from April 1996.

Table 8
Direct effects of revalorising all excise duties by 3.9 per cent.[1]

Typical item	Current level of duty on typical item	Price change[2]
Pint of beer	24.6p	1.1p
75cl bottle of table wine	105.33p	4.8p
70cl bottle of spirits	£5.77	26.4p
20 king size cigarettes[3]	£1.69	13.8p
Litre of unleaded petrol[4]	31.3p	3.3p
Litre of DERV[4]	31.3p	3.3p
VED[5]	£135	£5.27

[1] These are estimated on the assumption that total consumers' expenditure at factor cost does not change.

[2] The price change is assumed to equal the change in duty plus the consequential VAT except in the case of VED where VAT is not payable. The price change is for the typical item described above and rounded to the nearest one-tenth of a pence.

[3] The duty on cigarettes has ad valorem and specific elements; revalorisation relates to total duty and the illustrative percentage change relates only to the specific element, but the price change includes the consequential increase in ad valorem duty and VAT. The figures are for an increase of 3 per cent. above revalorisation to reflect the commitment to raise tobacco duties by at least 3 per cent. in real terms in future budgets announced in November 1993.

[4] The figures are for an increase of 5 per cent. above revalorisation to reflect the commitment to raise fuel duties by at least 5 per cent. in real terms in future Budgets announced in November 1993.

Air passenger duty[8][9]	50p/£1	10.0	10	35	35
1 percentage point change in VAT standard rate[8]			190	2,480	2,610
1 percentage point change in rate of insurance premium tax[8]			20	270	285

[1] These are estimated on the assumption that total consumers' expenditure at factor cost does not change.:

[2] The price change is assumed to equal the change in duty plus the consequential VAT except in the case of VED where VAT is not payable. The price change is for the typical item described above and rounded to the nearest one-tenth of a pence.

[3] Assuming implementation on 1 January 1996 for alcohol and on Budget day for all other duties.

[4] Revenue effects include effects of changed duty on all items in the same category by the same percentage. Estimates are subject to uncertainty about the extent to which consumers would switch between different categories of expenditure. This is particularly so for switching from one type of alcoholic drink to another.

[5] The duty on cigarettes has ad valorem and specific elements; revalorisation relates to total duty and the illustrative percentage change relates only to the specific element, but the price change includes the consequential increase in ad valorem duty hand VAT. The figures are for an increase of 3 per cent. above revalorisation to reflect the commitment to raise tobacco duties by at least 3 per cent. in real terms in future budgets announced in November 1993.

[6] Revenue effects assume duty on both leaded and unleaded petrol is changed by the same percentage.

[7] All VED, including HGVs as well as cars and light vans.

[8] Assuming implementation from Budget day.

[9] Current duty rates are £5 and £10 depending on destination.

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) if he will estimate the effect on (a) tax revenue and (b) benefit expenditure of increasing (i) the married couple's allowance, (ii) the additional personal allowance and (iii) the widow's bereavement allowance by (A) £100, (B) £200 and (C) £300; [42287]

(2) what would be the effect on (a) tax revenue and (b) benefit expenditure of introducing a tax allowance of £300 per child for taxpayers with children (i) under 11 years of age and (ii) under 16 years of age, giving relief at (A) the taxpayers' marginal rate, (B) the 25 per cent. rate, (C) the 20 per cent. rate and (D) the 15 per cent. rate. [42285]

Mr. Jack: Estimated full-year tax costs at 1996–97 income levels are given in the table. The benefit offset will depend on take-up and other factors, but it is likely to be small relative to the total cost.

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list for all taxpayers the effect on revenue yield in 1995–96 resulting from changes since 1987–88 and 1990–91 in the eligibility, rates or amounts of allowances and reliefs, including MIRAS, available for offset against income tax, after allowing for indexation. [39108]

Mr. Jack: Comparisons at 1995–96 income levels using the higher tax rates from the earlier years and with income tax allowances and rate bands indexed in line with changes in the retail prices index are given in the table. These are based on a projection of the 1993–94 survey of personal incomes. The effect of changes in mortgage interest relief cannot be estimated from this source because most mortgage interest relief is given at source and therefore is not included in individual tax records.

Tax regime applied to 1995–96 incomes	Total income tax liability before mortgage interest relief £ billion
1987–88 indexed	84.7
1990–91 indexed	80.2
1995–96 actual	74.7

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) if he will estimate for the latest year available the number of married couples in the United Kingdom, including those couples that are dependent on benefits, who have (a) insufficient income and (b) sufficient income to use the married couple's allowance in full to offset against tax; [42288]

(2) what is the number of taxpayers who are entitled to (a) the married couple's allowance, (b) the additional personal allowance (c) neither of these allowances because their partner is claiming the allowance, (d) neither of these because they are unmarried and do not have dependent children and (e) the widow's bereavement allowance. [42286]

Mr. Jack: I cannot answer substantively before Parliament is prorogued. I will, however, write to the hon. Member.

Mr. Rowlands: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what estimate he has of the number and proportion of income taxpayers in (a) Wales, (b) Mid Glamorgan and (c) Merthyr Tydfil and Rhymney who pay no higher than the 20 per cent. rate; [41608]

(2) what estimate he has of the number of people in employment in (a) Wales, (b) Mid Glamorgan and (c) Merthyr Tydfil and Rhymney who earn enough to pay income tax. [41609]

Mr. Jack: The table provides estimates for those resident in Wales, Mid Glamorgan and Merthyr Tydfil or Rhymney Valley districts. Figures are given for 1993–94, the latest year in which information can be provided below the United Kingdom level.

Numbers: Thousands

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Betts: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list by type of project (a) how many schemes have been approved to date under the private finance initiative, (b) what is the value of those schemes and (c) what public sector contribution will be required both initially and as revenue support during the lifetime of the schemes. [41745]

Mr. Jack [holding answer 7 November 1995]: By the end of 1995–96, I expect projects to a value of some £5 billion to have been agreed. Fuller details of the major projects concerned were published in the Treasury press notice 136/94 of 29 November 1994. Within this total, there is a large number and variety of projects, which are being taken forward by a number of public sector bodies, including those outside central Government. Detailed information of the kind requested by the hon. Gentleman is not held centrally.

Financial arrangements for projects under the private finance initiative fall into a number of categories. These include financially free-standing projects where public sector involvement is limited to enabling the project to go ahead; services sold to the public sector where the cost is met wholly or mainly by charges from the private sector supplier to the public sector; and joint ventures, where the cost of the project is met partly from public funds and partly from other sources of income.

Housing Benefit (Taxation)

Mr. Robert McCartney: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what estimate he has made of the loss to the Exchequer in respect of housing benefit paid to private landlords which is not declared for income tax purposes; [40903]

(2) what amount and proportion of housing benefit paid to private landlords in the last year for which figures are available was paid in income tax. [40902]

Mr. Jack: No specific figures are available. The Inland Revenue places great emphasis on the detection of those who fail to declare taxable income. Payments of housing benefit are monitored as part of the Inland Revenue's normal compliance work.

Capital Gains Tax

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the likely consequences to (a) income tax yield and (b) capital gains yield in a full year in the medium term and long term of the introduction of a maximum rate of capital gains tax of 25 per cent. due to (i) straightforward revenue loss and (ii) behavioural effects. [42289]

Mr. Jack: For the capital gains tax effects of the specified measure, I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to the hon. Member for Edinburgh, South (Mr. Griffiths) on 27 October, Official Report, column 857. Behavioural effects would also be expected to lead to a small reduction in income tax yield, perhaps of the order of £50 million in a full year in the medium term.

It is not possible to produce reliable estimates for the long term.

Advance Corporation Tax

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the effect on revenue in 1996–97 and a full year of restricting the carry back of ACT to (a) three years, (b) two years and (c) one year. [42284]

Mr. Jack: The Exchequer effect of restricting ACT carry back from 1996–97 would depend on future levels of profits and dividends. On the basis of the economic forecasts in the 1995 summer economic forecast, the yield from restricting carry back to one, two or three years might be between £100 million and £200 million in a full year. The receipts effect in 1996–97 would be negligible. More detailed estimates cannot be made reliably.

Privatisation

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list those companies privatised since 1979 together with the debt write-off agreed by the Government prior to the sale. [42176]

Mr. Jack: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Durham, North–West (Ms Armstrong) on 23 March 1995, Official Report, columns 285–88.

Dr. Wright: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what has been the total expenditure of his Department since 1979 on advertising and promoting share offers in (a) gas, (b) electricity, (c) water and (d) telecommunications. [42102]

Mr. Jack: The costs have been as follows:

(a) Nil.

(b) £8 million (Genco2, 1995).

(c) Nil.

(d) £14.7 million on BT2 in 1991
£12.0 million on BT3 in 1993

Betting and Lottery Duty

Dr. Moonie: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how far his most recent projections of combined betting duty and lottery tax revenues for 1994–95 and 1995–96 exceed those projected in November 1994. [42333]

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: I will write to the hon. Member.

Specialist Advisers

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many (a) specialist advisers and (b) press or relations officers are employed by his Department; and what is the total annual salary bill for (a) and (b) above. [42328]

Mrs. Angela Knight: I will write to the hon. Member.

Development Banks

Miss Lestor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what is the total capital, paid and callable, and voting percentage in the African development bank, the Asian development bank, the Inter-American development bank and the European bank for reconstruction and development; [42345]

2) what co-financing of regional development bank projects there has been in 1993–95; for which projects; in which countries; and how much was donated per project. [42346]

Mrs. Angela Knight: My right hon. and noble Friend the Minister for Overseas Development will write to the hon. Lady.

Debt Relief

Miss Lestor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) which countries benefited from debt conversion in 1993, 1994 and 1995; how much was converted and at what rate of face value; of the conversions that took place what proportion were for environmental or social development projects etc; and if non-governmental organisations play a role in designing or implementing the conversions; [42347]

(2) which countries to which the United Kingdom was or is a major creditor benefited from Paris Club debt reduction arrangements in 1993, 1994 and 1995; by how much their debt was reduced; and which option of (a) debt reduction, (b) debt service reduction, (c) capitalisation, (d) moratorium interest and (e) commercial option was chosen in each case. [42348]

Mrs. Angela Knight: I will write to the hon. Lady.

Bilateral Debt Service

Miss Lestor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much bilateral debt service on Overseas Development Administration and Export Credits Guarantee Department debt was received in 1993 and 1994; and how much is due in 1995 and 1996. [42349]

Mrs. Angela Knight: My right hon. and noble Friend the Minister for Overseas Development will write to the hon. Lady.

Life Assurance (Taxation)

Mr. Matthew Banks: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has for the taxation of life assurance policyholders. [42361]

Mr. Jack: The Government have decided to defer the proposals for the reform of policyholder taxation, which were promised for inclusion in this year's Finance Bill, to allow a longer period for consultation with interested parties.

As a result, the system of certification of life insurance policies by the Inland Revenue, which was to be abolished with effect from 6 May 1996, will continue for the time being. It is intended that legislation to give effect to this proposal will be included in this year's Finance Bill.

The Government intend to publish next spring draft clauses and proposed secondary legislation aimed at giving effect to the proposed reform with a view to the inclusion of the clauses in a future Finance Bill. This would enable the Inland Revenue to consult interested parties on the proposed changes and allow those parties more time to assess their impact and prepare for them.

Share Schemes (Taxation)

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the cost in 1996–97 and a full year of reducing the qualifying period for full relief under profit sharing schemes and savings-related share options schemes from five to three years. [40782]

Mr. Jack [holding answer 31 October 1995]: The cost in 1996–97 of reducing the qualifying period for full tax relief under profit sharing schemes and introducing an optional three-year contract period for savings-related share option schemes is estimated at £15 million. The estimated full-year cost is £25 million.

European Courts

Sir Teddy Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to the reply of the Attorney-General of 30 October, c.12, relating to the decisions of the European Court of Justice and the European Court of Human Rights, if he will list those European Court decisions relating to responsibilities of his Department over the past two years; and if he will further indicate the estimated annual cost to public funds of each decision. [41212]

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory [holding answer 2 November 1995]: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer the Minister of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, my hon. Friend the Member for Boothferry (Mr. Davis), gave him on 7 November 1995.

Savings

Mr. Allen: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what level of (a) gross savings as a percentage of gross domestic product and (b) public spending as a percentage of gross domestic product in each year since 1979; and if he will make a statement on the trends indicated. [40908]

Mrs. Angela Knight: I regret that I cannot answer substantively before Parliament is prorogued. I will, however, write to the hon. Member.

Benefits

Mr. Robert McCartney: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list those social security benefits that are not taxable or are in certain instances exempt from taxation and the gross annual amounts that are not subject to tax; and if he will make a statement on the distinction between such differing tax appro[illegible]. [40906]

Mr. Jack: A list of taxable and non-taxable social security benefits appears in the table.

£ million

	Cost 1995–96
Non-taxable benefits
Pensioners' Christmas bonus	135
Sickness benefit[1]	348
Maternity allowance	35
War pension	1,247
Attendance allowance	2,089
Severe disability allowance	797
Disability living allowance	3,416
Disability working allowance	23
Industrial disablement benefits	659
Child benefit	6,327
One parent benefit	312
Family credit	1,682
Housing benefit[2]	10,996
Council tax benefit[2]	2,039
Social fund payments	226
Independent living fund	103
Other miscellaneous benefits[3]	8
Total	30,442
Taxable benefits (wholly or partly taxable)
Industrial death benefit	56
Invalid care allowance	609
Invalidity benefit[1]	7,713
Retirement pension	29,833
Widows benefits	1,021
Statutory sick pay	25
Statutory maternity pay	465
Income support	15,964
Unemployment benefit	1,335
Total	57,021

1. Figures given are in £millions and may not sum due to rounding.

[1] All figures given are in respect of 1995–96 planned expenditure (taken from the 1995 Social Security Departmental Report). The Table does not therefore show incapacity benefit which has now replaced Sickness benefit and Invalidity benefit.

[2] Includes additional local authority spending.

[3] Includes Guardians allowance, Child special allowance, miscellaneous industrial injury benefits, vaccine damage payments and payments to charitable organisations.

Annual expenditure on non-taxable benefits is estimated to be £30,446 million in 1995–96. Annual expenditure on taxable benefits, including those taxable in part, is estimated to be £57,021 million in 1995–96. Information is not held on the amount of taxable benefits not subject to tax.

A number of different considerations are taken into account by the Government in deciding on the tax treatment of social security benefits, for example, the purpose of the benefit in question, whether it is short or long-term, whether it is intended as a replacement for income from employment or self-employment, and whether it is subject to a means test.

Inheritance Tax

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many landowners who receive conditional exemption from inheritance tax as a result of access agreements own land covered by these agreements which is (a) registered and (b) unregistered. [41282]

Mr. Jack: As the inheritance tax conditional exemption provisions make no distinction between registered and unregistered land, the information requested is not available.

Unemployment

Mrs. Bridget Prentice: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) how many unemployed (A) 16 to 19, (B) 20 to 24, (C) 25 to 34, (D) 35 to 44, (E) 45 to 54 and (F) 55 to 65-year-olds in (1) Lewisham, East and (2) each of the London boroughs (a) receive job-related training or (b) are working either full time or part time while in education; and what is their average income; [41658]

(2) how many unemployed ethnic minority male (A) 16 to 19, (B) 20 to 24, (C) 25 to 34, (D) 35 to 44, (E) 45 to 54 and (F) 55 to 65-year-olds in (1) Lewisham, East and (2) each of the London boroughs (a) receive job-related training and (b) are working either full time or part time while in education; and what is their average income. [41655]

(3) how many unemployed males in (1) Lewisham, East and (2) each of the London boroughs (a) receive job-related training or (b) are working either full time or part time while in education; and what is their average income; [41651]

(4) how many unemployed male (A) 16 to 19, (B) 20 to 24, (C) 25 to 34,(D) 35 to 44, (E) 45 to 54 and (F) 55 to 64-year-olds in (1) Lewisham, East and (2) each of the London boroughs (a) receive job-related training and (b) and working either full time or part time while in eduction; and what is their average income. [41652]

Mrs. Angela Knight: Information about these groups is available from the labour force survey. However, the standard International Labour Organisation definitions used in that survey include all persons in job-related training, full-time and part-time work as in employment. No one in the groups listed is, therefore, classified as unemployed on the ILO definition.

Earnings

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many (a) females and (b) males working in (i) Great Britain and (ii) Northern Ireland in April 1995 earned less than £58.00 per week. [41585]

Mrs. Angela Knight: Estimated numbers and proportions of all employees on adult rates, whose pay was not affected by absence, are given in the following tables:

Proportion earning less than £58 per week

Per cent.

	Full-time	Part-time	Total
Male	0.1	35.7	2.3
Female	0.2	29.7	11.7

Estimated number earning less than £58 per week (millions)

	Full-time	Part-time	Total
Male	—	0.3	0.3
Female	—	1.2	1.2

April 1995 information for Northern Ireland is not yet available.

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) how many and what proportion of (a) manual, (b) non-manual and (c) full-time employees were earning less than (i) £161.60, (ii) £215.47 and (iii) £228.68 per week excluding overtime payments for (1) men, (2) women and (3) both sexes for (A) each county in England, (B) each county in Wales, (C) each London borough and Greater London as a whole and (D) each regional authority and borough in Scotland in April; [41583]

(2) how many and what proportion of (a) manual, (b) non-manual and (c) part-time employees were earning less than (i) £4.26 per hour, (ii) £5.69 per hour and (iii) £6.03 per hour excluding overtime payments for (1) men, (2) women and (3) both sexes by standard economic region for (A) Great Britain and (B) Northern Ireland and for (iv) each county in England, (v) each county in Wales, (vi) each London borough and Greater London as a whole and (vii) each regional authority and borough in Scotland in April; [41582]

(3) how many and what proportion of (a) manual, (b) non-manual and (c) full-time employees were earning less than (i) £161.60, (ii) £215.47 and (iii) £228.68 per week excluding overtime payments for (1) men, (2) women and (3) both sexes by standard economic region for (A) each Great Britain and (B) Northern Ireland in April. [41584]

Mrs. Angela Knight: I am placing the available information from the new earnings survey in the Members' Library. April 1995 information for Northern Ireland is not yet available.

Mortgage Brokers

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the regulatory bodies which oversee the work of mortgage brokers who give advice on mortgages. [41617]

Mrs. Angela Knight: Firms which sell, or offer advice on, mortgages which include an investment element, such as an endowment policy, have to be authorised by one of the Financial Services Act regulators, normally the Personal Investment Authority.

The banking ombudsman and the building societies ombudsman can also consider complaints about malpractice related to the selling of mortgages.

The mortgage lending industry is currently considering the possibility of producing a code of mortgage lending practice.

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the work of regulatory bodies which pursue cases of malpractice by mortgage brokers giving advice to the public. [41616]

Mrs. Knight: The performance of the Personal Investment Authority and other self-regulatory organisations is a matter for the Securities and Investment Board.

In 1993–94, mortgages accounted for 8.9 per cent. of preliminary complaints to the banking ombudsman, and 10.65 per cent. of the complaints accepted for full investigation. Cases varied from those who claimed that banks had given poor advice, to those who were concerned about mistakes in the calculations of repayments or final redemption figures.

In 1994–95, mortgages constituted 56 per cent. of the preliminary complaints received by the building societies ombudsman, and 62 per cent. of the cases which came to the ombudsman for resolution after exhausting the society's own internal complaints procedure.

WALES

NHS Trusts

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the directly managed units in the national health service in Wales and what progress each has made in moving to trust status. [41786]

Mr. Hague [holding answer 6 November 1995]: The three remaining directly managed units in Wales are:

Merthyr/Cynon health unit

Rhymney Valley health unit

Hensol health unit

Applications have been received for each unit to acquire trust status from April 1996. Three months public consultation on the applications commenced on 25 September.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to his answer of 6 November, Official Report, columns 642–43 if he will list which trusts provide (a) mental health and illness and (b) learning disabilities services for each health authority area in Wales classified as in whole or in part. [42303]

Mr. Hague: The answer is as follows:

Health authority	Trust
Clwyd	Wrexham Maelor Hospital NHS trust Glan Clwyd District General Hospital NHS trust Clwydian Community Care NHS trust[1]
Dyfed	Derwen NHS trust[1]
Gwent	Gwent Community Health NHS trust[1]
Gwynedd	Gwynedd Community Health NHS trust[1]
Mid Glamorgan	Rhondda Health Care NHS trust Bridgend and District NHS trust Merthyr Cynon Valley health unit (directly managed unit) Hensol hospital (directly managed unit)[1]
Powys	Powys NHS trust[1]
South Glamorgan	Cardiff Community Health Care trust[1] Llandough Hospital and Community NHS trust
West Glamorgan	Glan y Mor trust

[1] Denotes trusts providing learning disabilities services.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales pursuant to his answer of 6 November, Official Report, columns 642–43, if he will list any representations he has received from (a) Welsh Association of Health Authorities and Trusts and (b) from other sources in relation to trusts bidding together or separately to take over directly managed units, which themselves wish to be formed into a trust; and if he will make a statement. [42295]

Mr. Hague: Representations received to date on applications from trusts to merge with directly managed units in Wales are as follows:

(a) WAHAT—None;

(b) Others—

Rhodri Morgan Esq. MP

Allan Rogers Esq. MP

South Glamorgan Health Authority

Ceredigion and Mid Wales NHS Trust

Ms M. J. Henderson, Non-Executive Director, Mid Glamorgan Family Health Service Authority (independent comment)

South Glamorgan Homeopathic Group

Standing Conference of Voluntary Organisations for People with a Learning Disability in Wales

Rhondda Borough Council

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to his answer of 6 November, Official Report, columns 642–43, if he will list the different functions of each of the mixed function trusts and the different geographical areas to which they apply. [42304]

Mr. Hague: The current geographical areas for the different functions of the following NHS trusts are:

Llandough Hospital and Community NHS trust

Acute services mainly for the Cardiff and Vale of Glamorgan areas with the provision of community services restricted to the Vale of Glamorgan area, excluding Cowbridge and Llantwit Major.

Rhondda Healthcare NHS trust

Acute and community services for the Rhondda and Taff Ely area with drug and alcohol services provided to the whole of Mid Glamorgan.

Bridgend and District NHS trust

Acute, community and mental health services mainly for the Ogwr area and community services in the West Vale of Glamorgan.

Glan-y-Mor NHS trust

Acute services in Neath and Port Talbot areas and community and mental health services for West Glamorgan.

Cardiff Community Healthcare NHS trust

Community, mental health and learning disability services to the Greater Cardiff area and mental health services to the lower Rhymney Valley.

Gwent Community Health NHS trust

Community and mental health services to the county of Gwent and mental health services to the Rhymney Valley.

Welsh Language Board

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many schemes to promote the Welsh language have been submitted by public bodies under the Welsh Language Act 1993 and approved by the Welsh Language Board, and if he will make a statement. [42120]

Mr. Hague: The Welsh Language Board issued statutory notices to public bodies of the need to prepare schemes on 13 October 1995. No schemes have yet been submitted.

Mr. Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was the cost of running the Welsh Language Board in 1994–95; and if he will make a statement. [42121]

Mr. Hague: The board's running costs for 1994–95 amounted to £868,792.

Brecon and Radnor Community Health Council

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what representations he has had from the Brecon and Radnor community health council in relation to patient deregistration in relation to the incentive payments for meeting immunisation targets, and if he will make a statement. [42213]

Mr. Hague: I have received no such representations.

School Funding

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what representations he has had from county councils in Wales concerning funding levels for schools in 1996–97; and if he will make a statement. [42186]

Mr. Hague: I met Welsh local authority representatives at the Welsh Consultative Council on Local Government Finance in September to hear their views on local authority expenditure needs, including education, in 1996–97.

Decisions on capital and revenue resources for unitary authorities will be announced in the local authority capital and revenue settlements in December.

Mr. Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what recent representations he has received concerning schools funding in Clwyd. [42188]

Mr. Hague: No representations have been received within the last two months concerning schools funding in Clwyd.

Planning Policy Guidance

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what representations he has had concerning draft planning guidance from local authorities in Wales; and if he will make a statement. [42190]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: My right hon. Friend has received representations from the Assembly of Welsh Counties, eight county councils, 28 district councils and seven new county and county borough councils in Wales in response to the public consultation exercise on the draft planning policy guidance in Wales documents. Responses are currently being evaluated to inform the way forward.

Estatecare Division (Sale)

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to his answer of 6 November, Official Report, column 642, what consultations he has had with the chairman of the Welsh Health Common Services Authority concerning the advertisement for sale of the authority's Estatecare division in the Official Journal of the European Communities; and what were the dates of the relevant exchange of correspondence with the Official Journal authorities.

Mr. Hague: I have had no discussions on this issue with the chairman. Investigation confirmed that there was no requirement to advertise the sale in the Official Journal. The conduct of the privatisation process is a matter for the chief executive of the Welsh Health Common Services Authority, to whom operational questions should be addressed.

OSIRIS

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to his answer of 6 November, Official Report, columns 641–42, if he will give the estimated number of staff to be provided with personal computers under the OSIRIS contract. [42274]

Mr. Hague: The advertisement inviting proposals for OSIRIS estimated the number of staff to be provided with personal computers as about 1,900.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales pursuant to his answer of 6 November, Official Report, columns 641-42 if he will estimate the annualised sum payable for services under the OSIRIS as a percentage of the initial capital cost. [42296]

Mr. Hague: The information requested is commercially confidential.

Further Education Colleges

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what recent representations he has received regarding the funding of further education colleges; and if he will make a statement. [42184]

Mr. Hague: None, apart from the annual confidential advice from the Further Education Funding Council for Wales.

Apprenticeships

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many craft apprenticeships were made available in each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [42210]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: Information is not collected centrally on the number of apprenticeships made available, nor is any reliable information available on those in employment in craft and related occupations who are undertaking a trade apprenticeship.

The following table shows the information on apprenticeships available from the labour force survey.

Modern apprenticeships were introduced in Wales last year in manufacturing engineering. For 1995–96, training and enterprise councils have been given resources to support 3,400 modern apprenticeships—including up to 1,000 accelerated apprenticeships.

Number of people in employment in Wales who were in the process of completing any recognised trade apprenticeship (at the time of the survey)

Year	Number
Spring 1991	19,000
Spring 1992	14,000
Spring 1993	14,000
Spring 1994	10,000
Spring 1995	10,000

Powys Family Health Services Authority

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) what consultations he has had with the chairman of the Powys family health services authority concerning the deregistration of children from general practitioner patient lists for reasons arising from incentives paid for achieving immunisation rate targets; [42205]

(2) what consultations he has had with the chairman of the Powys family health services authority concerning the restoration to general practitioners' lists of families provisionally deregistered because of the financial impact on the practice of the immunisation targets set in the standard general practitioner contract. [42270]

Mr. Hague: I have had no such consultations.

European Regional Development Fund

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to his oral answer to the hon. Member for Conwy (Sir W. Roberts) of 30 October, Official Report, column 7, on which dates his Department received (a) a detailed letter and (b) reminders from the economic development department of South Glamorgan county council raising concerns about the threat to payments from the European regional development fund arising from the reduced grant in aid from his Department; and if he will make a statement. [42273]

Mr. Hague: South Glamorgan county council raised a number of matters concerning the operation of the structural funds, including WDA participation, in a letter to my Department of 16 November 1994. The council provided further information related to the WDA's corporate plan on 2 February and wrote further on 2 and 17 March and 24 April 1995. There were informal exchanges between officials and the authority on 10 January and 21 February 1995. My predecessor gave an assurance to the House on 20 March 1995 about the propriety of WDA involvement in structural fund programmes, a view which has since been accepted by the European Commission.

Ministerial Visits

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will visit (a) Queensferry fire service station and (b) Buckley fire station in Clwyd; and if he will make a statement. [42191]

Mr. Hague: No; the responsibility for the fire service and its organisation in Wales rests with my right hon. and learned Friend the Home Secretary.

Housing

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what representations he has had from district councils in Wales concerning the funding levels for housing in 1996–97; and if he will make a statement. [42187]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: My right hon. Friend and I met Welsh local authority representatives in the forum of the Welsh Consultative Council on Local Government Finance in September to hear their views on local authority expenditure needs, including housing, in 1996–97. Subsequently, I met local authority representatives in the Welsh Housing Consultative Committee.

Decisions on capital and revenue resources for unitary authorities will be announced in the local authority capital and revenue settlements in December.

Mr. Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many council houses have been sold in (a) 1994 and (b) so far in 1995, giving the cash units realised according to each housing authority. [42209]

Mr. Jones: The available information for 1994 is given in the following table. I will write to the hon. Member when the corresponding information for the first six months of 1995 has been finalised and will place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

Teachers (Costs)

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is his estimate of how many extra (a) primary school and (b) secondary school teachers could be obtained by additional expenditure of £40 million; and if he will make a statement. [42207]

Mr. Richards: The information requested is not readily available. I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my reply in the Library of the House.

Class Sizes

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many primary school pupils are taught in classes of 32 or more; and if he will make a statement. [42185]

Mr. Hague: Information is not collected centrally in respect of primary school classes of more than 32 pupils. I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to the hon. and learned Member for Montgomery (Mr. Carlile) on 3 November, Official Report, column 493.

Fire Service Reorganisation

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what further discussions he will have concerning the organisation and structure of the fire brigade in Wales in 1996–97; and if he will make a statement. [42189]

Mr. Hague: I have no plans to have further discussions concerning the organisation and structure of the fire service in Wales for 1996–97. The responsibility for the fire service in Wales rests with my right hon. and learned Friend the Home Secretary.

Immunisation Targets

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will carry out a study of the impact of the immunisation targets in the standard general practitioner contract on the supply of primary health care services in remote rural areas by single-handed practices. [42260]

Mr. Hague: I have no plans to do so.

Patient Lists (Removal)

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what action he will be taking with respect to the removal of (a) children of the Venables family and (b) other children whose parents did not wish to have them immunised by Dr. Goodall-Copestake of Presteigne, Powys, from his general practitioner's list; what discussion he has held with Powys family health services authority on this subject; if he will list similar cases where general practitioners have had children removed from their lists; and if he will make a statement. [42280]

Mr. Hague: I understand that Dr. Goodall-Copestake has withdrawn his request that the children be removed from his list. I have held no discussions with Powys FHSA on this issue nor am I aware of any similar case elsewhere.

Specialist Advisers

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many (a) specialist advisers and (b) press or public relations officers are employed by this Department; and what is the total annual salary bill for (a) and (b) above. [42329]

Mr. Hague: I will write to the hon. Member as soon as possible and place a copy of my reply in the Library of the House.

Freight Terminal, South Wales

Mr. Sweeney: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is his Department's involvement in proposals for a freight terminal in south Wales; and if he will make a statement. [42368]

Mr. Hague: The WDA and Welsh Office have received several applications for contributions towards the capital costs of developing freight terminals. In assessing these applications, the detailed requirements of the various schemes of assistance must be met, together with the overriding one of value for money. It is for the applicants to show that their proposals satisfy all these requirements. The effect on existing rail freight businesses is another important consideration.

The provision of such a facility and its nature are matters for the commercial and technical judgment of investors. There is no need for Welsh Office permission to build a terminal at any location subject to the usual planning considerations, but I have today directed South Glamorgan county council to prepare an environmental statement as part of its planning application for a proposed rail freight terminal at Wentloog, Cardiff.

Applications for ERDF assistance under the objective 2 programme for industrial south Wales have been made by Gwent county council, in respect of a development at Magor, and by South Glamorgan county council, in relation to a project at Wentloog. Both applications were submitted on 30 June 1995 and, inquiries have been completed, these will be considered by the appropriate technical group, a wide-ranging partnership comprising central and local government, the European Commission, agencies and other bodies. Decisions are expected in early 1996.

Applications in respect of the same sites have been submitted for freight facilities grant. This is an environmental grant designed to encourage the transport of freight by rail rather than road.

The Magor application was submitted on 21 June 1995 and, following a meeting with officials on 2 August, further material was received on 10 October. That material is being considered urgently but it is too early to say whether it will be sufficient to enable a decision on grant to be made.

An application for Wentloog was submitted on 20 October 1995 but further essential material is awaited from the applicants.

With regard to the applications made to the Welsh Development Agency, I have asked the agency to consider these proposals on their merits and to offer such support as it may determine is both justified and necessary. The agency will therefore be contacting the relevant bodies concerned to take forward discussion in this regard.

Education and Employment Departments

Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will make a statement on the work of (a) the Department for Education and (b) the Department of Employment since 1990. [38077]

Mr. Robin Squire: The Department for Education has aimed to raise general standards of educational attainment, to enable individuals to realise their full potential, to equip pupils and students for the responsibilities of adult life, to enhance the nation's international competitiveness and to enhance choice and diversity for parents and students.

Standards have been raised in schools. The national curriculum has been developed and revised. Regular assessment for seven and 14-year-olds has been introduced, and in 1994 many 11-year-olds were tested as part of a voluntary national pilot. The parents charter was published in 1991—updated in 1994—setting out the rights and responsibilities of parents in relation to their child's education. The Education (Schools) Act 1992 paved the way for performance tables, which have subsequently been published. A code of practice on the education of children with special educational needs came into effect in 1994. The Office for Standards in Education, Ofsted, was established in 1991 to carry out independent inspections of schools. Where a school is found at inspection to be failing to provide acceptable education, it becomes subject to special measures and is required to submit an action plan to the Secretary of State. In May 1995 the Secretary of State launched the improving schools programme which contains a wide range of measures designed to help raise standards of teaching and learning in all schools.

Choice and diversity have been enhanced. The number of grant-maintained schools have increased from 10 in January 1990 to more than 1,000 in 1995. The number of city technology colleges has increased from three to 15. The technology and colleges and language programme, launched in 1993, builds on CTC experience by helping existing maintained secondary schools to specialise in science, technology and mathematics or in modern foreign languages. We now have 101 technology colleges and six languages approved offering a new choice for parents across much of the country. The assisted places scheme continues to give the parents of academically able children the opportunity to send them to good independent secondary schools. In July 1995, the Secretary of State announced the new nursery voucher scheme for four-year-olds. The parents of every four-year-old will receive a voucher which they can exchange for three terms of good-quality nursery education in the state, private or voluntary sectors.

Participation in full and part-time education at age 16 has increased from 73 per cent. in 1990–91 to 79 per cent. in 1994–95, and at age 17 from 59 per cent. to 68 per cent. The percentage of 15-year-olds obtaining five or more GCSEs at grade C or better has increased from 34.5 per cent. in 1989–90 to 43.3 per cent. in 1993–94, while the percentage of young people obtaining two or more passes at GCE A/AS level has increased from 20.2 per cent. to 27.9 per cent.

In further education, participation of 16-year-olds in full-time education in schools and FE colleges has increased by about 12 per cent. since 1990. The Further and Higher Education Act 1992 released FE institutions from local authority control, giving them greater freedom to conduct their own affairs. Following the 1994 White Paper "Competitiveness: Helping Business to Win", links between FE institutions and local training and enterprise councils have been strengthened.

In higher education, participation rates have greatly increased, and the rates projected in the 1991 White Paper "Higher Education: A New Framework" have already virtually been met. To help maintain standards, the Higher Education Quality Council was established in 1993 and has continued with its programme of audits of HE institutions' quality assurance processes.

The Employment Department has aimed to support economic growth by promoting a competitive, efficient and flexible labour market.

Flexibility in the labour market has facilitated recovery from the recession. Unemployment has fallen by over 700,000 since December 1992 and stands at two percentage points below the average for the European Union. Employment and training measures to help unemployed people have been maintained at high levels despite the fall in unemployment. The effectiveness of measures has been continually monitored and new measures developed on a pilot basis, followed by evaluation and extension where they have proved successful.

The Employment Service was established as an agency in 1990. Over 1,000 jobcentres are clearly focused on their key objectives of getting people into work and paying them benefits accurately and promptly while they look for work. This year, ES has been set its highest ever target of placing 1.9 million unemployed people into jobs.

The Jobseekers Act 1995 provides for the introduction of the jobseeker's allowance. The main aims of the JSA are to improve the operation of the labour market by helping people in their search for work, to secure better value for money for the taxpayer and to improve the service to unemployed people themselves.

During the period since 1990, the Department continued with a step-by-step reform of industrial relations legislation. In 1994–95 the number of strikes was the lowest since records began in 1891.

The Department has continued to promote equality of opportunity in the labour market.

The Department has presented and promoted the United Kingdom's approach to labour market issues within the European Union and helped to increase the emphasis in EU social policy on improving competitiveness, reducing the cost of employment and increasing labour market flexibility.

Both Departments have supported the development of national targets for education and training, and have taken part fully in the Government's competitiveness and deregulation initiatives.

The Employment Department has introduced a series of reforms and measures to boost outputs from the training system. Since 1990, it has established 74 training and enterprise councils in England. The system of national vocational qualifications has been further developed to the point of 86 per cent. coverage of the working population. The Department has promoted and supported the investors in people standard. Nearly 20,000 employers are now committed to investors in people. In 1990, the Department introduced youth training as a replacement for the youth training scheme. It has successfully operated the YT guarantee. In 1991, it introduced youth credits, now available nationally. In 1993, training for work was introduced as a replacement for employment training and employment action. Modern and accelerated modern apprenticeships have been made nationally available. Incentives have been introduced for individuals to improve their skills through a range of measures including career development loans and tax relief for vocational training. The Department has provided help for small businesses to develop the skills of their work force through measures such as small firms training loans, 1994, and skills for small businesses, 1995.

Following the formation of the Department for Education and Employment in July 1995, a draft aim, objectives and values for the new Department have been published and rapid progress has been made towards integrating structures and policies.

Further details of the work of the Department for Education and the Employment Department are available in their annual departmental reports.

Grants

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment for what grant-giving funds her Department is responsible, requiring a private sector contribution, where the use of national lottery funds is not allowed to count towards that private sector portion. [38598]

Mr. Forth: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that my right hon. Friend gave on Tuesday 31 October, Official Report, columns 183–84.

Free School Meals

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what is the percentage of children who currently take or are entitled to free school meals in each school in Doncaster education authority; and what was the figure (a) 12 months and (b) 24 months ago. [39050]

Gateways to Learning Initiative

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what achievements have been made under the gateways to learning initiative programme; what yearly funding it has received to date; if Barnsley and Doncaster training and enterprise council is involved; and when the initiative will end. [39020]

Mr. Paice: The gateways to learning initiative has helped training and enterprise councils in England to promote the development of quality-assured adult careers guidance and information networks. Over 66,000 people have so far been helped to produce personal action plans relating to their education, training and career opportunities. By the time the initiative ends in December 1995 it will have received a total of £8 million in Department funding. The yearly expenditures are shown in the table.

Barnsley and Doncaster TEC joined the initiative in 1994 and its involvement is planned to end in December 1995.

Barnsley and Doncaster Training and Enterprise Council

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will make a statement on the results of her Department's last quality assessor's audit of Barnsley and Doncaster TEC; and on what date the next one is planned. [39438]

Mr. Paice: The last quality audit at Barnsley and Doncaster training and enterprise council was a compliance audit undertaken in August 1994 on its youth training provision.

The findings of the audit were that the TEC was in compliance with the Department's quality requirements. A number of areas were identified in which development was desirable to increase the overall effectiveness of the TEC's quality management systems. The TEC has since taken effective action to address each of these development needs.

Executive Agencies

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will list by grade the numbers of staff and their cost for (a) the financial year 1994–95 and (b) the estimated figures for the financial year 1995–96, for each executive agency for which she is responsible. [39524]

Mr. Robin Squire: This Department has two executive agencies, the Teachers Pensions Agency and the Employment Service.

The tables show staff by grade in each agency for 1994–95 and in 1995–96 with their associated costs. The 1994–95 staff figures for ES are at 1 April 1994 while those for TPA reflect the average over the year. The costs shown for 1994–95 are outturn figures.

The staff numbers for 1995–96 for TPA are actuals as at October 1995 and those for the Employment Service are actuals at 1 April 1995. It is expected that the final numbers for the Employment Service will be smaller. Staff costs for the financial year 1995–96 are expected to match the budget allocation as shown.

Vaccines

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will initiate a study as to whether the use of measles, mumps and rubella vaccines is related to learning difficulties in schoolchildren. [40062]

Mr. Forth: This is primarily a matter for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Health. I am advised that there are no plans to carry out such a study at present.

Mr. Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what consultation she, Ministers in her Department or departmental officials have had with her or their counterparts in the Department of Health in regard to the effect on school attendance of children vaccinated with measles and rubella inoculations over the past year. [40066]

Mr. Forth: Officials in this Department have been in close contact with colleagues in the Department of Health in preparation for, during and after the measles and rubella immunisation campaign on a variety of issues.

This Department collects and publishes information on pupils' attendance in schools only in terms of authorised and unauthorised absence. Any general health implications for pupils, following the immunisation programme, would be for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Health.

Unemployment

Sir Ralph Howell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what was the annual loss to the Exchequer of unemployed persons in (a) October 1992 and (b) at present, in current prices. [39907]

Mr. Forth: The total expenditure on unemployment related benefits in the United Kingdom was £9.3 billion in 1992–93 and is estimated to have been £9.5 billion in 1994–95, the latest year for which figures are available.

Sir Ralph Howell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what is the basis for the figures supplied to the Employment Committee by the Employment Department on 18 November 1994, showing the overall cost of unemployment to be £13.2 billion in 1992–93 and £14.3 billion in 1993–94; and if she will give a figure for 1994–95 on the same basis. [41376]

Mr. Forth: The figures provided to the Employment Committee were not an estimate of the cost of unemployment, but were simply the total public expenditure on items requested by the Committee. The corresponding figure for 1994–95 is £13.5 billion.

Remploy

Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what proposals to sell Remploy are being considered by Ministers. [40390]

Mr. Forth: None. Remploy is already a private company limited by guarantee, although it receives a Government grant to compensate it for the costs of employing severely disabled people.

Ministerial Transport

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what has been the cost of ministerial transport in each of the past five years; what allowance has been paid to Ministers who use their own vehicles; and what has been the cost in each of the past five years. [40742]

Mr. Paice: Ministerial transport is provided to the Department by the government car service and no allowances have been paid to Ministers who use their own vehicles. The information requested, in respect of both the former Employment and Education Departments, is contained in the following table:

Year	Employment department costs £	Education department costs £
1990–91	171,198	134,191
1991–92	195,075	241,215
1992–93	216,352	217,197
1993–94	238,134	288,121
1994–95	236,062	274,377

1. The DFE figure for 1990–91 does not include the cost of using GCS to transport ministerial boxes.

2. During the five-year period, each of the former Departments had four ministerial cars on hire, except for the financial years 1991–92 and the first four months of 1994–95 when the Department for Education had five cars.

School Leavers

Mr. Rooker: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment, pursuant to her answer of 24 October, Official Report, columns 611–12, if she will make a statement on the reasons why her Department no longer collects information on school leavers in the maintained and independent sector. [40648]

Mr. Robin Squire: The information on school leavers was derived from the school examinations survey. The survey collected examinations and school leavers data from a sample of pupils in all secondary maintained and independent schools.

The decision to abandon the SES was taken as part of a move towards securing the Department's examination statistics directly from the examination boards and groups. The new source provides more comprehensive and accurate figures, although it cannot identify school leavers.

There were significant cost savings to be realised, in particular in the compliance cost to schools, once the SES had been discontinued. These savings helped offset the added burden on schools arising from checking and providing the data to be published in the school and college performance tables.

Jobfinder's Grant

Mrs. Liddell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many applicants for the jobfinder's grant have been disallowed on the ground that time spent by lone parents on an order book does not count towards the qualifying period for the grant. [40642]

Mr. Forth: I have been asked to reply.

Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Employment Service under its chief executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from D. J. Lifton to Mrs. Helen Liddell, dated 8 November 1995:

The Secretary of State had asked me, in the absence of the Chief Executive, to reply to your question about the Jobfinder's Grant.

We do not maintain records of lone parents claiming benefits by way of an order book who apply for a Jobfinder's Grant.

The grant is targeted, in the main, at people who have been required to actively seek work for two years or more. It, therefore, precludes payments to lone parents who have received their benefit by means of an order book, since many people receiving benefit in this way will not be looking for work.

I hope this is helpful.

Postgraduate Student Awards

Mr. Bryan Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) how many discretionary awards were made to students on postgraduate courses by each local education authority in the last three years for which figures are available; and what was the total level of spending on discretionary awards to postgraduate students by each local education authority in the last three years for which figures are available in (a) cash terms (b) current prices; [40756]

(2) what is the total level of discretionary awards made to postgraduate students in the last three years for which figures are available in (a) cash terms and (b) current prices.

Mr. Forth: The information requested is given in the following table.

Further Education Colleges

Mr. Bryan Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many colleges in the further education sector offered provision in (a) sciences, (b) construction and (c) engineering in the last three years for which figures are available; and if she will list them (i) individually and (ii) by region. [40755]

Mr. Paice: Details of the type of provision available in further education colleges are matters for the Further Education Funding Council. I am therefore asking the council's chief executive to write to the hon. Member.

Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans the Government have to allow unincorporated colleges to apply directly to the Further Education Funding Council for their schedule 2 funding. [41236]

Mr. Paice: In accordance with the commitment in the "Competitiveness: Forging Ahead" White Paper, Cm 2867, the Government are considering the removal of the requirement that potential new further education providers must gain the sponsorship of an existing college before being able to receive FEFC funding.

Jobseeker's Allowance

Mr. Ian McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what was the original estimated cost of implementing the jobseeker's allowance, giving a breakdown of expenditure; and what is the current estimated cost of implementing the jobseeker's allowance, giving a breakdown. [40840]

Mr. Forth: In November 1994 the one-off administrative costs of implementing the jobseeker's allowance were estimated at £270 million. The main cost areas were:

	£ million
Information technology and allied costs	110
Training	70
Premises	45
Project management and Communications	45

Revisions to these estimates are being concerned as part of this year's public expenditure survey.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what will be the final cost of installing the new computer system designed to implement the jobseeker's allowance. [39675]

Mr. Forth [holding answer 3 November 1995]: Two new computer systems will support the implementation of the jobseeker's allowance. The labour market system will replace current systems in ES jobcentres used to support vacancy filling and advisory work. The estimated cost of developing and installing this system is around £70 million.

The JSA payments system is being developed to pay JSA, by girocheque or automated credit transfer. The estimated cost of implementing JSAPS is about £80 million. This figure covers expenditure which has already been incurred and planned expenditure to March 1999.

Mr. Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what will be the cost of delaying the introduction of the jobseeker's allowance by six months; and what will be the interim position of those claiming the allowance. [39671]

Mr. Forth [holding answer 3 November 1995]: The cost of delaying the introduction of jobseeker's allowance by six months is estimated to be £25 million to £30 million, in terms of overall benefit expenditure.

People who are unemployed between April and October 1996 will continue to receive unemployment benefit or income support. When JSA is introduced in October 1996, existing claimants will be moved to JSA. There will be transitional arrangements to protect such claimants against cash loss. Those for whom benefit was payable immediately before 8 April 1996 will be entitled to a maximum of 12 months' contributory benefit. Those for whom benefit was not payable at that time will be entitled to a maximum of six months' contributory benefit.

Mr. Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what has been the cost of using outside consultant agencies in reviewing the implementation of the jobseeker's allowance. [39672]

Mr. Forth [holding answer 3 November 1995]: An external review of the project to implement the jobseeker's allowance was carried out earlier this year. The review cost was £88,000 including VAT.

Mr. Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment when the computer systems designed to implement the jobseeker's allowance will be ready. [39674]

Mr. Forth [holding answer 3 November 1995]: The computer systems designed to implement jobseeker's allowance will be ready for the introduction of jobseeker's allowance in October 1996.

Mr. Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what was the original timetable for the implementation of the jobseeker's allowance; what is the current timetable; and if she will make a statement. [39678]

Mr. Forth [holding answer 3 November 1995]: It was originally planned that jobseeker's allowance would be introduced in April 1996. It was clear in May 1995 that the implementation as originally planned would entail risks to the smooth delivery of the new service to unemployed people. We therefore decided to introduce it in October 1996 and we are holding to that timetable.

Mr. Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what considerations led to the decision to reduce unemployment benefit in April 1996 and introduce jobseeker's allowance in October 1996. [39670]

Mr. Forth [holding answer 3 November 1995]: Unemployment benefit is not to be reduced in April 1996.

The Government have always been concerned to ensure that implementation of jobseeker's allowance, which is a large and complex undertaking, should not entail risks to the smooth delivery of services to unemployed people. We therefore took the decision to defer implementation of jobseeker's allowance until October 1996 when it became evident that implementation in April 1996 would have involved an unacceptable level of risk.

Youth Training

Mr. Ian McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many (a) fatal, (b) major and (c) minor accidents took place on youth training schemes in each region in (i) July to September 1993, (ii) January to March 1994, (iii) April to June 1994, (iv) July to September 1994, (v) October to December 1994, (vi) January to March 1995, (vii) April to June 1995 and (viii) July to September 1995; what were the numbers of accidents on training for work for the same periods. [41128]

Mr. Paice: Table A gives the accident figures for youth training. Table B gives the accident figures for training for work in each English region for the periods stated.

Notes:

(a) Department for Education and Employment figures for trainees have been complied on a similar basis to those prepared by the Health and Safety Executive for employed persons. However, the Department's figures include a number of accidents to trainees in educational establishments and road traffic accidents which would not have been reportable to the Health and Safety Executive had the individuals been employed.

(b) Major injuries are classified according to the severity criteria laid down in the Reporting of Injuries Disease and Dangerous Occurrences Regulations 1985.

(c) North-west region and north-west (Greater Manchester) region were restructured in the quarter ending 30 June 1994 and became north-west region and Merseyside region.

(d) The accident figures for the period July to September 1995 are not yet available.

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will list for each training and enterprise council the number of youth training places available in 1993–94, 1994–95, the estimated number in 1995–96 and the total budget for youth training in each TEC for the same years. [41476]

Mr. Paice [holding answer 3 November 1995]: Information on the number of places available on youth training for each training and enterprise council is not available.

The following table shows for each TEC in England:

The number of trainees on youth programmes, excluding prototype modern apprenticeships, at the end of March 1994 and March 1995.

Youth programme budgets, including modern apprenticeships from 1994, for the years 1993–94, 1994–95, and 1995–96.

A comparable figure for the number of trainees on youth programmes for 1995–96 will not be available until early 1996–97.

The responsibility for TECs in Wales lies with my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales.

Access to Work Scheme

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what are the estimated annual social security benefit savings from the access to work scheme in helping disabled people to obtain or remain in employment. [39991]

Mr. Forth [holding answer 1 November 1995]: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Employment Service under its chief executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from M. E. G. Fogden to Ms Liz Lynne, dated 8 November 1995:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question about social security benefit savings resulting from the Access to Work programme.

We do not calculate the social security benefit savings accruing from disabled people making use of the Access to Work programme in order to take up work. Access to Work is available to help unemployed, employed and self-employed people to take up or to stay in work. Employed people would continue to receive any in-work benefits they were entitled to as well as Access to Work help. Help is given based on ability to work rather than on entitlement to a benefit so the pattern of benefit savings, if any, will be dependent on the circumstances of the individual case.

I am sorry I cannot be more helpful.

Training and Enterprise Councils

Mr. Robert Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what proportion of the budget for each training and enterprise council in England is spent on administration costs. [41667]

Mr. Paice: The list shows administration costs as a percentage of turnover for each of the training and enterprise councils in England. The information has been extracted from TECs' statutory accounts for 1993–94. I am unable to provide information for 1994–95 as TECs' statutory accounts are not yet in the public domain.

Many TECs do not draw down all their available budgets, so my Department does not calculate administrative costs as a percentage of budget.

Mr. Pickthall: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what steps she is taking to reduce overlapping of agriculture training courses in the north-west. [41510]

Mr. Paice: Colleges are autonomous institutions and it is for them to decide which courses to offer.

Shaw Trust

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment when she received the letter dated 27 October from the director general of the Shaw Trust about the potential of the trust to employ extra disabled people; what assessment she has made of offsetting flowbacks to the Treasury from the funding of such extra places; and if she will make a statement on what action she proposes to take following the receipt of the letter. [41374]

Mr. Forth: I have received no such letter. However, a letter on the subject to which my right hon. Friend refers was sent to Lord Henley, who received it on 30 October. He is considering it and will reply shortly.

Education Expenditure (Hampshire)

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how much was spent in total on education in Hampshire in each of the past 25 years at constant prices. [41457]

Mr. Robin Squire: The following table shows expenditure by Hampshire local education authority from 1970–71 and 1993–94, the latest year for which figures are available. These figures have not been adjusted for any changes of function.

1. Figures relate to full-time teachers in the maintained nursery, primary, secondary and special sectors as at 31 March of each year.
2. Figures include "on costs" in respect of employers' national insurance and superannuation contributions.
3. Average teacher salaries for 1975 were not available in requested format.
4. 1975 figures include "on costs" for men over 18 years old.
5. 1994 data are the latest available.
6. Real term figures are expressed in 1994 prices.
7. Salaries have been rounded to the nearest £100.

Pre-16 Students

Mr. Bryan Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Education Employment what representations she has received regarding the education sponsored by Education Otherwise of pre-16 students in colleges of further education; and if she will make a statement. [41804]

Mr. Paice: The Secretary of State is aware that some parents who have exercised their right to educate their children otherwise than at school have sought places for them at further education colleges. It is for the individual FE college to determine whether or not to agree the placement, bearing in mind FEFC advice that pupils of compulsory school age should be admitted only in exceptional circumstances.

Mr. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what is her Department's estimate of (a) the number of students and (b) the number of local authorities involved in the education, sponsored by Education Otherwise, of pre-16 students in colleges of further education. [41805]

Mr. Paice: This information is not collected centrally.

Training for Work

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will list for each training and enterprise council the number of training for work starts for (a) 1993–94 (b) 1994–95, the estimated number in 1995–96 and the total budget for training for work in each TEC for the same years. [41477]

Mr. Paice [holding answer 3 November 1995]: The number of training for work starts for (a) 1993–94 and (b) 1994–95, the planned number for 1995–96 and the total budget for training for work for the same years for each training and enterprise council in England are listed in the following table. The responsibility for TECs in Wales lies with my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales.

Employers' Liability (Compulsory Insurance) Act 1969

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what representations he has received since 1 January 1994 regarding the workings of the Employers' Liability (Compulsory Insurance) Act 1969; and if he will make a statement. [42230]

Sir Paul Beresford: I have been asked to reply.

Eighteen representations have been received by myself and colleagues at the former Department of Employment about various aspects of this Act since 1 January 1994. My Department has also received 71 responses to the consultative document issued by the Department of Employment on 27 April 1995 as part of a review of the Act. I am currently considering these responses.

Jobcentres

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many jobcentres have closed since 1990 where the nearest alternative office for signing on is more than five miles away. [41679]

Mr. Forth: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Employment Service under its chief executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from M. E. G. Fogden to Mr. Gordon Prentice, dated November 1995:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question about how many Jobcentres have closed since 1990 where the nearest alternative office is more than five miles away.

The number of Jobcentres (taken to include separate Benefit Offices) is 51 of which 20 were only open part time.

I hope this is helpful.

Moorfoot, Sheffield Office

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans she has to recruit and fill posts at Moorfoot, Sheffield , what plans she has for the training division based at Moorfoot, and if he will make a statement. [42026]

Mr. Forth: Posts in the Moorfoot, Sheffield office of the Department for Education and Employment will be filled using normal departmental vacancy filling mechanisms. It is not envisaged that there will be a need for external recruitment at this time.

The training, enterprise and education directorate of the former Employment Department was largely based in Moorfoot, Sheffield. It has been reorganised following the creation of the new Department for Education and Employment. It now forms part of the further and higher education and youth training, employment and lifetime learning, strategy, international and analytical services and operations directorates of the new DFEE.

Schools (Consultation)

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she has drawn up a code of good practice on consultation on lines recommended by the efficiency scrutiny on the administration burden on schools. [42025]

Mr. Robin Squire: My officials are planning to draft a code of practice on lines recommended in the scrutiny report and seek views on the usefulness of such a code.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she has accepted the recommendation of the efficiency scrutiny on the administration burden on schools that periods of consultation should last at least 10 weeks, not including school holidays. [42028]

Mr. Squire: I consider that this is a commendable ideal for the Department, but one that it is not always possible to achieve. Other demands such as the parliamentary and legislative timetable, sometimes necessitate shorter consultation periods if we are to avoid long delays in Government action. The recommendation acknowledged this.

"Just the Job"

Mr. Rathbone: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will make a statement on the distribution of the booklet "Just the Job" (a) in East Sussex and (b) elsewhere in the United Kingdom. [42119]

Mr. Forth: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Employment Service under its chief executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from D. J. Lifton to Mr. Tim Rathbone, dated 8 November 1995:

The Secretary of State has asked me, in the absence of the Chief Executive, to reply to your question about distribution of the Just the Job booklet.

The Just the Job booklet describes the range of services provided by the Department for Education and Employment to unemployed people through Employment Service Jobcentres (ESJs). It is freely available in ESJs throughout the United Kingdom, including all those in East Sussex.

I hope this is helpful.

European Structural Funds

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment, pursuant to her answer of 2 November, Official Report, column 459, how much of the sum applied for has been paid to the Government in (a) 1994 and (b) 1995; and in respect of the amount applied for in 1994 when was the latest date on which the Commission made a payment to the Government. [42302]

Mr. Forth: The amount paid so far to Government programmes under ESF objective 3 for (a) 1994 is £175,040,117; and (b) 1995 is £95,643,847.

The 1994 final claim for objective 3 was received from the Commission on 22 September 1995.

SOLOTEC

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what additional financial provision has been made by SOLOTEC for talking on responsibility for the London boroughs of Greenwich and Lewisham. [42258]

Mr. Paice: This is a matter for the board of SOLOTEC. I understand that the board regularly reviews the financial contribution it can make to Greenwich and Lewisham.

"Going GM" Conferences

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans her Department has to hold further "Going GM" conferences; and what financial provision has been made for further conferences. [36168]

Mr. Robin Squire: My officials are planning to hold another eight "Going GM" conferences before the end of December, at an estimated total cost to the Department of about £100,000. Plans for conferences after that date have not yet been decided.

Nursery Voucher Scheme

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what sums have been allocated to meet the administration costs incurred by (a) the DFEE, (b) local authorities (c) pre-school provider institutions, (d) the contractor appointed to administer the scheme and (e) overall, in phase 1 of the pre-school voucher scheme. [42023]

Mr. Robin Squire: The financial details of the Government's contract with Capita Managed Services Ltd. to administer the nursery voucher scheme are commercially confidential.

No detailed estimate of the other administration costs has been made.

GCSE Scores

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will provide the GCSE average point scores per pupil in 1995 for each individual 20th group, and also for the cumulative 20th groups, of all 15-year-old pupils when ranked according to their average point scores, where A* = 7 for (a) all such pupils in England, (b) all such pupils of the local education authority-maintained sector only, excluding those of grant-maintained schools, (c) all such pupils of the grant-maintained sector only, (d) all such pupils of the whole maintained sector only, excluding those of independent schools and (e) all such pupils of the independent sector only. [42202]

Mr. Robin Squire: The information for 1995 is not yet available. I will write to the hon. Member as soon as this information is available and place a copy in the Library.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will provide for all 15-year-old pupils in (a) England, (b) the local education authority maintained, (c) grant-maintained and (d) independent sectors, on the same basis as in the annual school performance tables, and also by gender (i) their GCSE average point score where A* = 7 and where A* = 8 and (ii) the percentage achieving (1) at least five GCSEs at Grades A* = C, (2) at least one GCSE at grade C or higher, (3) at least five GCSEs at grade G or higher and (4) at least one GCSE at grade G or higher. [42204]

Mr. Squire: I will write to the hon. Member as soon as possible and place a copy of the answer in the Library.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will provide the average GCSE point scores, where A* = 7 per 15-year-old pupil by local education authority and for 1995, and also by gender in each case for (a) the local education authority-maintained sector only, (b) the grant-maintained sector only and (c) the whole maintained sector; and if he will state the averages in each case for each standard Department for Education region. [42203]

Mr. Squire: The information for 1995 is not yet available. I will write to the hon. Member as soon as this information is available and place a copy in the Library.

Education (School Premises) Regulations 1981

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what were the recommendations of the review of the Education (School Premises) Regulations 1981 announced on 2 October 1990, and if she will place a copy of the report of the review in the Library. [42232]

Mrs. Gillan: The Under-Secretary, my hon. Friend the Member for Hornchurch (Mr. Squire), set out the conclusions of the review of the Education (School Premises) Regulations 1981 on 14 July, Official Report, columns 829-30. Our detailed proposals for putting those conclusions into effect are set out in the draft regulations and draft circular put out to consultation on 14 August.

Copies of both documents have been placed in the Library.

Labour Statistics

Mrs. Bridget Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) how many (A) 16 to 19, (B) 20 to 24, (C) 25 to 34, (D) 35 to 44, (E) 45 to 54 and (F) 55 to 65-year-olds in (i) Lewisham, East and (ii) each of the London boroughs are (a) in full-time employment, (b) in part-time employment, (c) in full-time education, (d) in part-time education, (e) on a Government training scheme, (f) on another type of training scheme and (g) unemployed; [41657]

(2) how many males in (i) Lewisham, East and (ii) each of the London boroughs are (a) in full-time employment, (b) in part-time employment, (c) in full-time education, (d) in part-time education, (e) on a Government training scheme, (f) on another type of training scheme and (g) unemployed; [41653]

(3) how many males in (A) 16 to 19, (B) 20 to 24, (C) 25 to 34, (D) 35 to 44, (E) 45 to 54 and (F) 55 to 64-year-olds in (i) Lewisham, East and (ii) each of the London boroughs are (a) in full-time employment, (b) in part-time employment, (c) in full-time education, (d) in part-time education, (e) on a Government training scheme, (f) on any other type of training scheme and (g) unemployed; [41656]

(4) how many ethnic minority male (A) 16 to 19, (B) 20 to 24, (C) 25 to 34, (D) 35 to 44, (E) 45 to 54 and (F) 55 to 65-year-olds in (i) Lewisham, East and (ii) each of the London boroughs are (a) in full-time employment, (b) in part-time employment, (c) in full-time education, (d) in part-time education, (e) on a Government training scheme, (f) on another type of training scheme and (g) unemployed. [41654]

Mrs. Angela Knight: Information at area level on employment, educational status, training, unemployment and ethnic origin can be obtained from the labour force survey, but not at the full level of detail requested. The available information can be accessed through the NOMIS database by the House of Commons Library.

1-2-1

Mr. Rooney: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many unemployed people have been referred to 1-2-1 by Employment Service counsellors since April in each region and in Great Britain as a whole; how many attended and completed 1-2-1; what were the outcomes of the participants; how many had their income support reduced for not attending or failing to complete their attendance on 1-2-1; if she will break down this information by (a) ethnicity, (b) disability and (c) gender; and if she will make a statement. [41915]

Mr. Forth: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Employment Service under its chief executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from M. E. G. Fogden to Mr. Terry Rooney, dated 7 November 1995:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question about the 1-2-1 interview programme.

Unfortunately the information is not available in the exact form you require as we do not collect it by ethnic origin, disability or gender. I have set out the remainder of the information you requested in the attached table (Annex 1).

It may be helpful if I explain that 1-2-1 was piloted in 1994/95 and introduced nationally from April 1995. It provides help for 18–24 year olds who have been unemployed for a year. Attendance is mandatory for people who decline other offers of help and it therefore takes the place of Jobplan Workshops for this client group.

1-2-1, which offers 95,000 places in 1995/96, provides a series of caseload interviews with an Employment Service adviser. By using a caseload approach advisers are able to offer clients concentrated help and information. The figures in the table show that 1-2-1 has proved extremely successful in achieving job placings and other positive outcomes.

For those who 1-2-1 is unable to help a linked four week course, Workwise, provides further help with job search and confidence building. Workwise is also made available immediately, in preference to 1-2-1, for those clients to whom it is more appropriate.

I hope this is helpful.

Unemployment Benefit

Mr. Ian McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what has been the total amount paid out in unemployment benefit, by region, since May 1979. [40836]

Mr. Roger Evans: I have been asked to reply.

The table provides estimates for the years 1991–92 to 1994–95. Estimates for earlier years could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

	1991–92	1992–93	1993–94	1994–95
England	1,370	1,531	1,428	1,069

Scotland	152	154	153	137
Great Britain	1,604	1,760	1,649	1,260

1. Estimates have been calculated using the expenditure data shown in the 1995 social security departmental report and allocated to regions by use of a 5 per cent. sample of unemployed claimants.
2. Figures given are in £ millions.

Mr. McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what has been the total amount paid out in unemployment benefit, by region, since May 1979, at 1995 prices. [40837]

Mr. Evans: I have been asked to reply.

The table provides estimates for the years 1991–92 to 1994–95. Estimates for earlier years could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

	1991–92	1992–93	1993–94	1994–95

Notes:
1. Estimates have been calculated using the expenditure data shown in the 1995 social security departmental report and allocated to regions by use of a 5 per cent. sample of unemployed claimants.
2. Figures given are in real terms 1994–95 prices and are given in £ millions.

Employment-related Benefits

Mr. Ian McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) what has been the total amount paid out in employment-related benefits, by region, since May 1979; [40838]

(2) what has been the total amount paid out in employment-related benefits by region since May 1979, at 1995 prices. [40839]

Mr. Roger Evans: I have been asked to reply. I will write to the hon. Member shortly.

Special Educational Needs Appeals

Mr. Bernie Grant: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) how many special educational needs appeals have been lodged with the Special Educational Needs Tribunal from September 1994 to date; [42263]

(2) how many special education needs appeals have been heard from September 1994 to date; [42264]

(3) how many special educational needs appeals have been withdrawn or settled prior to a hearing taking place; [42265]

(4) how many appellants whose appeals were heard received written confirmation of the outcome of their appeal (a) within four months of the date of lodging their appeal, (b) within between four and five months of the date of lodging their appeal, (c) within between five and six months of the date of lodging their appeal, (d) within between six and seven months of the date of lodging their appeal, (e) within between seven and eight months of the date of lodging their appeal and (f) over eight months of the date of lodging their appeai. [42266]

Mr. Forth: The Department does not maintain detailed records about appeals to the Special Educational Needs Tribunal, which is an independent non-departmental public body. I have therefore asked the president of the tribunal, Mr. Trevor Aldridge QC, to write to the hon. Member.

Information about the numbers of appeals to the tribunal will be available in the president's annual report to the Secretary of State, which will be placed in the Library of the House when it is published.

Nursery Education (Hampshire)

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what is the number and percentage of three and four-year-olds attending nursery and primary schools in Hampshire in each of the last five years. [41846]

Mr. Robin Squire: The information requested is shown in the table.

Pupils under five years of age[1] in maintained nursery and primary schools in Hampshire local education authority area 1991–1995

Position as at January each year

Year	Pupils	Pupils as a percentage of the population[2]
1991	8,166	20
1992	8,672	20
1993	8,988	21
1994	15,098	36
1995	15,622	37

[1] Excludes pupils who became five years of age by 1 January.
[2] Number of pupils under five years of age expressed as a percentage of the estimated population aged three and four at 31 December in the previous year.

Surplus School Places

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what are the current numbers and percentages of surplus places in each local education authority, in the rank order according to the proportion of surplus places, in (a) secondary schools, (b) primary schools, (c) special schools and (d) grant-maintained schools.

Mrs. Gillan: For the latest available figures, I refer the hon. Member to the reply my hon. Friend gave the Member for Liverpool, Walton (Mr. Kilfoyle) on 20 February 1995, Official Report, columns 38–43.

International Year of Lifelong Learning

Ms Corston: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what arrangement are in hand for the launch in England of the International Year of Lifelong Learning 1996. [40388]

Mr. Forth: A conference to launch the European Year of Lifelong Learning in the United Kingdom will be held in Scotland during early 1996.

Education Expenditure

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) what is the amount budgeted in the current financial year for education in the overall budget for her Department; and if she will break it down into its principal elements; [42103]

(2) if she will estimate the cost of increasing the education element of the budget for her Department by the rate of inflation, indicating the totals for (a) education and (b) employment spending. [42146]

Mr. Robin Squire: I will write to the hon. Member as soon as possible and place copies of my reply in the Library.

HEALTH

Cash Limits

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what were the original capital cash limits given for each region in each of the last three years. [37925]

Mr. Sackville: The original regional capital cash limits for the financial years 1993–94, 1994–95 and 1995–96 are set out in the tables.

From 1994–95, the number of regional health authorities reduced from 14 to eight as a number of authorities merged.

The amount of NHS capital allocated to RHAs reduced during this period because of the increase in NHS trusts, which receive capital through the external financing limit mechanism. The slight decrease in the overall capital planning totals over this period reflected reduced demand for capital from health authorities and trusts as they reviewed their plans in response to the introduction of capital charging. Receipts from land sales—of the order of £200 million a year—which can be used to fund capital investment are additional to these figures.

Trent and South Thames had negative initial cash limits for 1995–96 because the forecast land sale receipts in each of these regions exceeded the anticipated capital spend. The nil cash limits of South West and North West are a reflection of the original forecasts of receipts on spending being broadly level.

NHS Trusts

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will itemise payments made in each NHS trust to (a) chairs, (b) non-executive directors, (c) chief executives and (d) board directors for 1993–94 and 1994–95, by region. [37945]

Mr. Malone: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave the hon. Member for Don Valley (Mr. Redmond) on 16 February, at column 808 for information regarding chairmen and chief executives of national health service trusts in respect of 1993–94. Information will be placed in the Library on the remuneration of executive and non-executive directors of NHS trusts, as extracted from their annual accounts for 1993–94. The payments listed represent remuneration in respect of the total gross salary, bonus payments, monetary value of benefits in kind, taxable expenses allowances and compensation payments in relation to the offices described—rather than to an individual. Information for 1994–95 is not yet available.

Cash Limits and Running Costs (OPCS)

Mr. Sweeney: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the proposed changes to the cash limits and running costs for the OPCS for 1995–96. [42226]

Mr. Sackville: Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary supplementary estimate, the cash limit for class XII, vote 4—Office of Population Censuses and Surveys—will be increased by £2,666,000 from £35,775,000 to £38,441,000 and the running costs limit of OPCS will be increased by £1,702,000 from £49,694,000 to £51,396,000. This reflects the take-up of £1,281,000 for running costs and £635,000 for capital under the end-year flexibility arrangements announced by my right hon. Friend the Chief Secretary to the Treasury on 13 July 1995, at columns 776-82. It also reflects an increased running cost provision of £406,000 and increased capital provision of £1,780,000 in the national health service central register area for work on the Department of Health's existing number replacement project. Also included is an increased running cost provision of £15,000 and capital provision of £22,000 for the processing and production of abortion statistics. The increase in capital costs will be met from within the existing resources of the Department of Health, class XII, vote 3. There is also a capital provision of £750,000 for work on a building to house the London staff of the new Office of National Statistics. The increase will be offset by savings and a claim on the reserve and will not therefore add to the planned total of public expenditure.

Health Spending

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list, for each year since 1991, total health spending, expressed as a percentage of gross domestic product, for (a) the UK, (b) the EU, (c) the OECD and (d) for each OECD country. [41992]

Mr. Sackville: The table shows total United Kingdom expenditure on the national health service expressed as a percentage of gross domestic product for each year since 1990–91. Information on expenditure on health in other countries is not available on a comparable basis.

United Kingdom NHS expenditure as a percentage of gross domestic product

Year	Expenditure (£ million)	Proportion of GDP percentage
1990–91	29,231	5.2
1991–92	33,061	5.7
1992–93	36,209	6.0
1993–94	37,331	5.8
1994–95	39,093	5.8

The national health service share of GDP in 1978–79 was 4.7 per cent.

Primary Health Care Staff

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to assist the recruitment of primary health care staff in deprived areas. [42032]

Mr. Malone: All family health services authorities are able to target their cash limited resources to areas of greatest need. In addition, as part of the Government's London implementation zone initiative, FHSAs are able to provide assistance to general practitioners in the employment of a wider range of health care staff. The number of whole-time equivalent staff employed by general practitioners increased from 37,546 in 1989 to 51,833 last year—a rise of nearly 40 per cent.

Tamoxifen

Mr. Bill Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make the anti-cancer drug Tamoxifen free to all breast cancer sufferers. [41858]

Mr. Malone: No. Extensive exemption and remission arrangements already protect those who might have difficulty paying charges. For those who have to pay charges and who need regular medication, prescription season tickets offer real value for money.

Breast Cancer

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will publish for each standard region of the United Kingdom and the United Kingdom as a whole for the latest available year the number of woman diagnosed as suffering from breast cancer, indicating the figure as a percentage of the total female population in each case. [41960]

Mr. Sackville: The available information is shown in the table.

Accident and Emergency Departments

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 9 June, Official Report, column 332, if he will now provide updated accident and emergency department figures. [42297]

Mr. Sackville: I will write to the hon. Member.

Clinical Negligence Claims

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 18 July, Official Report, column 1151, if he will now provide figures on clinical negligence settlements for 1994–95. [42298]

Mr. Malone: Final figures for the period 1994–95 are not yet available.

Doctors (Recruitment)

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent representations he has received from royal colleges and other medical bodies about recruitment difficulties in certain specialties. [42233]

Mr. Malone: The Department of Health has received representations through informal discussions with various royal colleges and from the national health service on particular specialties' difficulties in filling vacant posts.

Medical work force advisory groups have been asked to consider suitable action to ameliorate any shortages.

Royal Devon and Exeter Healthcare Trust

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what assessment he has made of the impact on the delivery of NHS health care by the Royal Devon and Exeter Healthcare trust and the delivery of health care in the region generally of the trust's plans to build a private hospital in the grounds of the Royal Devon and Exeter hospital at Heavitree; [42279]

(2) if he will make a statement regarding the Royal Devon and Exeter Healthcare trust's plans to build a private hospital on the grounds of the Royal Devon and Exeter hospital at Heavitree; what representations he received regarding this project; who was responsible for the final approval of the project in his Department; and if he will place a copy of the contract between the trust and the private contractors involved in the Library. [42278]

Mr. Sackville: There are no plans to build a private hospital on trust property.

Cervical Smear Tests

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent representations he has received from the medical profession with regard to frequency of smear tests for cervical cancer. [42291]

Mr. Sackville: None of which I am aware.

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the cost to the NHS of conducting, analysing and reporting a cervical smear test; and what is the private sector cost of conducting, analysing and reporting a cervical smear test. [42293]

Mr. Sackville: Total estimated costs to the national health service of cervical screening is £100 million each year and £40 for an individual test, including the reporting of it.

Information is not available centrally on these costs in the private sector.

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement about the cervical cancer screening programme. [42294]

Mr. Sackville: The cervical cancer screening programme has been extremely successful. Some 4 million women are screened each year; this means that 84 per cent. of women in the eligible age group nationally have been screened. Through screening, cervical abnormalities which could lead to cancer are identified so that appropriate treatment can be given. I am confident that our "Health of the Nation" target to cut cervical cancer incidence by 20 per cent. by 2000 will be achieved.

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recommendations he has received from the chief medical officer regarding the frequency of smear tests for cervical cancer for women aged between 20 and 60 years. [42290]

Mr. Sackville: Departmental policy agreed with the chief medical officer is set out in HSG(93)41: all women in this age group should be invited for a cervical smear at least every five years.

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list for each of the past five years and for each family health service authority area (a) the number of women who received a smear test for cervical cancer on the NHS, (b) the percentage of women in the at-risk category who have received a smear test, (c) the average interval of time between smear test and (d) the number of GPs and clinics, also expressed as a proportion of the total number of GPs and clinics at which NHS smear tests were available. [42292]

Mr. Sackville: Information is not available in the form requested. The most recent information held on the cervical cancer screening programme, "Cervical Cancer Screening 1993–1994 Summary information from Form KC53 England", was placed in the Library.

General Practitioners

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement regarding the number of vacant places on the general practitioner vocational training course and the recruitment of doctors who have qualified in other countries to fill some of those vacancies. [42277]

Mr. Malone: This information is not available centrally.

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list, for the past five years (a) the number of qualified doctors enrolling on the general practitioner vocational training course, (b) the overall number of places on the schemes and (c) the number of places which are filled by doctors who have qualified in another country, in each case specifying the number per regional training centre. [42275]

Mr. Malone: This information is not available centrally.

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what action he plans to take to encourage qualified doctors to become general practitioners; and if he will make a statement. [42276]

Mr. Malone: At 1 October 1994, there were 25,567 general practitioners in England—a record number. We are ensuring that general practice remains an attractive career, for example, by assisting doctors with their duties out-of- surgery hours and implementing the efficiency scrutiny on unnecessary paperwork.

Contracting Out

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 19 July, Official Report, column 1282, if he will now update the information on regional health authority services. [42299]

Mr. Sackville: The table shows updated information:

Regional health authority	Organisation or service	Current position
1. South and West	Eastwood Park Training and Conference Centre	Subject to contract, to be sold to Peritas (a subsidiary of ICL) in January 1996
2. South and West	Lyngford House Training and Conference Centre	Options under consideration
3. South and West	Avon and Gloucester College of Health	Contract with the University of Western England due for signing by 30 November to take effect in January 1996. Staff able to transfer on TUPE terms
4. South and West	Tor and South West College of Health	Contract with the University of Plymouth due for signing by early December to take effect in January 1996. Staff able to transfer on TUPE terms
5. South and West	SWIFT (IT services)	Contract awarded to EDS wef 1 September 1995. Staff able to transfer on TUPE terms
6. West Midlands	Midlands Laundry Group	Invitations to tender will go out shortly
7. Northern and Yorkshire	Yorkshire Health Legal Services	Tenders invited, and final bids expected in mid-November. Award likely by the end of the year
8. Northern and Yorkshire	Financial Services	Contract awarded to Hartshead Solway wef 1 August 1995. Staff able to transfer on TUPE terms
9. Northern and Yorkshire	White Hart Training and Conference Centre	Options under consideration for final decision early in 1996
10. North Thames	IT services	Constituent parts have either been transferred to NHS Authorities, or to a management/staff buy-out; or wound up and no longer provided
11. South Thames	HCR and SE Computing (IT services)	Contract awarded to Hoskyns wef July 1995. Staff able to transfer on TUPE terms
12. South Thames	David Salomans Training Centre	Subject to contract, award to be made to Canterbury Christchurch College wef April 1996; staff able to transfer on TUPE terms
13. North West	North West Health Legal Services	Contract awarded to Hempsons wef 1 October 95. Staff able to transfer on TUPE terms
14. Anglia and Oxford	Mandeville Medicines (Pharmaceutical Production)	Options for transfer under consideration for final decision in 1996.
15. Anglia and Oxford	Oxford Consortium (various services)	Contract awarded to CSC wef 1 July 1995. Staff able to transfer on TUPE terms.

NHS Management

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) managerial staff, (b) administrative and clerical staff and (c) nursing and midwifery staff have been employed and at what cost in (i) trusts and (ii) health authorities in each region in each year since 1989. [42239]

Mr. Malone: I will write to the hon. Member.

Staff Cars

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer to the right hon. Member for Derby, South (Mrs. Beckett) of 1 November, Official Report, columns 360–1, if he will provide (a) a regional and (b) a district breakdown of the figures on staff cars. [42301]

Mr. Malone: This information will be placed in the Library.

Nurse-patient Ratio

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, what was the average qualified nurse-patient ratio in each of the last five years by (a) region and (b) district. [42235]

Mr. Sackville: I will write to the hon. Member.

Private Patient Income

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 1 November, Official Report, column 356, when 1994–95 figures on private patient income will be available. [42300]

Mr. Sackville: Shortly.

NHS Staff

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) nurses and midwives and (b) doctors have worked in the (i) acute and (ii) community sectors in each of the last three years in each region. [42240]

Mr. Sackville: I will write to the hon. Member.

Foetal Alcohol Syndrome

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the incidence of foetal alcohol syndrome in each of the last five years for which figures are available. [42340]

Mr. Bowis: I will write to the hon. Member.

Specialist Advisers

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) specialist advisers and (b) press or public relations officers are employed by his Department; and what is the total annual salary bill for (a) and (b) above. [42316]

Mr. Sackville: I will write to the hon. Member.

Child Protection

Mrs. Helen Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what funding has been allowed for child protection services such as health visitors. [42351]

Mr. Bowis: I will write to the hon. Member.

Health Visitors

Mrs. Helen Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what funding there has been of the health visitor service over the past three years; [42352]

(2) if he will list the number of health visitors by authority over the past three years; [42357]

Mr. Bowis: I will write to the hon. Member.

Dental Implants

Mrs. Helen Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if he will list by authority how many dental implants were performed this year and last year (a) on national health patients and (b) in the private sector; [42353]

(2) what consultations he has had with representatives of the dental health consultants about the funding of dental implant surgery; [42354]

(3) if he will list by authority those health authorities which have decided not to fund dental implant treatment for NHS patients; [42355]

(4) if he will list those health authorities that perform dental implant treatment for patients on the national health service. [42356]

Mr. Malone: I will write to the hon. Member.

Social Services

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much money Buckinghamshire county council has spent on social services under both special transitional grant and social services SSA during the financial year (a) 1993–94, (b) 1994–95 and (c) 1995–96 to date. [42359]

Mr. Bowis: I will write to the hon. Member.

AIDS

Mr. Gerrard: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if the NHS will continue to meet the full cost of treating patients with HIV and AIDS with combinations of anti-viral drugs. [42366]

Mr. Sackville: I will write to the hon. Member.

Injection Pens

Mr. Gerrard: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what are his reasons for excluding disposable needles for insulin injection pen systems from the drug tariff. [42367]

Mr. Malone: I will write to the hon. Member.

European Court Decisions

Sir Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to the oral answer of the Attorney-General of 30 October, Official Report, column 12, relating to decisions of the European Court of Justice and the European Court of Human Rights if he will list those European Court decisions relating to responsibilities of his Department over the past two years; and what was the estimated annual cost to public funds of each decision. [41214]

Mr. Malone [holding answer 2 November 1995]: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply the Minister of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, the my hon. Friend Member for Boothferry (Mr. Davis), gave him on 7 November, columns 698–702.

Management Costs

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 27 October, Official Report, column 848, to the hon. Members for York (Mr. Bayley) and for Dulwich (Ms Jowell) what was the level of management and administrative expenditure in each health authority of the last three years for which figures are available. [41432]

Mr. Malone [holding answer 6 November 1995]: I will write to the hon. Member.

Asbestos-related Diseases

Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate his Department has made of the number of deaths wholly or partly attributable to asbestos-related disease that are expected in each year until 2030. [41886]

Sir Paul Beresford: I have been asked to reply.

The estimated number of males dying annually from the asbestos-related cancer mesothelioma in 10 years' time could range from between 1,300 and 2,100; in 20 years' time between 1,300 and 3,000 and in 30 years' time between 1,000 and 3,200. These estimates are based on a paper: "The continuing increase in mesothelioma mortality in Britain" which was published in The Lancet on 3 March 1995. This paper discusses the uncertainties attached to the projections, which increase very significantly beyond about 2010. It is therefore inappropriate to forecast a figure for each separate year. Projected figures for females are not available.

Currently, there are estimated to be one or two deaths from asbestos-related lung cancer for each death from mesothelioma. The falling prevalence of smoking is likely to reduce this ratio in the future.

Measles, Mumps and Rubella

Mr. Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which measles, mumps and rubella vaccines, supplied by which companies, were withdrawn from use in 1992; and for what reasons. [41066]

Mr. Sackville [holding answer 2 November 1995]: The two vaccines were manufactured by SmithKline Beecham and Merieux. As to the reasons for the discontinuation of their use, I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave him on 6 November, Official Report, column 607–11.

Mr. Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to dispose of measles vaccine surplus to the 1994–95 campaign. [41019]

Mr. Sackville: Surplus measles-rubella vaccines arising from overprovision of diluent has already been returned to manufacturers for which my Department has received reimbursement as credit; a small stock is being held against future requirements.

Mr. Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what information he possesses as to the reason for MMR vaccines being withdrawn in Japan. [41023]

Mr. Sackville [holding answer 2 November 1995]: Urabe-based MMR vaccines have been withdrawn from use in Japan only recently, for the same reasons that they were replaced in this country three years ago. The reason for replacement was restricted to the rate of adverse reactions in the mumps vaccine component.

Mr. Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what information his Department holds as to the shelf life of the vaccines used in the campaign conducted since November 1994 to vaccinate against measles and rubella. [41024]

Mr. Sackville [holding answer 2 November 1995]: The shelf lives of the vaccines used in the measles-rubella immunisation campaign were all two years. The expiry dates of the batches were either 30 or 31 July 1996, 30 August 1996 or 30 September 1996.

Mr. Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what studies have been conducted by his Department into the effects of the modification of natural immunologic response by vaccines in relation to the increase in autoimmune diseases. [41028]

Mr. Sackville [holding answer 2 November 1995]: I will write to the hon. Member.

Mr. Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which companies were chosen as suppliers of the measles-rubella vaccine in the recent countrywide campaign; and for what reasons. [41018]

Mr. Sackville [holding answer 2 November 1995]: All possible manufacturers were approached. Only SmithKline Beecham and Merieux were in a position to supply—both were awarded contracts.

Mr. Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment his Department has made of the likelihood of the adverse reactions to the administration of both MR and MMR vaccines, in regard to the under-reporting of thrombocytopenic purpura. [41017]

Mr. Sackville [holding answer 2 November 1995]: The Public Health Laboratory Service has recently published a review on an advanced technique for surveillance of adverse reactions. New information was established on the association between idiopathic thrombocytopenic purpura and MMR immunisation. This related to primary immunisation and was of little relevance to the measles-rubella campaign because there was a far lower probability of susceptibility to rubella in children of the campaign age than in those immunised with MMR at 12 to 15 months.

Mr. Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment his Department has made of the problems occurring in the passive surveillance procedures adopted in the United Kingdom to monitor adverse effects of vaccinations. [41031]

Mr. Sackville [holding answer 2 November 1995]: Doctors are aware that suspected adverse reactions to vaccines should be reported through the United Kingdom's adverse drug reactions reporting scheme. It is more likely that acute and serious adverse reactions are reported. The United Kingdom's reporting scheme has successfully detected rare unrecognised hazards with vaccines and other medicines and the scheme receives widespread support from doctors. The limitations of the scheme are well recognised but it is the best scheme currently available for the routine surveillance of adverse reactions to vaccines throughout the UK.

Mr. Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will set out each consideration which led his Department to initiate a country-wide vaccination campaign against measles and rubella jointly in November 1994. [41061]

Mr. Sackville [holding answer 2 November 1995]: The key consideration was to protect children against a predicted epidemic of measles. The background is given in the chief medical officer/chief nursing officer letters issued in July and September 1994, copies of which are available in the Library; other supportive information has been published in:

Mr. Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what considerations led to the decision not to include on the consent form given to parents for children being vaccinated against rubella information on the possibility that it might lead to some increase in arthritis. [41033]

Mr. Sackville [holding answer 2 November 1995]: In preparing the leaflet for parents careful evaluation was given to all side effects. The risk of arthritis in the age group covered by the measles-rubella campaign was considered not to warrant inclusion as the risk is in older women.

Mr. Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the claims in a journal which has been sent to him regarding information to parents and professionals in respect of the recent MMR campaign. [40885]

Mr. Sackville: The information for parents was produced after careful consideration of all relevant information and was pre-tested with parents and young people. Extensive information on adverse reactions was provided to all doctors and other health professionals involved in the campaign. The author appears not to have considered all the relevant information in making his claims.

Mr. Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what studies have been (a) conducted and (b) sponsored by his Department into the causes and development of measles encephalitis in children. [41021]

Mr. Sackville [holding answer 2 November 1995]: Two studies on the rate of acute encephalitis associated with measles infections have been conducted by the Public Health Laboratory Service, and deaths from measles encephalitis were reviewed by the PHLS in 1985. In addition, detailed information on cases on late-onset encephalitis following measles infection subacute sclerosing panencephalitis is collected by the PHLS, and a comprehensive report from this surveillance scheme was published in 1992.

Mr. Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many cases of (a) mumps and (b) rubella occurred in each year since 1985; and what assessment he has made of the reliability of the data. [41026]

Mr. Sackville [holding answer 2 November 1995]: Since 1985, the most reliable source of data on mumps and rubella incidence is reports of confirmed infections to the Communicable Disease Surveillance Centre from laboratories in England, Wales and Northern Ireland. Cases thus confirmed therefore represent true infections. Laboratory investigation is not performed in all suspected cases, however, and therefore these figures may under-estimate the total number of mumps and rubella infections. Since 1988, statutory notifications of mumps and rubella have been collected at the Office of Population Censuses and Surveys. In a Public Health Laboratory Service study of the accuracy of notification, laboratory confirmation of rubella cases was attempted in 18 districts between 1991 and 1993. Only 29 per cent. of rubella were confirmed by laboratory testing. No formal study of mumps notifications has taken place but, as part of the PHLS saliva diagnosis scheme, we have confirmed only 3.3 per cent. of mumps cases notified this year. This data suggest that notifications substantially over-estimate the incidence of these infections.

Reports to Communicable Disease Surveillance Centre of confirmed infection from laboratories in England, Wales and Northern Ireland 1985–1995

Mr. Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many yellow card reports covering measles, mumps and rubella have been registered by the Medicines Control Agency identifying cases of possible vaccine damage, in each month since 1992. [41022]

Mr. Sackville [holding answer 2 November 1995]: The number of yellow card reports of adverse reactions related to measles, mumps and rubella vaccine for each month since 1992 is shown in the table.

	1992	1993	1994	1995

The report of a suspected adverse reaction does not necessarily mean the vaccine was responsible.

Mr. Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what consideration was given to the conclusions in the communicable disease report, volume 4, review number 7 of 24 June 1994, as to the need for a mass campaign against rubella before the decision to institute a measles and rubella campaign in November 1994 was taken. [41032]

Mr. Sackville [holding answer 2 November 1995]: The results of the summary of districts in England and Wales were consistent with the decision to include rubella vaccine in the immunisation campaign of November 1994. The article identified current policy at that time but also stated that there are no contradictions to a second vaccination in girls. The article did not address the issue of rubella immunisation in boys.

Mr. Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what considerations he has given to including decisions not to include details of each of the known side effects of immunisation in the booklet "Measles: Why every child in school needs to be protected from measles this autumn"; and if he will make a statement. [41020]

Mr. Sackville [holding answer 2 November 1995]: The content of the measles booklet was underpinned by research by the Health Education Authority among parents to establish what information they regarded as most important. This research showed that parents were unaware of the seriousness of measles. The final leaflet reflected parents information priorities about the need for measles and rubella immunisation. Side effects from measles rubella vaccine are rare but the more common ones are covered in the booklet. Doctors and other health care workers were given more detailed information on the full range of possible adverse reactions. Parents were advised to discuss any further concerns with their family doctor.

Mr. Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment has been made of the policy implications of the scientific article on measles, mumps, rubella and varicella, a copy of which has been sent to him. [40884]

Mr. Sackville: The scientific article in The Lancet—volume 345, 4 March 1995— a copy of which is in the Library, has been considered by the Department of Health, and the Joint Committee on Vaccination and Immunisation, and its importance is acknowledged. It describes a valuable technique for investigating more serious adverse reactions—that is, those likely to lead to hospital admission. Wider evaluation of the technique would be appropriate. The policy implication of the article is that active surveillance reveals a higher than previously reported risk of thrombocytopaenia and a fourfold reduction of risk of febrile convulsions after the change in the immunisation schedule that we implemented in 1990. The article has no relevance to varicella, for which there is no UK licensed vaccine.

Mr. Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment has been made of the incidence of measles in 1994–95 among unimmunised 17-year-olds. [41062]

Mr. Sackville [holding answer 2 November 1995]: During 1994, there were 19 confirmed cases of measles infection in 17-year-old children—all of whom were unimmunised—reported to the Public Health Laboratory Service. So far in 1995, there have been only five confirmed cases and all of these cases occurred in unimmunised people.

Mr. Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent representations his Department has received from the Association of Parents of Vaccine Damaged Children. [41068]

Mr. Sackville [holding answer 2 November 1995]: A number of letters have been received concerning the measles-rubella campaign and the childhood immunisation programme in general.

Mr. Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what mechanism exists for parents who have lost confidence in their general practitioner to pass on confidential information concerning the suspected deleterious effects of measles immunisation vaccinations on their children. [41006]

Mr. Sackville: Doctors are asked to report adverse reactions when, based on their clinical judgment, there is a likelihood of the reported event being related to the administration of the vaccine. We believe that there was good compliance with standard reporting procedures during the course of the campaign. It is open to parents to make representations on specific issues of concern to them to their local family health services authority through the complaints procedures.

Mr. Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what guidance is issued to doctors, nurses and other medical service professionals in regard to the level of information that they are expected give parents on potentially adverse effects of immunisation against measles. [41069]

Mr. Sackville [holding answer 2 November 1995]: Health service professionals are given extensive information on possible adverse reactions to vaccines. The United Kingdom Health Departments' "memorandum", Immunisation against Infectious Disease, published by Her Majesty's Stationery Office, provides information on adverse reactions. In addition, for the measles-rubella immunisation campaign the chief medical officer's letters of July, September and October 1994 covered adverse reactions in some detail and included an information booklet for health care professionals.

Mr. Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what tests are conducted on children before immunisation against measles to establish their existing levels of blood antibodies. [41029]

Mr. Sackville [holding answer 2 November 1995]: None. The European advisory group on immunisation of the World Health Organisation has specifically advised against testing of blood for antibodies because of potential unreliability of information obtained and the impractical scale of the exercise. This practice is not known to be routinely undertaken in any country in the world.

Mr. Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many updates have been prepared and circulated by the chief medical officer, the chief nursing officer and the chief pharmacist on the national measles-rubella immunisation campaign since December 1994; and if he will place copies in the Library. [41025]

Mr. Sackville [holding answer 2 November 1995]: There has been one joint communication from the chief medical officer, the chief nursing officer and the chief pharmacist on the measles-rubella immunisation campaign since December 1994. This was a letter dated 19 December 1994: "Update on National Measles-Rubella Immunisation Campaign". A brief article also appeared in CMO's update 6, dated July 1995: "Success of measles/rubella immunisation campaign". Both letters are available in the Library.

Mr. Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what papers or research reports have been prepared or sponsored by his Department on adverse reactions to immunisation against measles; [41030]

(2) what studies have been (a) conducted and (b) published by the United Kingdom Public Health Laboratory Service on investigation into the effects of measles-mumps-rubella-immunisation inoculation on convulsions amongst recipient children. [41060]

Mr. Sackville [holding answer 2 November 1995]: Extensive studies of measles vaccine were conducted by the Medical Research Council before the introduction of measles vaccine in 1968. Two reports from these studies summarised the incidence of adverse events. Subsequently, a study of symptoms following measles vaccination was conducted by the Public Health Laboratory Service in a large number of children between 1970 and 1980.

Before the introduction of MMR vaccine in 1988, studies were conducted by the Public Health Laboratory Service to measure the rate of adverse events, including convulsions, associated with the vaccine. The study involved over 10,000 children in three district health authorities in the United Kingdom. In 1993, a pilot study to evaluate new methods for monitoring adverse events following vaccination, including MMR vaccine, was conducted.

This involved linking computerised hospital admissions data to child health vaccination records in five districts of England and Wales.

Mr. Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when the decision was taken, and on what basis, to place a notification for competitive tender in the Official Journal of the European Communities for the vaccines to be used in the immunisation campaign initiated in November 1994 against measles and rubella. [41067]

Mr. Sackville [holding answer 2 November 1995]: The normal procedures of the European Communities public procurements directives did not allow sufficient time for manufacture of vaccines. Therefore, no notification for competitive tender was placed in the Official Journal of the European Communities for the vaccines used in the measles rubella immunisation campaign, but contracts were placed using a negotiated procedure as specified in Statutory Instrument 2679 of 1991.

Mr. Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when his predecessor was first involved in internal discussions with his chief medical officer and departmental experts on immunology, on the immunology campaign against measles and rubella launched last year. [41063]

Mr. Sackville [holding answer 2 November 1995]: Ministers were informed in April 1994 of the Joint Committee on Vaccination and Immunisation's recommendation that a measles-rubella campaign should be undertaken. This recommendation was considered by Ministers and an announcement made on 28 July 1994.

Mr. Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what inter-departmental discussions at (a) ministerial and (b) official level have been held since 1993 on the measles-rubella immunisation campaign. [41065]

Mr. Sackville [holding answer 2 November 1995]: Discussions took place as required.

Mr. Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what procedures have been adopted to monitor suspected adverse reactions to the measles-rubella immunisation campaign since November 1994; and what it has cost to date to conduct the monitoring. [41027]

Mr. Sackville [holding answer 2 November 1995]: Before the start of the campaign with measles rubella vaccine the Medicines Control Agency agreed that all reports of suspected adverse reactions would be handled with the highest priority. Spontaneous reports using the yellow card system were classified and entered on to the MCA database within 24 hours of receipt and evaluated by a doctor within 36 hours. Requests for further information were made for serious adverse reactions if inadequate information had been provided on the yellow card. The cost of monitoring MR vaccine cannot be estimated because surveillance was part of the normal MCA procedures for monitoring all licensed medicines in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when officials in his Department first established internal discussions on the departmental immunisation campaign against measles and rubella. [41064]

Mr. Sackville [holding answer 2 November 1995]: The situation was evaluated in 1992. Development work on strategies was undertaken in 1993. This work was under the stewardship of the United Kingdom Health Departments' external independent expert committee—the Joint Committee on Vaccination and Immunisation.

Immunisation

Dr. Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many children were (a) harmed and (b) died as a result of immunisation in each of the last five years. [41643]

Mr. Sackville: A report of a suspected reaction does not necessarily mean it was caused by the vaccine. Reports to the Medicines Control Agency of suspected adverse reactions to vaccines classified in children, aged 15 years or less, in the United Kingdom are presented in the table:

	Reports of any reactions to a vaccine	Reports of a fatal reaction to a vaccine
1 November 1990—31 October 1991	292	6
1 November 1991—31 October 1992	610	7
1 November 1992—31 October 1993	1,843	12
1 November 1993—31 October 1994	830	4
1 November 1994—31 October 1995	1,840	2

These figures include 19 sudden infant deaths but the age at which SIDS most commonly occurs is coincidental with that for the recommended primary vaccination schedule. Numerous studies have failed to identify a causal link with vaccination.

Eleven deaths occurred in children with underlying pathologies that were not linked to vaccination.

Approximately 80 million doses of vaccines used in the childhood programme have been distributed in the UK in the last five years.

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will estimate the percentage of parents who do not wish to have their children immunised. [42281]

Mr. Sackville: Current United Kingdom immunisation coverage by a child's second birthday is: 95.8 per cent. for diphtheria, tetanus and polio; 93.5 per cent. for pertussis; 94.9 per cent. for Hib; and 92.5 per cent for measles, mumps and rubella. These figures do not identify the reason for children not being immunised, but nationwide research in April 1995, commissioned by the Health Education Authority, into attitudes of mothers of children aged nought to two years, estimated that less than 0.5 per cent. said that they would not allow a future child to have any immunisation at all.

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if general practitioner contract targets for immunisation take into account the fact that some parents do not wish to have their children immunised. [42282]

Mr. Malone: The higher target level of 90 per cent. reflects the fact that not all children will be immunised.

NHS Management

Sir Ralph Howell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the number of (a) patients on waiting lists for hospital treatment and waiting times, (b) hospital beds available, (c) hospital staff employed, (d) hospital managers and hospital administrative and clerical staff employed, (e) hospital doctors employed, (f) hospital nurses and midwives employed, (g) medical students qualifying and (h) medical school places available in each year since 1989 to the latest date available. [40621]

Mr. Malone [holding answer 31 October 1995]: The information available for England is shown in the table. The numbers of managers and administrative and clerical staff and total numbers employed in hospitals, as distinct from the hospital and community health services, are not available separately.

	1989	1990	1991	1992	1993	1994	1995

n/a Data not available yet.

(1) Average daily number of available beds, wards open day and night, all specialties.

(2) Whole time equivalents.

(3) Excludes hospital dentists and medical and dental locums.

(4) Excludes agency staff and Project 2000 students. Project 2000 training was introduced in 1989 and has gradually replaced traditional nurse training. Non-Project 2000 nurses undertaking training are included in work force figures. There were no Project 2000 students in 1989; for subsequent years the figures were 3,000, 10,500, 18,300, 28,000, and 32,000. The figure for 1995 is not yet available.

(5) Medical students with first registerable medical qualification.

ENVIRONMENT

Area Cost Adjustment

Mr. Pickthall: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans he has to abolish the area cost adjustment. [40321]

Sir Paul Beresford: I have no plans to abolish the area cost adjustment. There is general acceptance among the local authority associations that there should be some allowance for geographical variations in costs. What is disputed is the proper extent of the adjustment. We have announced that a review of the area cost adjustment is to be carried out.

Mr. Robert Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has received from local authorities concerning the area cost adjustment. [40333]

Sir Paul Beresford: I have received many representations from local authorities about the area cost adjustment. There have been representations both supportive and critical of the present method of determining the adjustment.

Mr. Bill Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the area cost adjustment element of the standard spending assessments. [40349]

Mr. Hain: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the area cost adjustment element of standard spending assessments. [40360]

Sir Paul Beresford: I refer the hon. Members to the reply given by my hon. Friend the Minister for Local Government, Housing and Urban Regeneration to my hon. Friend the Member for Swindon (Mr. Coombs) on 17 October, Official Report, columns 185–86.

Mr. Tipping: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make it his policy to reduce the proportion of funding allocations by area cost adjustment within the standard spending assessment. [40352]

Sir Paul Beresford: It is the policy of my right hon. Friend that the amount allocated by the area cost adjustment should be determined on an objective basis.

Local Government Finance

Mr. William O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has received about the additional revenue allocated to local education authorities over the capping levels to provide additional services to meet local demands. [40322]

Sir Paul Beresford: I refer the hon. Member to the answer that I gave him on 1 November 1995, Official Report, Wednesday 1 November, columns 372–74.

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has received with regard to the capping criteria. [40327]

Sir Paul Beresford: My right hon. Friend received a large number of representations about the capping criteria for 1995–96. He will announce his intentions for capping for 1996–97 as part of his proposals for the local government finance settlement shortly after the Chancellor's Budget statement.

Ms Hodge: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many authorities, on appeal, he allowed to set budgets in 1995–96 above his Department's initial guidelines. [40330]

Sir Paul Beresford: Three.

Mr. Nigel Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans he has to remove capping from local authorities. [40337]

Mr. Burden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what changes he intends to make to the capping criteria. [40357]

Sir Paul Beresford: My right hon. Friend will announce his proposals for the local government finance settlement for 1996–97, including his intentions for capping, shortly after the Chancellor's Budget statement.

Sir Irvine Patnick: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the estimated savings in terms of public expenditure as a result of measures taken over the past eight years to restrict spending by local authorities. [41861]

Sir Paul Beresford: Since 1990–91, when capping in its current form was introduced, it has been directly responsible for reducing the budgets of those authorities that challenged their caps by a total that has now reached around a third of a billion pounds a year compared with the budgets originally set. The great majority of authorities did not challenge their caps, but set budgets within the limits implied by the capping criteria; although no direct estimate can be made, it is clear that in these cases too capping has been generally successful in ensuring that many authorities have budgeted at a lower level than would otherwise have been the case.

Mr. David Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many councils have been warned by the district auditor that he is unhappy with their accounts or expenditure. [40356]

Sir Paul Beresford: Appointed auditors may formally warn local authorities about their accounts or expenditure through reports in the public interest, under section 15(30) of the Local Government Finance Act 1982, or by making recommendations under section 5 of the Local Government Finance Act 1992. In 1993–94, seven public interest reports were made, and section 5 recommendations were included in the management letters of 10 local authorities.

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what percentage of local authority capital receipts can be used for new projects rather than debt repayment (a) up to 31 March 1996 and (b) beyond that date. [42177]

Sir Paul Beresford: At present, local authorities can normally spend on purposes other than debt repayment 25 per cent. of receipts from the sale of housing assets and 50 per cent. of receipts from disposal of other assets. Temporary relaxations introduced this year mean that authorities can now spend on new projects increased proportions of receipts from the sale of certain types of assets. These are:

Airport companies: 75 per cent. (from 1 April 1995 to 31 March 1997)

Bus companies: 75 percent (from 1 April 1995 to 31 March 1996)

Car parks: 90 per cent. (from 1 September 1995 to 31 August 1996)

Shops: 90 per cent. (from 1 September 1995 t 31 August 1996)

Crematoria: 90 per cent. (from 1 January 1996 to 30 June 1997)

In addition, we have announced our intention to make regulations with the effect that for two years from 1 April 1996 authorities should be able to spend 90 per cent. of receipts from the sale of county farms, and 75 per cent. from the sale of education assets.

Yorkshire Water

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what steps he is taking to monitor the performance of Yorkshire Water plc. [40323]

Mr. Clappison: The performance of Yorkshire Water Services Ltd., the regulated water and sewerage subsidiary of Yorkshire Water plc, is monitored by the water industry regulators—the Director General of Water Services, the drinking water inspectorate and the National Rivers Authority. During the present water shortages in the area, my right hon. Friend has been taking independent advice to satisfy himself that Yorkshire Water Services is doing all that it can to maintain supplies.

Houses in Multiple Occupation

Mr. Khabra: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans the Government have to license houses in multiple occupation; and if he will make a statement. [40324]

Mr. Clappison: The Government have no plans to license houses in multiple occupation. Our proposals are set out in the consultation paper "Improving Standards in Houses in Multiple Occupation" which was published on 13 July. Copies are in the Library. An announcement on how the Government intend to take this matter forward will be made shortly.

Mr. Hawkins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what further measures he plans to control houses in multiple occupation. [40338]

Mr. Clappison: The Government's proposals are set out in the consultation paper "Improving Standards in Houses in Multiple Occupation" which was published on 13 July. Copies are in the Library. An announcement on how the Government intend to take this matter forward will be made shortly.

Homelessness

Mr. Sutcliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what are the most recent figures for homelessness; and what was the figure in 1979. [40325]

Mr. Clappison: Local authorities report in their quarterly P1(E) returns the number of households for which they accept responsibility to secure accommodation under the homelessness provisions of the Housing (Homeless Persons) Act 1977 and the Housing Act 1985.

Local authorities accepted some 119,710 households as homeless in the 12 months ending June 1995, the latest period for which a figure is available. This is some 25,370, 17 per cent., below the peak figure in the year ending March 1992. Total acceptances in 1979 were 55,530.

The figure for 1979 is not strictly comparable with that for the latest 12 months because of changes made to reporting systems in 1980, for non-metropolitan districts, and 1982 for London boroughs and metropolitan districts.

Mrs. Anne Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what evaluation he has made of the effect of the proposed White Paper "Our Future Homes", on the levels of homelessness. [40345]

Mr. Clappison: The proposals in the White Paper will help to achieve overall objective of bringing a decent home within reach of every family, and reduce homelessness.

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) how many homeless people there have been in London in each of the last 10 years; [41267]

(2) how many homeless people there have been in Southwark in each of the last 10 years. [41272]

Mr. Clappison: Local authorities in England report in their quarterly P1(E) returns the number of households for which they accept responsibility to secure accommodation under the homelessness provisions of the 1985 Housing Act.

The available information for the years 1985 to 1994 for London and Southwark is in the table:

	Acceptances in
	Southwark	London
1985	[1]1,443	27,070
1986	[1]1,594	29,380
1987	[1]872 (2)	29,220
1988	[1]550 (1)	28,880
1989	n/a	33,020
1990	n/a	36,480
1991	[1]3,012 (3)	37,060
1992	2,885	37,840
1993	1,646	31,890
1994	1,453	28,810

[1] Includes intentionally homeless households (up to quarter 1 1991); some authorities may have further changed the basis of their returns at that time this change was made.

(1), (2), & (3) indicates number of quarters covered where partial returns only.

n/a indicates no figures available.

Mr. Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many homeless people there have been in each county in each of the last 10 years. [41268]

Mr. Clappison: The information will be placed in the Library shortly.

North Sea Oil Platforms

Mr. Kennedy: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what consideration his Department has given to the environmental implications of North sea oil platform decommissioning; and if he will make a statement. [40326]

Mr. Clappison: My Department's environmental responsibilities are taken into account in the proposals by the Department of Trade and Industry for guidelines on decommissioning issued for comment in May. My Department continues to be involved in evaluating the response to the consultation.

The Government announced on 18 October that an independent group is to be set up to review the scientific aspects of disposal of offshore installations as a bench mark for assessment of future proposals.

Cleveland County Council

Mr. Devlin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what additional funds will be made available for bereavement counselling for employees affected by the abolition of Cleveland county council. [40329]

Sir Paul Beresford: None.

Household Waste (Recycling)

Mr. Merchant: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what steps he is taking to encourage further recycling of household waste. [40331]

Mr. Clappison: The Government's overall policy aim for achieving more sustainable waste management is to increase the proportion of waste managed by the options towards the top of the waste hierarchy, including recycling. Specific measures to encourage further recycling of household waste are set out in the draft "Waste Strategy for England and Wales", which was published for consultation earlier this year. A copy has been placed in the Library. In particular, our initiative on producer responsibility for packaging waste will play a key role in developing the local infrastructure, and encouraging higher rates of recycling together with other factors such as the rising cost of waste disposal and the rising value of secondary raw materials.

Single Regeneration Budget

Mr. Jacques Arnold: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on progress with the single regeneration budget. [40332]

Sir Paul Beresford: Progress with the single regeneration budget has been excellent. Apart from continuing to meet commitments on the programmes which came into the SRB, there have been two rounds of bidding for support for new schemes through the SRB challenge fund. Under the first round, some 200 regeneration schemes were approved which, over their lifetime of up to seven years from April 1995, stand to receive over £1 billion in challenge fund support. This in turn will attract an estimated £1.8 billion in private investment. It is intended that decisions on the second round, for schemes starting from April 1996, will be made by Christmas.

Ms Eagle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when local authorities will be informed about whether their single regeneration bids have succeeded in getting Government funding. [40355]

Mr. Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when local authorities will be informed about whether their single regeneration bids have succeeded in getting Government funding. [40350]

Sir Paul Beresford: It is intended that local authorities and other bidders for support from the second round of the single regeneration budget challenge fund will be informed whether their bids have succeeded by Christmas.

Construction Industry

Mr. Gunnell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he intends to introduce legislation to give effect to the recommendations of the Latham report on the construction industry. [40334]

Mr. Clappison: Any proposal for such legislation in the coming Session will be announced, as is customary, in the Queen's Speech.

Housing Benefit

Mrs. Jane Kennedy: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what proportion of new lettings by housing associations in the last two years have been made to people in receipt of housing benefit. [40336]

Mr. Clappison: The latest available information relates to lettings in England to households who are eligible for either full or partial housing benefit.

The figures for 1993–94 and 1994–95 are set out in the table:

Percentage of housing association new lettings eligible for housing benefit

	Per cent.
1993–94	82
1994–95	82

CORE new lettings data base.

"Our Future Homes"

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has received from housing organisations regarding the White Paper, "Our Future Homes". [40339]

Mr. Clappison: I have placed in the House Library lists of organisations with housing concerns who have responded to the White Paper and to five linked explanatory and consultation papers. Responses are still being received.

Rural White Paper

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he next expects to meet representatives of parish councils to discuss his rural White Paper. [40340]

Mr. Clappison: We expect to meet a wide range of people to discuss the rural White Paper.

Mr. Butler: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what steps he is taking to ensure that housing development in rural communities is appropriate in terms of appearance as well as in quality. [40344]

Mr. Clappison: The White Paper on rural England published last month by my Department and the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food endorsed the principle, previously outlined in the quality in town and country initiative, that new development in the countryside should contribute to a sense of local identity and regional diversity.

We have already made it clear that local authorities and planning inspectors can reject obviously poor designs which are out of scale or out of character with their surroundings. In addition we intend to issue good practice guidance on the processes which lead to design; and we are working with the Countryside Commission to promote the preparation of village design statements and countryside design summaries throughout England.

Negative Equity

Mr. Hanson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is his latest estimate of the number of households in negative equity. [40341]

Mr. Clappison: Estimates of negative equity are sensitive to the underlying assumptions such as changes in house prices. Using the Department's house price index, adjusted for the mix of different dwelling types, to measure changes in house prices, it is estimated that in the second quarter of 1995 some 850,000 households in England and Wales were living in homes where the market value was less than the outstanding loan debt. This estimate provides only a very broad indication of the numbers in this position. The suitability of the assumptions used in compiling the estimates are currently under review.

Empty Properties

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on progress made in implementing recommendations in his Department's task force report on empty homes owned by Government Departments. [40342]

Mr. Clappison: Implementation of the task force recommendations is a matter for those Departments holding empty properties. The Government are committed to ensuring that their empty homes are brought back into use or disposed of quickly. In the Housing White Paper "Our Future Homes" we announced a strengthened policy that Departments will generally dispose of surplus empty properties within six months of their becoming empty.

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many currently empty Government (a) residential, (b) office and (c) other buildings there are in (i) London, (ii) Southwark, (iii) each county and (iv) in England; how many have been empty for more than (1) one year, (2) two years and (3) five years; and what is the amount of floor space in each category. [41269]

Mr. Clappison: Information in the form requested is not held centrally.

It is estimated that at 1 April 1994 there were 15,000 vacant dwellings in England owned by Government Departments. Some data for individual local authorities are included in the 1994 housing investment programme all items print, which is in the House Library; although there are doubts about the quality of some of these data.

The table gives particulars of vacant office and specialised properties on the Government civil estate.

Green Issues

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the work of his Department in relating to promoting a green environment. [40343]

Mr. Clappison: The work of my Department in promoting a green environment, along with that of all other Government Departments, is set out in the White Paper "This Common Inheritance—UK Annual Report 1995" (Cm 2822) which was published in March of this year. Copies have been placed in the Library of the House.

Water Shortages

Mr. Chris Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) if he will place in the Library copies of the contingency plans prepared by water companies to safeguard supplies to their customers next summer in the event of below average winter rainfall; [41377]

(2) what assessment he has made of the contingency plans prepared by water companies to safeguard supplies to their customers next summer in the event of below average winter rainfall. [41378]

Mr. Clappison: It is the general duty of water undertakers to make arrangements to provide water supplies to premises in their area and it is the duty of the National Rivers Authority to take all action that is necessary and expedient for the purpose of conserving, redistributing or otherwise augmenting water resources and to secure their proper use. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has asked the National Rivers Authority to report to him following consultation with the companies on the adequacy of water companies' plans and the measures that they are taking to safeguard supplies for next summer; a copy of that report will be placed in the Library when available.

Pollution Control

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) if he will place in the Library a list of the members of the working parties which advise his Department on guidance for local authorities on pollution control standards; [41444]

(2) if he will make a statement on the membership of the working parties which advise his Department on guidance for local authorities on pollution control standards, stating the total number of members who are representatives of, or hold senior positions within, (a) commercial organisations, (b) pressure groups concerned with the environment and (c) local government. [41443]

Mr. Clappison: The guidance on air pollution control standards issued by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State to local authorities is drawn up only after extensive and detailed consultation. The consultation is in two stages. Each proposed guidance note is discussed with an ad hoc working party comprising industry and local authority representatives. The working party meetings are chaired by environmental health officers seconded to my Department to advise on these controls and are used by them as a sounding board. The draft guidance is then sent for comment to a wider range of bodies, including the National Society for Clean Air and Environmental Protection, the local authority associations, Friends of the Earth, the Trade Union Congress, and the Confederation of British Industry.

I will be placing in the House Library a list of members of the working parties convened for the 82 published guidance notes. Approximately 400 participants represented commercial organisations, including manufacturers of monitoring and abatement equipment, and some 75 were local authority representatives. I am also placing a list of those sent the guidance notes at the second stage of consultation.

Beaufort's Dyke

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will instruct the Health and Safety Executive to examine the video evidence submitted to him concerning explosives at Beaufort's dyke and the British Gas pipeline laying with a view to considering the reimposition of a prohibition notice on the operation until it is fully satisfied that it is not a danger to the workers in the boats involved or a threat to public safety. [41590]

Sir Paul Beresford: I understand that the work concerned was successfully completed on the evening of Thursday 2 November. I have written separately to the hon. Member about matters which he raised in a letter to my right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade.

Shop Closures

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what studies he has commissioned to ascertain the reasons why retailers in small towns cease trading. [41671]

Sir Paul Beresford: None specifically. However, research that we have previously commissioned on the effects of major out-of-town retail development, the impact of the Merry Hill regional out-of-town shopping centre, and on vital and viable town centres, and research we propose on the impact of superstores on market towns and district centres, all seek to address this issue among others.

European Youth Parliament for the Environment

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what steps were taken by his Department to encourage young people from the United Kingdom to take part in the European Youth Parliament for the Environment which met in Strasbourg on 9 and 10 October; [41483]

(2) on what basis representatives from the United Kingdom were selected to take part in the European Youth Parliament for the Environment which met in Strasbourg on 9 and 10 October; and what support was provided by his Department to them. [41484]

Mr. Clappison [holding answer 6 November 1995]: The Department of the Environment has no record of an approach for assistance from an organisation or event known as the European Youth Parliament for the Environment. It follows that the Department was neither involved in the selection of participants nor in supporting them in Strasbourg on the 9 and 10 October.

Property Holdings

Mr. Faber: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans he has for the Security Facilities Executive and the Buying Agency when Property Holdings is wound up next year. [42243]

Mr. Gummer: The Security Facilities Executive is an agency that provides security-related support services to central Government and other public sector and approved customers through four main businesses: the Government car service, the inter-despatch service, the custody service and the special services group. The Buying Agency acts as a purchasing agent for Government Departments and other public bodies using its combined purchasing power to secure discounts from suppliers for the benefit of the taxpayer.

These agencies will transfer to the Office of Public Service and will report to my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster from 1 January 1996, joining other agencies such as the Civil Service College, which also provide services to Government. Prior to this, a study will be commissioned to investigate the scope for more private sector involvement in the custody service, which employs around 700 guards to protect over 100 Government buildings in the London area. The study will take account of new factors since this business was last examined, in particular changes in the Government's security requirements. Any proposals will be designed to ensure that Government Departments and other customers in the wider public sector obtain maximum value for money and economy from this service. SAFE's other businesses will not be covered by this study.

I announced to the House on 31 January that Property Advisers to the Civil Estate was to be launched as an executive agency in April 1996 to undertake central co-ordination and advisory functions, following the Government decision, based on an efficiency scrutiny, that Departments should become responsible for owning and managing their own accommodation. It will co-ordinate Departments' activities in the property market; promote interdepartmental rationalisation of Government accommodation; provide Departments with advice and support on property management issues; and help Departments not having in-house property expertise to act as intelligent customers in the procurement of professional property advice. It has now been decided that when PACE is launched next April, it will be an executive agency of the Office of Public Service, reporting to my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster.

Packaging Waste

Mr. Illsley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment on what basis he has rejected the seventh option for shared producer responsibility submitted to him by the industry group, V-WRAG. [40346]

Mr. Clappison: The previous Minister for the Environment and Countryside wrote to the chairman of V-WRAG on 23 June and 5 July explaining that, in their original form, the share producer responsibility proposals fell well short of meeting the criteria for an effective legal obligation to support the recovery and recycling of packaging waste. These criteria were published by the Government on 2 February, Official Report, columns

763–64. Copies of the correspondence are in the Library. The principal gap in the SPR proposals in their original form was the lack of any quantified obligation, by which an individual company's recycling and recovery effort could be measured. This is essential if we are to measure progress towards meeting the EC directive targets and to provide enforceable legislation to deter "free riders".

In August the Government produced a supplement to their consultation paper on "Producer Responsibility for Packaging Waste" which made clear that a shared responsibility option could be adopted providing it contained a quantified obligation, and a mechanism for disaggregating this across the different members of the packaging chain. The paper was intended to promote debate on the best means of achieving this and meeting the published criteria. Discussions with industry on this matter have continued to date.

Biological Diversity

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what are the United Kingdom Government's main objectives at the second meeting of the conference of the parties to the convention of biological diversity. [40347]

Mr. Clappison: The second meeting of the conference of the parties to the convention on biological diversity takes place in Jakarta from 6 to 17 November 1995. The UK's main objective for the meeting is to ensure that sensible decisions are taken to implement the convention, which are based on sound scientific and financial considerations. These considerations will be particularly important with regard to:

- encouraging Parties to take forward action to implement the Convention through national strategies;
- the decision about the need to for a biosafety protocol. The UK believes such an instrument is needed with regard to the transfer of living modified organisms between countries;
- the issue of voting provisions on financial issues, where the UK will emphasise the need for decisions to be taken by consensus; and
- the establishment of a "clearing house mechanism". The UK will be pressing for the mechanism to be cost-effective, decentralised data network providing information exchange services.

Local Government Corruption

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what powers he has to intervene where there is widespread evidence of corruption within a local authority. [40348]

Sir Paul Beresford: Ministers have no powers to intervene. Allegations of corruption involving local authorities are matters for the local authority auditor and, where appropriate, the police and the Crown Prosecution Service.

Hampshire

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has received about the latest SERPLAN—south-east regional plan—projections for Hampshire and the draft county structure plan. [40351]

Sir Paul Beresford: The Department of the Environment has published revised household projections up to 2011, but it will be some time yet before the Secretary of State can announce a revised housing provision for the south-east. No projections have been produced by SERPLAN. Therefore, the relevant guidance, including the housing provision, to which the draft county structure plan must have regard, is the regional planning guidance for the south-east (RPG9), published in March 1994.

The draft Hampshire county structure plan, containing policies and proposals for the period 1996–2011, was published by Hampshire county council on 2 October. Representations about the draft plan should be made to the county council and not to the Secretary of State for the Environment.

House Building

Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the house building industry. [40353]

Mr. Clappison: The Government remain firmly committed to the continued growth of sustainable home ownership. House prices are now the lowest that they have been in relation to incomes since 1983 and low interest rates mean that the average annual monthly cost of a mortgage has reduced by £140 since October 1990. None the less, I am aware that, despite the current affordability of home ownership, the market for new homes remains depressed. The Government are providing an economic climate in which confidence may return to the housing market by maintaining low inflation and sound public finances and promoting steady economic growth.

Maryport (Derelict Land)

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what moneys are available from his Department for the restoration of land which is the subject of industrial dereliction in Maryport. [40354]

Sir Paul Beresford: My Department makes funds available for the restoration of derelict land through English Partnerships and other programmes within the single regeneration budget. To date, English Partnerships and the regimes it subsumed have provided funding of some £7.4 million to assist the regeneration of Maryport. In addition, European funding amounting to some £652,000 has been approved in principle for two projects in Maryport under the west Cumbria and Furness objective 2 programme.

Contaminated Land

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has had regarding the revenue support grant to local authorities with respect to contaminated land, given their new duties under the Environment Act, 1995. [40355]

Mr. Gummer: The local authority associations referred to the new requirements in respect of contaminated land under the Environment Act 1995 in their report "The Spending Needs of Local Services 1996–97 to 1998–99" which was considered by the Consultative Council on Local Government Finance when it met under my chairmanship on 17 July.

Council House Rents

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what was the average rent of a council dwelling in England in 1979; and what is the most recent figure calculated in real terms. [40358]

Mr. Clappison: The average weekly local authority rent in England in April 1979 was £6.41. The corresponding figure in April 1995 was £38.34 and this equates to £14.90 in 1979–80 prices after adjusting for inflation using the GDP deflator.

Small Businesses

Lady Olga Maitland: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what assessment he has made on the effect of the uniform business rate on small businesses. [40359]

Mr. Curry: In February this year my Department published a report, "The Impact of Rates on Businesses", which analysed the impact of non-domestic rates on different sizes of businesses, including small businesses. A copy of this report is in the Library of the House.

Water Companies

Mrs. Helen Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list all changes which have taken place in the arrangements for consultation between water undertakers and planning authorities since 1989. [42200]

Mr. Clappison: I will write to the hon. Member.

Mrs. Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if water undertakers are statutory consultees with regard to local planning applications. [42198]

Mr. Clappison: Water undertakers are not statutory consultees under article 10 of the Town and Country Planning (General Development Procedure) Order 1995—consultations before the grant of planning permission.

Mrs. Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if water and sewerage undertakers are required to submit all sewage or drainage plans and relevant information or updates to the local planning authority. [42199]

Mr. Clappison: Under section 199 of the Water Industry Act 1991, sewerage undertakers are required to keep records of the location and other relevant particulars of every sewer or disposal main vested in the company, or in relation to which a declaration of vesting has been made but has not yet taken effect, or agreement to make such a declaration entered into. Section 200 of the 1991 Act places a duty on sewerage companies to provide local authorities with copies of those records and any modifications to them.

DSS Hostels

Mr. Allason: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans he has to introduce a licensing system to regulate DSS hostels. [42234]

Mr. Clappison: The Government have no plans to introduce a licensing system for such hostels in particular or for houses in multiple occupation in general. Our proposals are set out in the consultation paper "Improving Standards in Houses in Multiple Occupation" which was published on 13 July. Copies are in the Library. An announcement on how the Government intend to take this matter forward will be made shortly.

Standard Spending Assessments

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what was the level of standard spending assessment in 1995–96 and the actual or estimated spending on education by each local education authority in 1995–96. [42257]

Sir Paul Beresford: I have placed the information in the Library of the House.

Beverley (Charter Trustees)

Mr. Cran: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the charter trustees for Beverley to be established on 1 April 1996. [42212]

Sir Paul Beresford: I refer my hon. Friend to my answer of 2 November 1995, Official Report, column 401. The names of the eligible councillors will not be known until the charter trustees are appointed.

Housing Corporation

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans the Government have to sell the Housing Corporation's £1.2 billion loan portfolio; and if he will ensure that the proceeds will remain in the housing sector. [42253]

Mr. Curry: The Government are considering the possibility of sale of the Housing Corporation's portfolio of loans to housing associations, but no decision has been taken on the matter. In the event of sale, the proceeds would be applied to redemption of the corresponding borrowing from the national loans fund.

Housing Associations

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he has considered the National Federation of Housing Associations' proposal to allow housing associations to buy existing homes, and if he will make a statement. [42254]

Mr. Clappison: Housing associations are already allowed to purchase existing homes with public resources provided through the Housing Corporation's approved development programme, if this is the best and most cost-effective way of meeting the priority housing needs in an area.

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will change his policy of increasing the level of housing association rents; and if he will make a statement. [42252]

Mr. Curry: The housing White Paper, "Our Future Homes", noted the benefits of better targeting and higher outputs of social housing that have resulted from our policy of shifting the balance of subsidy away from rents and towards the individual in recent years. But the White Paper also acknowledged that a balance needs to be struck, and that we were reaching the limits of what could be achieved through higher rents.

In line with this policy, I announced on 26 September that the 1996–97 housing association grant rate would be maintained at this year's level of 58 per cent., to give tenants the benefit, in lower rents, of continuing reductions in development costs and greater cost efficiency by housing associations. The Housing Corporation estimates that rents on completed properties funded in 1996–97 will be £6 per week lower than rents being charged on new properties completed in this financial year, after allowing for inflation.

Specialist Advisers

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many (a) specialist advisers and (b) press or public relations officers are employed by his Department and what is the total annual salary bill for (a) and (b) above. [42314]

Sir Paul Beresford: I will write to the hon. Member.

European Court Decisions

Sir Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to the reply of the Attorney-General of 30 October, at column 12, relating to decisions of the European Court of Justice and the European Court of Human Rights, if he will list those European Court decisions relating to responsibilities of his Department over the past two years; and if he will further indicate the estimated annual cost to public funds of each decision. [41210]

Sir Paul Beresford [holding answer 2 November 1995]: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given by my hon. Friend the Minister of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, the Member for Boothferry (Mr. Davis), yesterday, columns 697.

SCOTLAND

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland which capital projects in the national health service in Scotland were funded outwith the private finance initiative in each of the most recent five years; and what was the cost of each project. [38807]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 1 November 1995]: I shall write to the hon. Member as soon as possible and arrange for a signed copy of the letter to be placed in the Library of the House.

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list by type of project (a) how many schemes have been approved to date under the private finance initiative, (b) what is the value of those schemes and (c) what public sector contribution will be required both initially and as revenue support during the lifetime of the schemes. [41746]

Mr. Kynoch [holding answer 7 November 1995]: To date, there have been 17 private finance initiative contracts either completed or for which contracts have been let. Sixteen of these are health projects, with an estimated total capital value of £43.4 million; the other is the Skye bridge, the capital value of which is £15.6 million, excluding the cost of approach roads towards which a public sector contribution of £8 million was made.

The revenue cost to the public sector client of a PFI project is dependent on the achievement of contract specifications, which may include the level of usage of the facility concerned. Estimates of the future revenue payments for each health project are not held centrally.

Lafferty Construction Ltd.

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list each contract awarded by his Department to Lafferty Construction Ltd. and any company known to be linked with it in each of the 10 years prior to its demise; what was the value of each contract; what investigations his Department has carried out to ensure that public funds were not misappropriated, misused or defrauded during such contracts; and if he will make a statement. [39291]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 1 November 1995]: I shall write to the hon. Member as soon as possible and arrange for a signed copy of the letter to be placed in the Library of the House.

Local Government Reform

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many circulars his Department has so far issued as a consequence of local government reform in Scotland [39402]

Mr. Kynoch [holding answer 26 October 1995]: A total of 56.

Beta-Interferon

Mr. Galbraith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make it his policy to restrict the use of beta-interferon to controlled trials; and if he will make a statement. [41509]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Currently there are no marketing authorisations—product licences—for beta-interferon in the United Kingdom but approval has been given for clinical trials to test the efficacy of beta-interferon in the treatment of multiple sclerosis. Details of the clinical trials and the licensing of beta-interferon are restricted by law in accordance with section 118 of the Medicines Act 1968.

In addition to the use of beta-interferon in controlled clinical trials, doctors who identify the need to treat a patient using this unlicensed medicine are able to do so on a "named-patient" basis in accordance with section 9(1) of the Medicines Act 1968 without the patient taking part in a clinical trial and without the doctor notifying the licensing authority. However, a doctor prescribing an unlicensed product does so entirely on his own responsibility. To stop such a use of beta-interferon would be a restriction on clinical freedom and prevent a doctor from offering his patient what in his clinical judgment is the most appropriate treatment for that patient.

Consultants

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many consultants there were in (a) urology, (b) ear, nose and throat, (c) paediatrics, (d) ophthalmology and (e) anaesthetics for the years (i) 1990 and (ii) 1994–95 in each hospital in Scotland. [41697]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The information is shown at Scotland level in the table. Data are not collected centrally on consultants' sessional commitments to hospitals; the finest organisational breakdown available centrally being by health board for 1990 and by NHS trust and directly managed units for 1994.

Medical Consultants in Selected Specialities in Scotland

Whole time equivalents as at 30 September

Anaesthetics	292.0	332.1

The figures include medical school staff who hold honorary NHS appointments.

Manufacturing Exports

Mr. Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is his latest estimate for the level of Scottish manufacturing exports; and if he will make a statement. [41665]

Mr. Kynoch: I shall write to the hon. Member as soon as possible and arrange for a signed copy of the letter to be placed in the Library of the House.

Specialists

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list for each health board area in Scotland the number of fully trained specialists in the NHS in (a) speech and language therapy, (b) physiotherapy and (c) chiropody for the years (i) 1990 and (ii) 1994–95. [41698]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The information requested is shown in the table.

Class Sizes

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what percentage and how many (a) primary school pupils and (b) high school pupils were in classes of over 30 in January in each local education authority and in total; and what was the actual and percentage change in numbers compared with January 1994 in each local education authority in total. [41666]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: The latest information available is set out in the table. Information from the September 1995 census is currently being processed.

Roads

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will publish in the Official Report representations which have been made or are about to be made to the European Commission about the future funding of trunk roads in Scotland. [41681]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 6 November 1995]: My right hon. Friend has made no such representations to date.

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list those trunk roads and motorway routes in Scotland which have not been submitted by Her Majesty's Government to the EU Commission as priority funding routes during 1995 to 1999. [41682]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 6 November 1995]: The maps of the proposed trans-European transport networks, which are the routes of strategic importance for traffic moving within and through the European Union states, include several road and rail routes in Scotland. Inclusion of the routes on these maps makes them eligible for support from the EU's TENs funds, at a rate of 10 per cent. of capital costs or 50 per cent. of feasibility studies.

The timing of any applications for funding which may be made in respect of trunk roads or motorways in Scotland would depend on the place of those schemes within the trunk road programme, because the funding of the schemes would continue to come predominantly from that programme. While the European Council has agreed on the total funds to be available for TENs between 1995 and 1999, the allocation between years and individual schemes will be determined annually. There are no schemes in Scotland with planned start dates which would have made it appropriate to submit an application up until now. We will keep this matter under review.

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if the EC Commission has announced that the A1 route from Edinburgh to Newcastle was omitted from a list of routes awaiting Euro-funds between 1995 and 1999; and if he will make a statement. [41683]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 6 November 1995]: My right hon. Friend is not aware of any such announcement.

Regional Selective Assistance

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is his latest forecast outturn for regional selective assistance offers and expenditure in Scotland in 1995–96 and its relationship to planned expenditure. [41782]

Mr. Kynoch [holding answer 6 November 1995]: The latest estimate of total value of regional selective assistance offers accepted by businesses in Scotland during the first seven months of 1995–96 is £36.3 million. The original voted expenditure for the year was £82.450 million including estimated receipts of £2 million—but—subject to parliamentary approval of a supplementary estimate, a further £3.425 million will be made available to meet anticipated additional demand in-year. Grant is paid in instalments against progress on projects, typically over a period of three to five years, so much of the grant offered in 1995–96 will not fall to be paid until later years.

Special Protection Areas

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list for each designated (a) special area of conservation, (b) special protection area in Scotland the (i) name of the site, (ii) local authority, (iii) size and (iv) species in question. [41852]

Mr. Kynoch: No special areas of conservation under the EC habitats directive have yet been designated. The information requested for special protection areas designated under the EC birds directive is shown in the table:

GP Fundholders

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what percentage of general practitioners in (a) Inverclyde, (b) Strathclyde and (c) Scotland as a whole are currently fundholders; and if he will make a statement. [41977]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 7 November 1995]: The information is provided on the basis of health board areas as set out in the table.

	Argyll and Clyde	Health Boards in Strathclyde[1]	Scotland
Percentage of GPs who are currently fundholders	13.5	16.9	20.4

[1] Ayrshire and Arran, Argyll and Clyde, Greater Glasgow, Lanarkshire.

Scott Inquiry

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) how many persons in his Department are on the public payroll or employed as consultants or advisers and work on a part-time or full-time basis in relation to the Scott inquiry; if he will list their names; and how much each is paid; [42046]

(2) how many persons have been authorised to have access to documents held by his Department relating to the Scott inquiry; and if he will list such persons. [42047]

Mr. Michael Forsyth [holding answer 7 November 1995]: I shall write to the hon. Member as soon as possible and arrange for a signed copy of the letter to be placed in the Library of the House.

NHS Trusts

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what proportion of the annual budget was spent by NHS trusts in (a) Strathclyde and (b) Scotland as a whole on management, administrative and clerical staff in the latest year for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement. [42000]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 7 November 1995]: The accounts of NHS trusts for 1994–95 provide information on the cost of management and administration staff and board members. Based on the information contained in these accounts, the proportion of total annual income spent on management and administrative staff and board members by NHS trusts in (a) Strathclyde was 7.23 per cent. and (b) NHS trusts in Scotland as a whole was 7.12 per cent.

Hospices

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is his policy concerning the funding of hospices; and if he will make a statement. [41975]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 7 November 1995]: The voluntary adult hospices in Scotland obtain public funding through contracts with health boards, designed to ensure that provision is sufficient to meet the needs of the population in each board's area. The arrangements are being kept under review.

Training

Mr. Rooney: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) what are the results of the youth training skillseekers leavers survey for the period April 1994 to December 1994, for each local enterprise company area and for Scotland as a whole, broken down to show the number and proportion of leavers who were (a) in full-time work with the same employer, (b) in full-time work with a different employer, (c) in part-time work, (d) on a full-time course at a college or training centre, (e) on another YT scheme, (f) doing something else, (g) who were unemployed and (h) who had obtained a vocational qualification; and what was (i) the number of questionnaires issued, (ii) the usable percentage response rate and (iii) the percentage of respondents who were early leavers and the reasons stated for leaving training early; and if he will make a statement; [41995]

(2) if he will set out, according to the results from the youth training/skillseekers leavers survey, the number and level of Scottish vocational qualifications or credits towards SVQs or other qualifications gained by people leaving training in the period April 1994 to December 1994, for Scotland as a whole, for all leavers and by ethnic group, disability and gender showing male, female and all; and if he will make a statement; [41921]

(3) if he will set out according to the results from the training for work leavers survey, the number and level of SVQs or credits towards SVQs or other qualifications gained by people leaving training for work in the period April 1994 to December 1994, for Scotland as a whole for all leavers and by ethnic group, disability and gender showing male, female and all; and if he will make a statement. [41923]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson [holding answer 7 November 1995]: In Scotland, Scottish Enterprise and Highlands and Islands Enterprise are responsible for training for work and youth training leavers follow-up surveys within their respective areas. I have asked the chairmen of the bodies to write to the hon. Member with the figures for each local enterprise company where requested and totals for their networks.

Guided Learning Hours

Mr. Rooney: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland, pursuant to his answer of 22 March, Official Report, column 269, what definition he intends to introduce to mirror the concept of guided learning hours appropriate to England and Wales. [41948]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson [holding answer 7 November 1995]: It is proposed to define a full-time further education student in Scotland as a person undertaking a course of study which is funded in whole or in part by the Secretary of State at a college of further education if it involves:

i. more than 16 hours per week of classroom or workshop-based programmed learning under the direct guidance of teaching staff; or > ii. 16 hours or less per week of classroom or workshop-based programmed learning under the direct guidance of teaching staff together with additional hours using structured learning packages supported by the teaching staff so that the combined total of hours exceeds 21 per week.

Students who do not satisfy this criteria will be regarded as part-time.

Nurses (Regrading)

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement about the regrading procedure in the nursing profession. [41974]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 7 November 1995]: I understand that on 31 October 1995 the central adjudicating panel had 71 nurse clinical grading appeals still outstanding.

Bus Fleets

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what estimate he has made of the average age of bus fleets operated by private bus companies in (a) Inverclyde, (b) Strathclyde regional area and (c) Scotland as a whole. [41976]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 7 November 1995]: The average age of public transport vehicles in Scotland is given in the Scottish Office publication "Scottish Transport Statistics" (1992–93) as 8.4 years (1992 figure). Information on a local/regional basis is not readily available.

NHS Budget

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what proportion of the NHS budget was spent on management, administrative and clerical staff in (a) 1989 and (b) the latest year for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement. [41999]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 7 November 1995]: Information on management, administrative and clerical staff expenditure is contained in the NHS accounts for 1989–90 and 1994–95, the latest year for which figures are available. These costs, expressed as a proportion of the total for the NHS, for (a) 1989–90 were 5.34 per cent. and for (b) 1994–95 were 6.86 per cent.

Health Board Budgets

Mr. Galbraith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list those health boards which have been required to provide additional funds to trusts in their areas due to financial difficulties in those trusts for the year 1994–95 and for the current year. [42137]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: I shall write to the hon. Member as soon as possible and arrange for a signed copy of the letter to be placed in the Library of the House.

Mr. Galbraith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the underspend for each health board (a) in absolute terms and (b) as a percentage of their total budget for each of the past three years. [42145]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The underspend for each health board (a) in absolute terms and (b) as a percentage of their total allocated budget for each of the past three financial years, is shown in the table. The figures are based on health board accounts and those for 1994–95 are provisional.

Miscarriages of Justice

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland, pursuant to his answer of 15 June, Official Report, columns 669–70, if he will list the names and convictions of each of the eight defendants whose cases were referred back to the Court of Appeal by the Secretary of State. [42206]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The information is as follows:

Name	Year of referral	Conviction
Alan James Pocock	1986	Possession of a Class A controlled drug with intent to supply Possession of a Class B controlled drug Attempt to defeat the ends of justice Bail offence
Ernest Barrie	1988	Theft, assault and armed robbery

Health Boards (Audited Accounts)

Mr. Galbraith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland, pursuant to his answer of 31 October, Official Report, column 197, when he expects to announce a final decision on the reallocation of health overspend; and if he will inform the hon. Member for Strathkelvin and Bearsden at that time. [42155]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The answer of 31 October dealt with health board underspends in 1994–95. The amount of such underspends to be reallocated to health boards is dependent upon parliamentary approval, which is normally given in late December. A final decision on the reallocation of health board underspend will be made then. I will inform the hon. Member for Strathkelvin and Bearsden at that time.

Foetal Alcohol Syndrome

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the incidence of foetal alcohol syndrome in each of the last five years for which figures are available. [42341]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: I shall write to the hon. Member as soon as possible and arrange for a signed copy of the letter to be placed in the Library of the House.

Severe Disability Allowance

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many claims there were for severe disability allowance on the grounds that the applicant suffered from persistent virus disease in each of the past three years; and how many of these claims were upheld. [42342]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: I have asked the Secretary of State for Social Security to write to the hon. Member and arrange for a signed copy of the letter to be placed in the House Library.

Specialist Advisers

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many (a) specialist advisers and (b) press or public relations officers are employed by his Department; and what is the total annual salary bill for (a) and (b) above. [42324]

Mr. Michael Forsyth: I shall write to the hon. Member and arrange for a signed copy of the letter to be placed in the Library of the House.

Companies (Innovation)

Mr. Bill Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he has any plans to improve delivery of support available to companies in Scotland to assist innovation. [42358]

Mr. Kynoch: Innovation is crucial to competitiveness. Support to companies for innovation should be delivered, wherever possible, at the local level both to ease access and to allow integration with support available in other aspects of business strategy. In Scotland, the regional enterprise grant for innovation, which is administered by the Scottish Office, will therefore close to applications on 31 December 1995. Scottish Enterprise and Highlands and Islands Enterprise will then assume responsibility for providing similar support to small companies and will do so throughout Scotland through their local enterprise companies.

In addition to the advantages of local delivery, more extensive support will be available. Whereas the regional enterprise grant for innovation has been available only in assisted areas and certain urban areas, support from the enterprise networks will be available across Scotland.

The Scottish Office will continue to administer the small firms merit award for research and technology and support for products under research schemes in Scotland.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Child Benefit

Mr. Rowlands: To ask the Secretary of State for Social security what estimates his Department has made of the cost of extending to families of students in local further full-time education at the age of 19 the right to child benefit. [37380]

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: None.

Medical Examinations

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people were in receipt of (a) invalidity benefit and (b) disability premium at the beginning of each of the last four financial years; how many people (i) in receipt of invalidity benefit and (ii) in receipt of disability premium were referred to a regional medical officer for a medical examination in each of the last four financial years; and how many were found to be (1) incapable of work, (2) fit for work within limits and (3) fit for work, for each Benefits Agency district office covering the postal districts of Doncaster and Mexborough. [39000]

Mr. Burt: I will write to the hon. Member shortly.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will give the cost of each medical examination carried out by his Department's medical officers on customers claiming sickness benefit for the first time, and the cost of each subsequent medical examination of customers in receipt of sickness benefit in his Benefits Agency's boundaries covering Doncaster and Mexborough for the year ended 31 March; how many (a) first-time and (b) other claimants' claims for sickness benefits were rejected on the basis of the examination medical officer's report; and if he will list the equivalent figures for the year ended 31 March 1994. [39473]

Mr. Burt: The information requested on the cost of each medical examination in Doncaster and Mexborough is not available. Information regarding the number of first time and other claimants' claims for sickness benefit in Doncaster and Mexborough which were rejected on the basis of the medical officer's report could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Family Credit

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will consider holding centrally records of the number of applications for family credit, by benefit agency district area; and if he will make a statement. [39025]

Mr. Roger Evans: I will write to the hon. Member shortly.

Social Security Spending

Mr. Hain: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what was social security spending as a percentage of gross domestic product in 1994; what was the figure in other European Union and OECD countries; and what was the EU and OECD average. [38826]

Mr. Burt: I will write to the hon. Member shortly.

Housing Market

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what discussions he has had with and what representations he has received from the Council of Mortgage Lenders as to how the proposed social security restrictions could affect the housing market. [38817]

Mr. Roger Evans: I will write to the hon. Member shortly.

Executive Agencies

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many times in each month of the current year he has met personally the heads of the agencies which report to him to discuss the work of those agencies. [39862]

Mr. Burt: My right hon. Friend has a regular monthly meeting with the chief executive of the Benefits Agency, who also attends a limited number of meetings to discuss particular concerns. He meets chief executives of other agencies within the Department as necessary when particular issues arise. The chief executive of the Child Support Agency has regular meetings with my hon. Friend the Member for Gedling (Mr. Mitchell), as does the chief executive of the Contributions Agency with my hon. Friend the Member for Hertfordshire, North (Mr. Heald). Other chief executives meet Ministers relatively infrequently. Much of the contact between Ministers and chief executives is in writing.

Ministerial Transport

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what has been the cost of the ministerial transport in each of the past five years; what allowance has been paid to Ministers who use their own vehicles; and what has been the cost in each of the past five years. [40739]

Mr. Burt: The information in relation to use of official vehicles is in the table.

Year	Expenditure £
1990–91	[1]226,118
1991–92	[1]286,391
1992–93	[1]274,758
1993–94	[1]290,241
1994–95	325,815

During the period 1990–91 to 1994–95 no allowances were paid to Ministers in respect of use of their own vehicles.

[1] Includes expenditure incurred by officials acting in direct support of Ministers.

Unemployment Benefit

Mr. Ian McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what was the total amount paid out in unemployment benefit, by region in May 1979 and in the most recent month for which figures are available, at 1995 prices. [40835]

Mr. Roger Evans: I have been asked to reply.

The table provides estimates for the most recent month for which figures are available. The information for May 1979 could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Child Support Agency

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when procedures will be agreed between his Department's finance division and Her Majesty's Treasury to enable the special payments section of the Child Support Agency to pay compensation to Wendy

Hardaker and Janet Daniel, on whose behalf applications for compensation were made in July 1994 and November 1994. [41144]

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: I refer the hon. Member to my reply of 7 November, Official Report, column 830, to the hon. Member for Broxbourne (Mrs. Roe).

The chief executive of the Child Support Agency, Miss Ann Chant, will write to the hon. Member regarding the cases of Wendy Hardaker and Janet Daniel.

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Secuirty what is his Department's definition of "absent parents not paying maintenance" as referred to in paragraph nine of the annexe of the memorandum CS7 submitted by the Child Support Agency to the Social Security Select Committee prior to the Committee hearing of 18 October. [41803]

Mr. Mitchell: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the chief executive, Miss Ann Chant. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Miss Ann Chant to Ms Liz Lynne, dated 7 November 1995:

I am replying to your question about the definition of "absent parents not paying maintenance".

This part of the Memorandum relates to an estimate of the proportion of cases taken on by the Agency since April 1994, in which the absent parent was not making regular payments of maintenance to the parent with care.

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to his answer of 25 October, Official Report, column 711, relating to benefit savings, if he will define which actions will start the four-week period or the eight-week period in cases where the parent with care ceases to claim income support. [41344]

Mr. Mitchell: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the chief executive, Miss Ann Chant. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Miss Ann Chant to Ms Liz Lynne, dated 7 November 1995:

I am replying to your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security about Child Support Agency benefit savings.

The action is defined as the issue of a form requiring completion, to either the parent with care or absent parent, or direct contact with either party by telephone or interview.

I hope this is helpful.

Ms Lynne: to ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many parents with care are regularly receiving maintenance through the Child Support Agency maintenance collection service. [41801]

Mr. Mitchell: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the chief executive, Miss Ann Chant. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Miss Ann Chant to Ms Liz Lynne, dated 7 November 1995:

I am replying to your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security about Child Support Agency assessments.

As at 15 September 1995, there are 135,974 parents with care who have received at least one maintenance payment in the last 13 weeks via the Agency collection service.

Income Support

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) how many people were in receipt of (a) income support or its predecessor benefit and (b) housing benefit for each year since 1979 by (i) regions and (ii) parliamentary constituency using the current boundaries; [41252]

(2) what amounts, at current prices, have been paid in (a) income support or its predecessor benefit and (b) housing benefit in each year since 1979 by (i) region and (ii) constituency. [41503]

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many appeals against the disallowance of income support under the habitual residence test were heard by the Sutton social security appeal tribunal in the most recent period of a month or more for which information can be obtained; how many succeeded; how many failed; and how many were adjourned or were withdrawn. [42362]

Mr. Roger Evans: I will write to the hon. Members shortly.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many income support claimants are currently receiving disability premium, with a breakdown of their means of qualification for each of his Department's benefits offices covering the Doncaster and Mexborough area in respect of (a) receipt of invalidity benefit, (b) submission of medical certificates only, (c) receipt of severe disablement allowance or (d) receipt of disability living allowance; and what were the figures for 12 months ago. [39484]

Mr. Evans: This is a matter for Mr. Peter Mathieson, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will reply to hon. Member with such information as is available.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. Martin Redmond, dated 7 November 1995:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about how many income support claimants are currently receiving disability premium, with a breakdown of their means of qualification for each of his Department's benefit offices covering the Doncaster and Mexborough area in respect of (a) receipt of invalidity benefit, (b) submission of medical certificates only, (c) receipt of severe disablement allowance or (d) receipt of disability living allowance; and what were the comparable figures for 12 months ago.

The full range of information requested is not available and could only be obtained at disproportionate cost.

Statistics are maintained for each Benefit Agency District on the number of income Support customers in receipt of a disability premium. The figure for the Doncaster district at the end of August 1994 was 3,204 and the end of August 1995 was 3,423. This district comprises of Doncaster West and Doncaster East offices. The figure for the Rother and Dearne district at the end of August 1994 was 4,704 and the end of August 1995 was 5,109. This district comprises of Rotherham South, Goldthorpe, Mexborough, Rotherham North and Wath-on-Dearne offices.

I hope you find this reply helpful.

Fraud

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many cases there have been by region of (a) fraud and (b) overpayment of benefit for each benefit since 1979; and what have been the total amounts involved in each. [41254]

Mr. Heald: I will write to the hon. Member shortly.

State Pensions

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what the current level of the state pension would be today if the break with earnings had not been made. [41677]

Mr. Denham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) if he will recalculate tables E1 and E3 of the latest national insurance fund long-term financial estimates on the basis that (a) the number of future entrants to the state earnings-related pension scheme are (i) half the assumed level, (ii) a quarter the assumed level, and (iii) there are no new entrants, (b) the number of people assumed to be contracted into the state earnings-related pension scheme next year is at half its assumed level and that future entrants to the scheme are (1) half the assumed level, (2) a quarter the assumed level, and (3) there are no new entrants and (c) the number of people assumed to be contracted into the state earnings-related pension scheme next year is at a quarter of its assumed level and that future entrants to the scheme are (x) half of the assumed level, (y) a quarter of the assumed level and (z) there are no new entrants; [42211]

(2) if he will list the assumptions used in tables E1, E2 and E4 of the latest national insurance fund long-term financial estimates for (a) the number of people assumed to be contracted-in to the state earnings-related pension scheme; (b) the number of people assumed to be contracted-out of the state earnings-related pension scheme into personal pension plans and (c) the number of people assumed to be contracted-out of the state earnings-related pension scheme who are in occupational schemes. [42194]

Mr. Heald: I will write to the hon. Members shortly.

Mr. Denham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make it his policy that the system of age-related rebates for the state earnings-related pension scheme will be actuarily neutral. [42197]

Mr. Heald: As required under the Pensions Schemes Act 1993, as amended by the Pensions Act 1995, I shall lay before Parliament in due course a report by the Government Actuary on the age-related rebates for people contracted out of the state earnings-related pension scheme through contracted-out money purchase schemes and appropriate personal pension schemes. The report will show the rebate levels which, in the Government Actuary's opinion, are required to reflect the cost of providing benefits of an actuarial value equivalent to that of the SERPS benefits forgone. This will be accompanied by a report of my own as to what I consider the rebates should be, and draft orders implementing those rebates. In order to come into effect in April 1997, the orders must be laid and made by the end of March 1996. In accordance with past practice, the Government Actuary issued on 16 August 1995 a consultative memorandum setting out the considerations on which his report to Parliament will be based.

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what the value of the retirement pension would be if it had been uprated in line with earnings or prices, whichever was higher, since 1980. [42306]

Mr. Heald: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to the hon. Member for Paisley, South (Mr. McMaster) on 6 November 1995, Official Report, columns 648–49.

Mr. Denham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list at current prices the annual sums paid to providers of personal pension plans under the Social Security Act 1986 in respect of (a) incentives, (b) rebates and (c) other payments for contracting out of the state earnings-related pension scheme, in each of the financial years since the Act has been in force. [42196]

Mr. Heald: The information is in the table.

Paid in year	Contracted-out rebate	2 per cent. incentive	1 per cent. addition	Total £ millions
1988–89	410	—	—	410
1989–90	2,280	924	—	3,204
1990–91	1,819	637	—	2,456
1991–92	1,951	671	—	2,622
1992–93	2,045	694	—	2,739
1993–94	2,134	718	—	2,852
1994–95	1,757	17	225	1,999

Note:
This table shows the expenditure, at 1995–96 prices, on contracted-out rebates and incentive and additional payments for appropriate personal pensions in each of the years for which published figures are available. Figures for 1994–95 are estimates.

Christmas Bonus

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make it his policy to increase the Christmas bonus to pensioners. [41676]

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans he has to increase the Christmas bonus to pensioners. [42227]

Mr. Heald: The Christmas bonus has remained at £10 since it was introduced in 1972. We have no plans to increase it.

War Pensions

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make it his policy to exclude war pensions when assessing either council tax allowance or rent allowances. [41607]

Mr. Heald: We have no plans to change the present arrangements.

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) how many claims lodged with the War Pensions Agency have lapsed in each of the past five years on the ground that the applicant has died while awaiting a decision; [41579]

(2) if he will state the average time lapse between claims being lodged with the War Pensions Agency and the decisions being issued. [41578]

Mr. Heald: These are matters for Mr. John Sheppard, the acting chief executive of the War Pensions Agency. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from John Sheppard to Mr. Brian Wilson, dated 7 November 1995:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Questions about claims to War Disablement Pension.

Information on the number of claims lapsed due to the applicant dying whilst awaiting a decision is not readily available and could only be obtained at disproportionate cost. However, I should point out that wherever possible, we continue with a claim after a person has died and try to make a decision on the available evidence. Any payments which become due are made to the next of kin.

The average times taken to deal with claims are shown in the attached appendix, along with details of the Secretary of State's targets and our achievement against these.

These standards have been achieved despite the phasing in, since April, of a new computer system and major restructuring of the organisation. This month sees the final stages of the introduction of these changes and the average time for clearance of claims should then see a gradual improvement during the remaining part of the year.

I hope you find this information useful.

Average time taken to deal with War Pension claims (April to September 1995)

	Working days
First claims to War Pension	151.70
Second and subsequent claims	126.27
Claims to War Widows Pension	37.72

Secretary of State's Targets

Achievement (April–September 1995)	Per cent.
First claims to War Pension
60 per cent. in 150 working days	61.45
95 per cent. in 310 working days	94.60
Second and subsequent claims
60 per cent. in 135 working days	66.19
95 per cent. in 195 working days	91.00
Claims to War Widows Pension
80 per cent. in 70 working days	90.66
95 per cent. in 145 working days	98.68

Visually Impaired People

Mr. Rowlands: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) what estimate he has made of the number of visually impaired people who were refused attendance allowances in 1993, 1994 and 1995 to the latest available date; [42090]

(2) what estimate he has made of the number of visually impaired people who were refused the middle rate care component of the disability living allowance in 1993, 1994 and 1995 to the latest available date. [42091]

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: The information requested is not available. A claim for disability living allowance or attendance allowance is a claim for the benefit and not for a particular component or rate. Statistics about the disabling condition of claimants refused benefit are not routinely collected.

Adjudication Officer Guidance

Mr. Rowlands: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans he has to publish the guidance issued to adjudication officers following the House of Lords ruling in favour of an appeal by Mr. Eric Mallinson in April 1994. [42104]

Mr. Roger Evans: The provision of guidance to adjudication officers and the publication of such guidance are matters for the chief adjudication officer. His office, Central Adjudication Services, issued letter HEO(AO)5/94 on 12 May 1994 giving guidance to adjudication officers on the effect of the House of Lords judgment in Mallinson. Letter HEO(AO)13/94 issued on 27 October 1994 gave some clarification of the earlier letter. I have made arrangements for copies of these letters to be provided to the hon. Member.

Asylum Seekers

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if sponsorship declarations are legally enforceable in respect of proposals to curb benefit entitlements to asylum seekers and sponsored immigrants; and if he will make a statement. [42140]

Mr. Roger Evans: I will write to the hon. Member shortly.

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when he expects the Social Security Advisory Committee to report on the proposed regulations referred to the committee on 11 October concerning the benefit entitlements to asylum seekers and other persons from abroad; if he will place a copy of the report in the Library; and if he will make a statement. [42147]

Mr. Evans: We expect to receive the Committee's report and recommendations during December. The report and our response to it will be incorporated in a Command Paper which will be published when the regulations are laid.

War Veterans

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what discussions he has had with the Secretary of State for Defence regarding paying British war veterans who fought in the Pacific during the second world war, along the lines of the burnt-out pension paid to Australians; and when he plans to make such payments. [42225]

Mr. Heald: I will write to the hon. Member shortly.

Social Fund

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what in 1985 prices was the value of (a) the single payment budget and (b) the community care grants budget in 1995–96. [42250]

Mr. Roger Evans: The value of single payments in 1985 was £308 million, while planned expenditure on community care grants in 1995–96, which in cash terms will be £97 million, expressed in 1985 prices represents £62 million.

The social fund offers much better value for money for the taxpayer than the old single payments scheme. Its discretionary nature ensures that payments are targeted on those most in need, while the recycling of loan repayments has enabled the fund to grow with each successive year; over £1.5 billion worth of loans have been made since the start of the fund for a net outlay of only £329 million.

Housing Benefit

Mr. Allason: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what increase in housing benefit has occurred in Torbay since 1990; and what were the figures for (a) Exeter, (b) Plymouth and (c) Honiton. [42221]

Mr. Roger Evans: I will write to the hon. Member shortly.

Benefit Tapers

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many families face a marginal deductions rate of 70 per cent. or higher on each £1 earned as a result of benefit tapers. [42183]

Mr. Roger Evans: I will write to the hon. Member shortly.

Disability Living Allowance

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many claims there were for (a) the mobility component and (b) the care component of disability living allowance on the grounds that the applicant suffered from persistent virus disease—myalgic encephalopathy—in each of the past three years; and how many of these claims were upheld. [42339]

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: I will write to the hon. Member shortly.

Mr. Clelland: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many blind or partially sighted people have won appeals on the basis of the Halliday/Fairey decision since 14 October 1994; and what is his estimate of the cost of paying the middle rate care component to those blind and partially sighted claimants who have won the entitlement on the basis of the Halliday/Fairey decision since 14 October 1994. [40893]

Mr. Andrew: The administration of disability living allowance is a matter for Peter Mathison, chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member with such information as is available.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. David Clelland, dated 7 November 1995:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about the number of blind/partially sighted people who have won appeals based on the Halliday/Fairey decision and the estimated cost of paying middle rate care component to those blind/partially sighted customers who have won entitlement on this basis since 14 October 1994.

To date there have been nine blind/partially sighted Disability Living Allowance customers who have been successful on appeal where the terms of this judgement have contributed to the award of benefit. These are subject to an appeal by the Secretary of State to the Social Security Commissioner.

Information as to the estimated additional cost of paying Disability Living Allowance middle rate (MR) care component for blind/partially sighted customers is not available.

I can however give some information which may be helpful. Detailed records have been kept from March 1995 to date on the number of cases in which the Halliday/Fairey decision has influenced the award of the MR care component. From March 27 October 1995, the Halliday/Fairey decision has influenced 364 awards. Of these, 269 have been awarded the MR care component as a result of the effects of the Halliday/Fairey decision. These cases have entitlement to the lower rate care component without the effect of the Halliday/Fairey decision and are, therefore, currently receiving this rate. This is because any entitlement due to the Halliday/Fairey decision is subject to suspension by the Secretary of State pending the outcome of the appeal to the House of Lords. The remaining 95 customers have been awarded the MR care component and, as this is entirely due to the Halliday/Fairey decision, they are not currently receiving payment pending the outcome of the appeal.

I hope you find this reply helpful.

Specialist Advisers

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many (a) specialist advisers and (b) press or public relations officers are employed by his Department; and what is the total annual salary bill for (a) and (b) above. [42325]

Mr. Burt: I will write to the hon. Member shortly.

Homelessness

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans he has to instruct his Department branch office to produce leaflets advising the homeless and those not eligible for income support and crisis loans of where to find soup kitchens and which provide the names of local charities where they may get assistance. [37259]

Mr. Roger Evans: The provision of leaflets on benefit related matters is a matter for Mr. Peter Mathison, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member with such information as is available.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Ms Joan Ruddock, dated 8 November 1995:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about what plans there are to instruct branch offices to produce leaflets advising the homeless and those not eligible for income support and crisis loans of where to find soup kitchens and which provide the names of local charities where they may get assistance.

The Benefits Agency has recently conducted a review of its service to homeless customers. A recommendation in the subsequent report was that 'a leaflet be produced for Advice Centres and Homeless customers clearly setting out the benefits available and the customer's responsibilities'.

We are currently co-ordinating action on the recommendations in the report. A leaflet is being developed for production by Benefits Agency Districts. This will include details of local services for homeless customers, including that of the type to which you refer.

We have set up three national conferences for Benefits Agency staff on Service Delivery to Homeless Customers, which will take place between November 20 and November 28 1995 and at which there will be input from the voluntary sector. The conferences will stress the importance of the leaflet initiative, amongst others, in providing a better service to homeless customers. As a follow up to the conferences, we plan to prepare 'a Good Practice Guide' which will be issued to all Districts.

I hope that you find this reply helpful.

Incapacity Benefit

Mr. Heppell: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what extra administrative work is and has been necessary to deal with the change from invalidity benefit and sickness benefit to incapacity benefit; and what is the total cost of this extra administrative work. [41961]

Mr. Burt: The administration of Social Security benefits is a matter for Mr. Peter Mathison, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member with such information as is available.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. John Heppell, dated 8 November 1995:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about what extra administrative work is and has been necessary to deal with the change from invalidity benefit and sickness benefit to incapacity benefit and what is the total cost of this extra administrative work.

The additional administrative work in the period April—March 1994/95 included:

1. Recruitment—of 700 Doctors and Medical Advisers for the Independent Tribunal Service;
2. Training—of 40,000 District Office (DO) staff, 1,400 Doctors and 600 Benefits Agency Medical Services (BAMS) administrative staff;
3. Enhancements to DO computer systems and procedures;
4. Development and implementation of a new computer system for BAMS;
5. Development of procedures, forms and information leaflets related to the introduction of the new medical test;
6. Development of procedures and enhancement of computer systems for the deduction of income tax from IB.

The cost of this work amounted to £42 million.

The additional administrative work in the period April–March 1995/96 includes:

1. The application of the new medical test;
2. The issue of the new Medical Questionnaire by DO staff;
3. Dealing with direct taxation of benefit. This is completely new to the BA and involves notifying the Inland Revenue of taxable benefit paid, tax deducted and providing the appropriate forms as necessary.

The cost of this additional work is expected to be £53 million for the financial year.

I hope you find this reply helpful.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Prosecution Court Files

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the recommended retention period for prosecution papers by the police. [40789]

Mr. Maclean: No advice has been issued centrally to police forces on the retention period for prosecution papers.

Parole

Mr. Robert McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the number of prisoners in England and Wales sentenced to terms of imprisonment of five or more years who in each year since 1989 were released with (a) under 50 per cent., (b) 50 per cent., (c) 50 per cent. to 60 per cent., (d) 60 per cent. to 69 per cent., (e) 70 per cent. to 79 per cent., (f) 80 per cent. to 89 per cent., (g) 90 per cent. to 99 per cent., (h) 100 per cent. of their term served and the percentages of the group serving five or more years who were released in each of those years within those per cent. stepped categories. [42141]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the temporary Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Brian Landers to Mr. Robert McCartney, dated 8 November 1995:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent Question asking if he will list the number of prisoners in England and Wales sentenced to terms of imprisonment of five or more years who in each year since 1989 were released with (a) under 50 per cent, (b) 50 per cent, (c) 50 per cent to 60 per cent, (d) 60 per cent to 69 per cent, (e) 70 per cent to 79 per cent, (f) 80 per cent to 89 per cent, (g) 90 per cent to 99 per cent, (h) 100 per cent of their term served and the percentages of the group serving five or more years who were released in each of those years within those per cent stepped categories.

The information could only be provided at disproportionate cost. The available information relates to time served between the date of sentence and the release date and excludes time served on remand. It is published in "Prison statistics, England and Wales" (tables 3.14, 4.13 and 5.12 of the 1993 edition, Cm 2893) a copy of which is in the Library of the House. Prisoners sentenced to five or more years since October 1992 are released under Part II of the Criminal Justice Act 1991. Release occurs after serving two thirds of sentence (or earlier if granted discretionary conditional release) subject to a minimum of half the sentence. For prisoners sentenced before October 1992, eligibility for consideration for early release occurred after serving one third of sentence, subject to a minimum of six months served following the date of sentence.

Firearms

Mr. Robert McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the number of firearm certificates at present issued in England and Wales, Scotland and Northern Ireland, and for what number of weapons, enumerating the type of category of weapon licensed. [42142]

Mr. Maclean: There were 140,200 firearm certificates in force on 31 December 1994 in England and Wales, covering an estimated 396,800 firearms. There were also 670,000 shotgun certificates in force on the same date, covering an estimated 1.33 million shotguns.

Figures for Scotland are a matter for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland and figures for Northern Ireland are a matter for my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland.

Prisoners (Transfers)

Mr. Robert McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prisoners in British prisons were sentenced in other countries and later transferred to the United Kingdom; from what countries; and if he will indicate whether they are subject to differing releases rules or prison regimes. [42143]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the temporary Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from David Scott to Mr. Robert McCartney, dated 8 November 1995:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent Question about the number of British prisoners sentenced in other countries and returned to prisons in the United Kingdom.

Details of such transfers are given in the attached table.

Prisoners transferred to the United Kingdom are subject to the same statutory and other provisions relating to release and prison regimes as prisoners sentenced within the receiving jurisdictions.

Mr. McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many foreign prisoners have been handed over to the prison authorities of other countries for continuation of their sentence; and if he will indicate to which countries and by what authority in each of the last five years. [42144]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the temporary Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letters from David Scott to Mr. Robert McCartney, dated 8 November 1995:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent Question about the number of foreign national prisoners transferred to other countries to continue their prison sentences, over the last five years.

Details of such transfers are given in the attached table.

These transfers have taken place under the provisions of the Repatriation of Prisoners Act 1984.

Animal Rights

Mr. Allason: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many complaints have been received by the Charity Commissioners concerning the RSPCA's role in respect of advocacy of animal rights. [42222]

Mr. Kirkhope: The Charity Commissioners received 14 complaints between February and September 1995 regarding advertising conducted by the RSPCA. One of these complaints was subsequently withdrawn.

Asylum Seekers

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department by what means he is informed of upheavals in any country of such significance as to require him to notify the Secretary of State for Social Security in order to enable nationals of that country seeking asylum in the United Kingdom to apply for benefit entitlement; what criteria he applies to determine such a significant upheaval; and if he will make a statement. [42224]

Mr. Kirkhope: Countries which generate asylum claims are monitored by the asylum division on the basis of reports from a variety of sources, including diplomatic posts, the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees and non-governmental organisations. The basis for making a declaration will be that a country has undergone such a fundamental change of circumstances that its nationals are not normally being required to return to it for the time being.

Leeds Prison

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has for additional funding for Leeds prison to redress the serious financial difficulties facing the prison in 1997–98. [42251]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the temporary Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from David Scott to Mr. John Battle, dated 8 November 1995:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent Question about Leeds prison.

Financial provision for the public sector will be announced in the Autumn Statement due at the end of this month, and budgets for individual prisons will be finalised during the early part of 1996 taking into account their strategic plans.

The Prison Service is committed to improved efficiency and unit cost reductions. A target of 8.6% was set out in the corporate plan published earlier this year and all prisons are expected to contribute to this.

European Court Decisions

Sir Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to the oral answer of the Attorney-General of 30 October, Official Report, column 12, relating to decisions of the European Court of Justice and the European Court of Human Rights, if he will list those European Court decisions relating to responsibilities of his Department over the past two years; and if he will further indicate the estimated annual cost to public funds of each decision. [41208]

Mr. Kirkhope [holding answer 2 November 1995]: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by my hon. Friend the Member for Boothferry (Mr. Davis) on 7 November, Official Report, columns 697–702.

Deregulation

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the rules and regulations he proposes to repeal or amend by means of a reference to the Deregulation Committee before the end of 1995; and if he will make a statement. [41544]

Mr. Howard [holding answer 6 November 1995]: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster on 6 November, Official Report, column 576.

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what regulations his Department proposes to repeal by the end of 1995; if he proposes to conduct a compliance cost assessment on each regulation repealed; and what is the estimated cost of undertaking a compliance cost assessment to assess the advantages or disadvantages of such a repeal. [41561]

Mr. Howard [holding answer 6 November 1995]: I hope on present plans that by the end of 1995 the Betting Gaming and Lotteries Act 1963 will be amended to relax the rules on greyhound racing. The cost savings likely to accrue to the greyhound industry have been estimated at £260,000 per annum. It is not possible to estimate the cost of making this assessment.

Scott Inquiry

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many persons have been authorised to have access to documents held by his Department relating to the Scott inquiry; and if he will list such persons. [42066]

Mr. Howard [holding answer 7 November 1995]: Ministers, former Ministers and officials have access to material relating to the inquiry as necessary in order to carry out their responsibilities.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many persons in his Department are on the public payroll or employed as consultants or advisers and work on a part-time or a full-time basis in relation to the Scott inquiry; if he will list their names; and how much each is paid. [42065]

Mr. Howard [holding answer 7 November 1995]: No staff in my Department are wholly employed on matters relating to the Scott inquiry. Four officials have been involved on an occasional basis within the Department. It is not the practice to name staff.

Employers (Illegal Immigrants)

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects to produce his consultation paper on proposals to fine employers who give jobs to illegal immigrants; what scale of fines he envisages; and if small and medium-sized enterprises will be exempt from his proposals. [42009]

Mr. Kirkhope [holding answer 7 November 1995]: We expect to issue a consultation paper outlining our proposals shortly.

Murders

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people have been prosecuted in each of the past 10 years for murder; and how many people have been prosecuted for murder since the IRA ceasefire of 31 August 1994. [42138]

Mr. Maclean: The information is given in the table.

Passports

Mr. Allason: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if British passports are required for United Kingdom citizens to travel to Germany. [42223]

Mr. Kirkhope: Passports are required by British citizens to travel to Germany.

Specialist Advisers

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) specialist advisers and (b) press or public relations officers are employed by his Department; and what is the total annual salary bill for (a) and (b) above. [42317]

Mr. Howard: I will write to the hon. Member.

Animal Experiments

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he has yet responded to the recommendations in the report of the Animal Procedures Committee on regulatory toxicity. [42365]

Mr. Kirkhope: My right hon. and learned Friend the Home Secretary has now responded to the recommendations made by the Animal Procedures Committee and has received the committee's reply. Copies of the exchanges have been placed in the Library.

Suspects' Rights

Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what has been the total expenditure of his Department on promoting the rights of suspects under the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 for each year since that Act came into force. [42099]

Mr. Maclean: The approximate expenditure incurred in distributing to police forces new and revised versions of the codes of practice required under sections 60 and 66 of the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 and notices to detained persons required under paragraph 3.2 of code C was as follows:

1985: £33,700
1986: £2,000
1988: £14,600
1991: £138,300
1995: £109,000

Electoral Register

Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what further consideration he has given to bringing forward proposals for a rolling electoral register since his working group produced its report on the matter; and if he will make a statement. [42101]

Mr. Kirkhope: The working group concluded that more work was needed before a decision could be taken on a rolling register; we have no plans to bring forward proposals.

Prisons (Drugs)

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what has been the number of drug finds in each of the prisons in England and Wales in each of the last 12 months. [41865]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the temporary Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. Tom Cox, dated 8 November 1995:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about the number of drug finds in each of the prisons in England and Wales in each of the last 12 months.

Information is readily available centrally for the period from January 1995 and is provided in the attached table, a copy of which will be placed in the Library of the House.

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what has been the number of prison inmates in each prison in England and Wales who have been put on report for being in possession of illegal drugs, in each month during the last 12 months. [41857]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the temporary Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. Tom Cox, dated 8 November 1995:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about the number of prison inmates in each prison in England and Wales who have been put on report for being in possession of illegal drugs.

The readily available information was published in 'Statistics of offences against prison discipline and punishments, England and Wales, 1994 (Cm 2934)', a copy of which is available in the Library of the House.

National Lottery

Mr. Hanson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the impact of the national lottery on the betting industry. [41244]

Mr. Kirkhope: We are monitoring off-course betting turnover in order to assess the impact of the national lottery on the horserace betting levy, and plan to report our findings to Parliament in the spring of 1996.

Parliamentary Constituencies

Mr. Thomason: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when residents in Frankley will be notified as to the parliamentary constituency in which they are to be included; and what is his timetable for laying the necessary order before the House. [40175]

Mr. Kirkhope: I will write to the hon. Member.

Parkhurst Gaol

Ms Janet Anderson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department on how many occasions the previous governor of Parkhurst gaol, John Marriott, requested the installation of electronic perimeter fences, high-intensity lighting, extra cameras and guard dogs; and what was the Prison Service's response on each occasion. [39605]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the temporary Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from A. J. Butler to Ms Janet Anderson, dated 8 November 1995:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent Question about the number of occasions Mr. John Marriott, former Governor of Parkhurst Prison, has requested the installation of electronic perimeter fences, high intensity lighting, extra cameras and guard dogs; and the Prison Service's response on each occasion.

Mr. Marriott made a number of requests for these security measures to be installed.

Geophones

Appendix F of the Learmont Inquiry report sets out a schedule which includes Mr. Marriott's documented requests for geophones to be installed at Parkhurst prison and the response to these.

High Intensity Lighting and Cameras

Perimeter CCTV and lighting was installed at Parkhurst in 1991 as the first phase of work to upgrade the perimeter security at Parkhurst. The Governor and Area Manager subsequently put forward bids to upgrade the CCTV and lighting as part of the annual process of compiling a capital building programme. These bids were considered in 1993/94 and 1994/95 but not included in the programme because there were other security schemes in other areas of the Prison Service already programmed which were considered to be of a higher priority. Following a special review of perimeter security at Parkhurst in April 1994 the Governor, in conjunction with the Area Manager, took forward the planning for the now funded improvements to perimeter security identified in that review, including geophones. Following the escape in January 1995 adjustments and additions were made to the perimeter security cameras and lighting and this was followed by the replacement of the camera system which was completed by the end of June 1995.

Dogs and Dog Handlers

The Governor made a bid in 1990 for additional dogs.

The Governor, through the Area Manager, made a bid in April 1992 and in September, identified the need for two dogs and handlers to work at Parkhurst until 31 March 1993. In October 1992, the Governor asked that these be retained after this date.

The Governor and Area Manager made a bid in 1993/94 for additional dogs and dog handlers, but there was insufficient funding for this increase. They renewed the bid for 1994/95.

No money was directly allocated as the result of the above bids. It was acknowledged that any increase in the number of dogs and handlers would have to be made from within the existing budget. The governor sought six additional dog handlers and dogs in November 1994. He offered to fund two himself by diverting funds from elsewhere and bid for additional funding for the remaining four. It was agreed to take this forward as a prioritised bid for that year.

Criminal Injuries Compensation Scheme

Mr. David Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether structured settlements will be offered under the current criminal injuries compensation scheme. [42220]

Mr. Maclean: Structured settlements can be a highly advantageous way of paying compensation to victims in higher value cases. It affords them the option of receiving their award, not as a lump sum, but in the form of a stream of periodic payments under an annuity. These payments will be tax free and can be index linked, thereby providing guaranteed payments for life or other specified period.

Under provisions in the Criminal Injuries Compensation Bill, this facility will be available to claimants under the new, enhanced tariff scheme to be established under the Bill's powers. The Bill also provides for the facility to be extended to claimants under the present—1990—scheme although, as previously announced on 10 July 1995, Official Report, column 389, and on 17 October 1995, Official Report, House of Lords, column 723, that will first require a complementary amendment to the 1990 scheme to allow payment of compensation by the purchase of annuities.

Once the Criminal Injuries Compensation Bill receives Royal Assent, I will accordingly amend the 1990 scheme by making some small alterations to paragraph 12, and by the insertion of new paragraphs 12A and 29(g). The revised paragraph 12 and the new paragraph will read as follows:

> "12. Subject to the other provisions of this Scheme, compensation will be assessed on the basis of common law damages and will normally take the form of a lump sum payment, although the Board may make alternative arrangements in accordance with paragraph 9 above or with paragraph 12A below. More than one payment may be made where an applicant's eligibility for compensation has been established but a final award cannot be calculated in the first instance—for example where only a provisional medical assessment can be given. In a case in which an interim award has been made, the Board may decide to make a reduced award, increase any reduction already made or refuse to make any further payment at any stage before receiving notification of acceptance of a final award. Once an award has been paid to an applicant paragraph 12A does not apply".
>
> "12A. Where prior agreement is reached between the Board and the applicant, an award may consist in whole or in part of an annuity or annuities, purchased for the benefit of the applicant or to be held on trust for his benefit. Once that agreement is reached, the Board will take the instructions of the applicant as to which annuity or annuities should be purchased. Any expenses incurred will be met from the award".
>
> "29(g). Paragraph 12A of this Scheme will apply additionally to applications otherwise falling to be considered under the 1969 or 1979 Schemes".

These changes will be made when the Criminal Injuries Compensation Bill receive Royal Assent.

INDEX TO THE

PARLIAMENTARY DEBATES

OFFICIAL REPORT

SIXTH SERIES SESSION 1994–95 VOLUME 265

30th October—8th November 1995

SCOPE OF THE INDEX, ARRANGEMENT AND ABBREVIATIONS

This index is derived from the House of Commons Library's Parliamentary On-Line Information System (POLIS), and the subject terms used are based on those used in POLIS. There are often changes in column numbering, etc., between the daily part or weekly Hansard (which simply collects together the daily parts without revision) and the bound volume. The index for the bound volume is revised to take account of these changes and cannot therefore, be used in connection with the daily part or weekly Hansard. For these versions use the Fortnightly Index.

Scope and arrangement of the Index

Oral and Written Parliamentary Questions are indexed under subject headings and the names of Members asking and Ministers replying to them. Questions are not listed under the names of Departments replying. Departmental listings can be arrived at indirectly by looking under the names of the Minister(s) of that Department. There are, however, the headings 'Northern Ireland', 'Scotland', and 'Wales' under which one can find not only most Questions answered by the Northern Ireland Office, Scottish Office, Welsh Office but also Questions about these areas of the United Kingdom which are answered by other Departments. Ministerial statements are indexed under subject headings, under 'Ministerial statements' and the names of Ministers making them and Members speaking on them. General debates are indexed under broad subject headings and under the names of all Members and Ministers taking part. Debates on legislation (Bills, Orders, Regulations etc.) are indexed under the name of the Bill, Statutory Instruments etc, under subject headings and under the names of those taking part.

Rulings and Statements by Speaker and deputies are brought together under the heading 'Speaker's rulings and statements'.

Other contributions by Speaker and deputies appear under the heading Speaker.

Opposition Day Debates and Estimates Day Debates and Standing Order No. 10 applications are listed under those respective headings and under subject headings too.

The date of each item except Parliamentary Questions is inserted immediately before the reference.

Members' names are given in the form by which they prefer to be known and are printed in bold italics. Under their names, entries are arranged under one of the two headings Debates, etc. (to include interventions on statements, points of order and so on) or Questions.

Abbreviations

Bills 1R = first reading, 2R = second reading, Money res = money resolution, Comm = Committee stage, Rep = Report stage, 3R = third reading, amendt/amendts = amendment/amendments, * = matter taken formally, without debate.

Column numbers followed by the letter W refer to Written Questions. These appear at the end of each daily part or volume with their own sequence of column numbers printed in italics.
